Boll Weevils Becoming Serious

Reports received from many parts of the State indicate boll weevils are quite numerous in cotton fields at the present time, W. A. Ruffin, entomologist of the Alabama Extension Service, said today. The presence of these insects at this season the year, along with the rainy or cloudy weather, indicates that farmers may expect to have their cotton crop seriously reduced by the boll weevil this summer.

Ruffin said pre-square poisoning is of some value in controlling boll weevils if they are numerous on young cotton but is no insurance against boll weevil damage later in the season. In pre-square mopping, calcium arsenate buds of the cotton plants. The mixture used consists of one pound calcium arsenate, one gallon of water, and one gallon of syrup thoroughly mixed together. In making the poison mixture, the calcium arsenate should be stirred into a small amount of water. The remaining part of the water and the syrup should then be added. The sweet poison should be applied with a small cloth mop on the end of a stick two to three feet long.

"The most difficult problem in controlling the boll weevil is that of knowing when to dust and when not to dust the cotton," he said. "In general it is profitable to dust cotton only when the expected yield is one-half bale or more per acre."

The only way to know whether or not boll weevils are numerous enough to warrant dusting is to make infestation counts of the squares. In making these counts 100 squares are examined in each of several places in a field. Stalks of cotton are selected at random and each square is examined for punctures before counting is begun on a new one. Squares on the ground are not counted. The number of punctured squares among 100 examined is the per cent infestation at a given place.

Infestation counts are begun as soon as the cotton is squaring freely and are made at weekly intervals until the average per cent infestation in a field reaches 10 per cent or above. Three applications of calcium arsenate are then made at intervals of four to six days.

Poplar Springs, Coosa County, Homecoming Day Second Sunday In July; Is Big Affair

By John A. Darden, Goodwater, Ala., General Chairman

This method is taken through your good county paper to extend to the people of Chilton County, and especially to the hundreds of former Coosians, and their children, a hearty invitation to attend the Twentieth Annual Homecoming Day Celebration to be held at Poplar Springs Baptist Church, on the Second Sunday in July. This historic Church is located five miles north of Rockford, just west of the Turnpike Highway.

A great day is in prospect for all who attend, and the largest crowd ever assembled there is expected. Last year more than five thousand people were estimated to have attended.

Some of the features on the day's program include singing in the Christian Harmony from nine to ten o'clock, the new books in the afternoon; decoration of all graves, and those who have loved ones buried there are requested to bring flowers; an address by Senator Lister Hill at ten o'clock. Sermon at 1:00 o'clock by the Rev. W. A. Darden, of Boise City, Oklahoma, who was ordained at this church; welcoming and introducing visitors, memorial songs and short talks, quartet singing band concert at the noon hour, and several planes from Maxwell Field is expected at that hour. The entire day will be filled with good things and a fine fellowship exemplified.

Arrangements have been made for the installation of loud speakers so the program may be heard by all on the outside of the Church. Two highway patrolmen will be on hand to direct traffic and perfect order will be maintained by Sheriff Matthews and his deputies, if such becomes necessary.

We who live away from Poplar Springs, to help feed the multitude that will be there, should take a well filled basket for lunch, to help the community at the lunch hour, if convenient to take it.

Come early and stay late, have a good time all day. We will be looking for you.

Alabama Farmers Need This Kind Of Help Too

THE more prosperous farming sections of the United States are those where there is a nearer balance between industry and agriculture than exists in Alabama. The reason for this is that in those sections there are fewer persons growing things in proportion to the number who are consuming them.

As the years go by, and more and more industries establish plants in Alabama as the result of the efforts of our New Industries Division, there are more and more consumers of the products of Alabama farms, and an increasing number of Alabama farmers gain a better market for their produce.

Agricultural development is dependent on business development. Just as the farmer becomes discouraged when he cannot get a fair profit for his produce, so does business become discouraged when unreasonable obstacles are placed in its path, and slows down or discontinues expansion.

Although business is discouraged today, our New Industries Division is continuing its work of placing before industrialists the advantages of plant location in Alabama, because on another day the sun may be shining more brightly, and when that day comes, we want them to look favorably toward Alabama.

ALABAMA POWER COMPANY
A Private Agency for the Public Good

"We farmers need more customers for our produce we raise. In order to have more consumers we need more industries. The cheap and abundant power of Alabama Power Company has already brought more industries to our State and will bring more in years to come."
—O. K. Lanier, Star Route, Wetumpka, Ala.

"I can easily see many varied industries located in the different sections of the State supplied by the lines of the Alabama Power Company. This means an influx of people and a greater consumption of products of the farm. . . . I can see industry going forward with rapid strides and our State taking its place as a great manufacturing center of the South."
—Mrs. E. G. Smith, Lineville, Ala.

"Seeing as I do in my work with the Alabama State Employment, the thousands of unemployed, I realize very forcefully the great need we have in Alabama for more small industrial plants, and no force in Alabama is helping more to bring them here than the Alabama Power Company."
—B. E. Samuels, Talladega, Ala.

"I see beyond my electric bill how Alabama Power Company is instrumental in keeping Alabama from being robbed of her fine intelligent men and women, by taking the leading part in helping develop Alabama industrially and agriculturally, thus preventing our citizens from having to go to other states to find jobs."
—Mrs. T. G. Anthony, Route 1, Gadsden, Ala.

LAY DAM

"This development is designated Lay Dam, by the Board of Directors of Alabama Power Company, in recognition of the contribution of William Patrick Lay to the Progress and Development of Alabama. Born and reared on the banks of the Coosa River, he early foresaw the possibilities of its water power, the development of which he undertook as founder and first President of Alabama Power Company. Through his vision and perseverance this, the first hydro-electric plant of this company, was completed in 1914.

A table loaded with good things to eat was spread in the usual Alabama Power Company style, following the ceremonies. Guests were invited to tour the interior of the plant, and see the recent work that has been underway to strengthen and improve the Dam.

JEWISH FARM COLONY FOR AUTAUGA COUNTY

A suggestion that a farm colony be established in Autauga County for Jewish refugees from Europe was advanced Wednesday by E. H. Pearson, prominent merchant and manufacturer.

Pearson, in a letter to The Montgomery Advertiser, suggested the refugees could help restore unused lands, a problem which he said had been faced for 30 years since the lands became unfit for cotton or timber.

"I don't see why it wouldn't be a good thing," said Probate Judge J. F. Posey, at Prattville, regarding Pearson's proposal.

"We have a lot of land the refugees could use, I believe they might put practical business methods into farming."

MORAL ECHOES

D. W. Haskew

My, my. How times do change. If George III had known in his day that George VII would place a wreath on the tomb of George Washington, he would have had two fits backward. And yet, this is what took place during the recent visit of the King and Queen to Washington. No sooner had the King been closeted with Mr. Roosevelt than he expressed this desire: "Mr. Roosevelt, I want to go to Mount Vernon and place a wreath of flowers on the tomb of George Washngton." He was carried there and the iron gate to the tomb was unlocked and alone the King walked to the grave and placed his offering on the tomb of the Father of our country. One hundred and fifty years before that act, the Thirteen Colonies had driven the Red Coats off the shores of the new country and the Colonies were free. Since that time the two great nations have been cemented in brotherhood and today they stand arm in arm to uplift and help all the races.

Some writer who knows more than I know has related this story of Woodrow Wilson. He said that when Mr. Wilson arrived in the heavenly city, that he was met by Moses who expressed to him his deep regret over why the nations of the world had treated his "Fourteen Points." For a moment Mr. Wilson bowed his head in embarrassment, but then on second thought he stood erect and faced Moses with this statement: "For the matter of that, Mr. Moses, you ought to go back to the earth and see what they have done with your Ten Commandments." Then it was time for Moses to hang his head. It is a burning shame the way the world treats such men as Moses and Mr. Wilson. They had great ideals but we have made a mess of their standards for nations and individuals.

A Bullock County negro was noted for being the first farmer to bring ribbon cane syrup to town in the fall of the year. He always sold his product as pure cane syrup, but a certain white man suspicioned that the syrup was not so pure. He put this honest to goodness question to the old darkey: "Sam, you have been telling me this syrup was pure ribbon cane syrup, now come clean and tell me the truth." Sam scratched his head and replied: "Boss, I will tell you the truth, before I attended the revival last week that was pure cane syrup, but since I attended dat meeting I mus tell you it am sorghum and sugar cane mixed." A good revival would change the complexion of a lot of things if it would make farmer and merchant tell the truth.

I was on a boat with a friend who was just a common workman. His face fairly shined with joy as he carried me from place to place on the ship. He was pointing out what he had done in the construction of that boat. Finally he ran his thumbs under his suspenders and looked at me with an expression that showed happiness over a task well done and he said: "Parson, it is something to have put rivets and cabins into a boat like this." Do you feel that way about the work that you are doing. It is something to mowe a yard like that, to build a fence like that, to plow a field like that, to erect a house like that, build a road like that, to run an engine like that, to saw lumber like that. It is putting the rivets in things that count and we should be proud of our part.

One Sunday morning a Sunday school teacher who was not living as she should and who was as often absent as she was present, saw a tough little lad in her class. She proceeded to give him a warning lecture on the way he was living. She concluded her lecture by asking: "Now, will you be good?" The boy knew her well. He knew what a terror she was at home, how selfish she was in society, how haughty she was in her manners and how keen her tongue was when she spoke and he replied promptly: "Hell, no." A more polite child would not have used that expression, but he would have felt the same way if he had been lectured by one who was not living up to the standard advocated. The life counts more than the language.

Crowds Increasing At Bible Lyceum

Increased crowds seem to be the order of the day at the Bible Lyceum tent. It was impossible to seat the hundreds who came Sunday night to hear Evangelist Mitchell R. Garrett present the topic, "Who Changed the Sabbath from Saturday to Sunday-"

In spite of the fact that a truck load of extra seats were obtained to care for the overflow crowd, scores were forced to stand or sit in cars as Mr. Garrett traced through the Scriptures the thrilling account of how first it was prophesied in the Bible that Rome would think to make the change, and then from her own works and church papers where she not only admits but boasts of the fact.

More extra seats will be secured for the large crowd expected this coming Sunday night as Mr. Garrett speaks on the subject, "Who Is The 666 Man, And What Is The Mark of The Beast?" It is stated that near a thousand are expected to hear this topic discussed.

Local musical talent occupied a large portion of the song service Sunday night. Many numbers by male and mixed quartettes, also some solos were greatly enjoyed by all The congregation lead by C. F. Graves joined heartily in singing old familiar songs.

Mr. Garrett has stated that he will speak on the following subjects beginning tonight with "One Word That Will Fill Hell." Friday night, "Why Do We Have Trials, Troubles, and Tribulation?" No meeting Saturday night. Sunday night, "Who Is The 666 Man, and What Is the Mark of the Beast?" The evangelistic party has extended to all a most cordial welcome to each of these services.

Representative Pitts and Senator Harrison were present at this mass meeting which was held at the Courthouse and expressed their desire to abide by the wishes of the people. We Observe

By BONNIE HAND

They Demand

Can you imagine WPA workers going on a strike? That's exactly what happened in the northern states according to news dispatches. We wonder if you have taken time to figure out what takes place when a WPA worker strikes. He's drawing money from the treasury of the United States, on a job created by the Government to prevent him from starving, and he balks because he thinks he is entitled to less work and more pay. An example of what happens is this: You feed a hungry man who comes to your back door asking for a hand-out. He is healthy and well able to work, but is unfortunate in that he can find no employment. Feeling that you will make the unfortunate fellow feel better by offering him a small job about the house, such as mowing the lawn—anything to make him feel that he is in a way earning that hand-out. When he refuses because he thinks you have suggested too big a job, is what happens when a WPA worker goes on a strike. You are left dumfounded and quite disgusted—and we'll bet Uncle Sam is inclined to feel the same way in this case. You've heard the expression "Biting the hand that feeds you."

Going To Town—

"Chilco" is going to town and how! Have you seen one of the half-bushel hampers filled with Chilton County peaches ready for the markets. If you haven't, you've missed a sight that will make you feel proud of the way our farmers are going forward in this industry. That attractive label bearing the word "Chilco Brand," the picture of a luscious peach, spells a degree of prosperity for our County. "Chilco" will become widely known as a brand of quality, and also signify that farmers here are not to be left behind when it comes to being self-sustaining. Atticus Mullin was not talking through his hat when he stated that Chilton County had set an example. Paging Baldwin County!

Cloud-Hopping—

Charlie Wade, one of Clanton's few bird-men, and Cecil Ramsey, manager of the local A&P Grocery, have been hopping the clouds recently, when they made a trip to Huntsville in Charles' ship Leaving Clanton Sunday morning at 8 30, they arrived in Huntsville at 9:35. Following lunch they hopped off from Huntsville at 1:50 and eased to earth at 3:00 o'clock in the afternoon at Gragg Field. Despite two heavy rains encountered the boys reported a pleasant trip. All that goes up is bound to come down—and you stand a good chance of doing so safely when you're flying with Charles Wade. How about that complimentary hop, my friend?

From Our Representative—

Ran into Representative Percy Pitts at the Courthouse Tuesday night just after enough votes were counted to show that the voters favored all three of the proposed local Bills, and Mr. Pitts asked us to tell the people of Chilton that he will immediately begin work of drawing up the bills, with the intention of having them advertised in next week's issue of one of the County papers. "The people have spoken," Mr. Pitts stated, "and I intend to see that their wishes are carried out."

Not Yet—

The Clanton cemetery hasn't been cleaned off yet—and we're growing older. The Union-Banner says there'd be no objection if the City undertook this job, and maybe not. We'll bet it would be a job well done, if they did.

And Yet—

Didn't the City release a statement some time ago that it was planning to purchase a large tract of land for a new cemetery? Maybe the citizens didn't show enough enthusiasm over the idea. We think it's a good one.

We'll Accept—

We're serving notice on Mr. Harmon Headley of Route six, that that invitation he extended us to visit his peach orchard will not be turned down. We're anxious just to walk on the land that produces peaches weighing one pound each. Of course that won't be all we'll do while in that orchard.

Associational S. S. Meeting Held Sunday

The Associational Sunday School meeting was held last Sunday afternoon at Providence Baptist Church, north of Jemison. There were sixty-one present, with a representation of seven churches. We had a very interesting program and one that was very helpful. Rev. W. E. Robinson talked to us about "An Enlargement Campaign And How To Conduct It," and Rev. Paul Oden spoke to us about "The Need For Trained Teachers."

During the week of August 13th, a simultaneous Associational Teacher Training Campaign will be conducted in this Association. Some of the State workers will be with us helping do the work. Those churches desiring a course taught in your church, please get in touch with Mr. J. D. Griffin, Associational Superintendent, at Thorsby, Alabama. We would like to have a course taught in every Church of the Association, if it is possible.

Our next meeting will be held the first Sunday in August at Pilgrim's Rest. We urge that you attend this meeting.

MONROE HAYES SIGNS WITH GREENVILLE CLUB IN LEAGUE

The Clanton-Maplesville Baseball team lost one of its most valuable players last week when Monroe Hayes, who played with the Auburn team while attending college where he was considered one of the best players, on the team, signed with the Greenville Club in the Alabama-Florida League of professional baseball.

The first game Hayes played in after joining up with the Greenville Club saw him get three hits, that made the fans sit up and take notice of this handsome Maplesville youth. Friends and persons who know baseball are predicting a bright future for this lad. He is playing left field position, although he has played first base successfully for the past several seasons.

Horace Wallace, also of Maplesville, has signed with Dothan in the same league. He is also playing left field position. Wallace has starred in many games, and the future for him in professional baseball is also bright.

BIBLE LYCEUM IS DRAWING RECORD CROWDS

SEVEN TERRIBLE PLAGUES SOON TO FALL SAYS EVANGELIST GARRETT

"Seven Terrible Plagues Soon To Fall On Alabama—Then What?" is the announced subject of Evangelist Mitchell R. Garrett at the Bible Lyceum Sunday night.

In making his announcements, Mr. Garrett said, "On account of the unusual nature of these meetings, and especially this thought-provoking subject from the book of Revelation, it will be necessary to come early in order to be assured of a good seat. Plagues are already in the land, but the seven last scourges are the last that will fall before the end of the world.

"Everybody in Chilton County should hear this startling and gripping message Sunday night."

More than 1,000 were present last Sunday night. The Lyceum party is making preparatons to comfortably seat from 1,000 to 1,200 this Sunday night. The musical program under the direction of Prof. Graves, with his medley of quartetts and illustrated songs, will begin promptly at 7:30.

CLANTON YOUTH RECEIVES MEDAL AT FORT McCLELLAN

A news release from Fort McClellan states that Enos Leo Deason, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Deason of Clanton, is to receive the highest medal for firing the 45 automatic pistol at the Citizens Military Training Camp that he is attending this year.

Trainee Deason fired the highest score in the Batallion. His score being 92½ per cent perfect. This was Deason's first year to fire the pistol, and he seems to be a good pistol shot with a score like that.

In 1937 Deason was selected for one of the twelve riflemen to go to Camp Perry, Ohio, to compete in the National Rifle matches. All boys that participated in the rifle matches won medals side by side with the world's best shots.

Durng his four years of attending Ft. McClellan Camps, Leo has shown outstanding ability as a leader among his fellow trainees. He is well known and well liked by all. Deason shows great promise in becoming one of our outstanding Reserve Officers as a result of his splendid record at our C. M.T.C. Camps.

Clanton Junior G. A. Member Writes Interesting Article On Unity Chilton Mission Institute Here

By Jean Donovan

The Mission Study Institute closed Friday after a very successful three days association at the Clanton Baptist Church.

The attendance for the three days was exceedingly large. A highlight in the messages brought during this association was the very touching and appealing address by Dr. Honorio Espinoza, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Santiago, Chile. Dr. Espinoza is in this country studying at the Baptist Seminary at Louisville, Kentucky, for one year before returning to his beloved land of Chile.

Among the many wonderful speakers present at our Church during the Institute was Miss Martha Franks, who is at home of furlough from China. Her speech was based on China of today and yesterday. An interesting statement that Miss Franks made during her message was that if every woman in the United States would stop buying silk hose the war between the Japanese and Chinese would be ended in three months. She made us realize more and more how much the war-torn, suffering Chinese need our aid.

Other touching and inspirational discussons were made by Miss Hannah Plowden, Miss Ruth Gardner, Miss

FARMER VICTIM OF NEIGHBOR'S SHOTGUN

VIRGIL HEADLEY PLEADS SELF DEFENSE IN MURDER OF LORENZA MIMS LAST FRIDAY

Lorenza D. Mims, age 50, well known farmer of the Pleasant Grove community, west of Clanton, is dead and Virgil Headley, his neighbor, is in the Chilton County jail here charged with murder in the shotgun killing of Mims last Friday afternoon at about 1:30.

Coroner J. Mell Martin who made the investigation, stated that Mims died, apparently instantly when a charge from a 12-guage single-barrell shotgun struck him in the left shoulder, just above the heart. The incident occurred last Friday afternoon about 1:30 at Mims home in the Pleasant Grove community.

Sheriff W. G. Culp stated that Headley came to town last Friday afternoon and told him that he had shot and killed Mims and that he wanted he and Coroner Martin to make an investigation, claiming that he shot in self defense. The three men returned to the scene of the killing, where Sheriff Culp stated they found the house padlocked. Headley told the investigators that he had padlocked the house immediately following the shooting to prevent anyone entering, and gave orders to neighbors that no one was to go near the house until he returned.

On entering the house, Coroner Mar- stated they found Mims lying on the floor in a pool of blood and a 12-guage shotgun in his hands. Bloodstains on a nearby table gave evidence that Mims

SOLICITOR'S ELECTION BILL PASSES 3 TO 1

Qualified voters of this county went to the polls last Tuesday and placed their stamp of approval on all three proposed Local Bills that will vitally affect two branches of the County government and place the supervision of the office of the County Agent back under the complete control of the Court of County Commissioners

Not so in the case of the State Amendments to the Constitution, according to the unofficial count. Wednesday morning unofficial returns showed two of the five Amendments in the lead. These were Amendments One and two, by small majorities. Amendments Three, Four and Five appeared defeated by small majorities. State wide approval of all five of them appears certain by a large majority.

County Local Bill Number One, which would place the control of the County Agent's office back under the supervision of the County Commissioners, passed by a majority of over two to 1, unofficial returns show. This bill was in the form of a referendum repealing an act requiring the County to appropriate $4,300 per year for this office, in cooperation with the State Extension Service. Proponents of this bill calling for repeal of the Act which was passed by the 1936 Legislature contend that it takes the supervision of the office out of the hands of the County Commissoners.

There were 1005 votes for repeal of this Act.

There were 479 votes cast against repeal of this Act.

The Bill calling for the election of the County Solicitor by popular vote instead of being appointed by the Circuit Solicitor as is now the case was approved by a majority of over three to 1.

There were 1115 votes cast for this Bill.

There were 343 votes cast against this Bill.

Local Bill calling for the establishing of an Inferior Count in the County was approved by an almost 2 to 1 majority.. This Bill, which will create an office of Judge over the court, has as its purpose the relief of the congested condition of the Circuit Court docket, by taking care of minor offenses.

947 votes were cast for this Bill.

494 were cast against the Bill.

All of these returns are unofficial, and the official count will be carried next week.

"Alabama is losing much of its leadership to other states, while our own natural resources are 90 per cent undeveloped."—Dr. A. H. Collins.

AS OTHERS SEE US

A few days ago Atticus Mullin, Alabama's most versatile columnist, writing in the Montgomery Advertiser, told interestingly of a visit to Clanton, and the Chilco cooperative farm commodities preparation for market plant. The article so impressed the Advertiser editor that he hands us the following "bouquet:"

Chilton County's Example

Atticus Mullin's story in The Advertiser yesterday about the fruit and truck cooperatives in Chilton County made one's mouth water and one's Alabama heart beat with pride and hope. Chilton is one of the many counties in Alabama that have found themselves. "Chilco" peaches are now on the market, and are being widely distributed in the North. They are graded by a mechanical device which greatly excites Mr. Mullin's interest since it removes the fuzz from the peach skin. There are 50,000 choice trees in the cooperative that are now bearing, and 25,000 others are maturing.

This season a Chilton cooperative shipped 100 carloads of choice strawberries. Long after the season had closed Chilton sent its strawberry culls to Birmingham's quick freezing plant and so disposed of them profitably. Chilton also is beginning to grow tomatoes on a large scale and this year it has 4,000 acres planted to watermelons. a crop that should begin to move in a few days. Trucks from northern and Florida markets are daily asking for Irish potatoes and beans. Some Irish potatoes are available. but no beans. In due time we take it there should be a bean cooperative.

Mr Mullin's terse account of the Chilton County cooperatives was one of the most significant articles in The Advertiser yesterday. Those Chilton farmers are a thrifty, hard-working lot. They have long been thrifty and hard-working; now they are beginning to find themselves. They don't mind working with their hands, but at the same time they are using their heads. They are not just planting and growing, they are also playing merchant. They have developed an eye for market demands and are adjusting their planting program to these demands. They know that this discriminating American market is eager to buy classified graded products and so they are putting themselves in position to meet this discriminating demand.

We have said that many other counties in Alabama have found themselves economically and are going forward to new goals of achievement. This is not the time or the occasion to name all of them, but some weeks ago Mr. Mullin wrote interestingly of Baldwin county and its unique performance. It is appropriate, we think, to close this editorial by quoting a recent leader from The Decatur Daily, published up in Tennessee Valley. The Daily is by way of commending the example of Baldwin to the farmers of its own territory. Says The Daily:

"Alabama has many reasons to be proud of Baldwin County for that County is the foremost in farm development in Alabama. The lesson taught by Baldwin County is of inestimable value to all of Alabama.

"From that county this year has moved 8,000 rail cars of truck crops.

"Of the total 6,834 cars were of potatoes, cucumbers or both. Other crops have made up more than a thousand carloads. One car of watermelons was shipped last week, but most of this crop is usually shipped by truck or boat.

"Think of it, 8,000 cars of truck crops from one Alabama county and there are 67 counties in Alabama. We do not mean to say that every county in this state can do as Baldwin, but we do mean to saythat every county can do a much better job than is being done now.

"If memory serves us correctly, Baldwin County also has no bonded debt, which means more money for public services in Baldwin County.

"In North Alabama, Baldwin County has two rivals in Cullman County and Madison County and we hope that before another ten years have passed that Morgan, Limestone and Lawrence counties will have joined in that profitable rivalry.

"All of our wealth is produced from the soil. When we do not produce that wealth, we remain poor, we remain bound down with taxes taking our homes away from us, our educational system is but a shadow of what it should be, our people enjoy poor health."

MARK REMARKS

The "high-pressure" daily newspaper campaign being carried on against Chilton County in regard to the proposed building of a highway between Tuscaloosa and Montgomery, is not getting anywhere insofar as roadbuilding is concerned. If officials of the State Highway Department are really interested in this road, the place to discuss it is in Chilton County and not in the daily newspapers. Chilton County already has built and paid for 28 miles of hard surfaced highway between Tuscaloosa and Montgomery, (Maplesville to the Autauga County line). If Tuscaloosa and Bibb ever build a road to connect up with this highway at Maplesville, the route will be shortened approximately 50 miles, and if, and when the road is built between Maplesville and Prattville, the road will be still further shortened by from 10 to 15 miles. Chilton County has done more toward establishing a paved highway between the University and the State Capitol than any other county.

MORAL ECHOES

D. W. Haskew

The program of the Missionary Society had already begun when one of the ladies who was to give an important part came rushing into the room all out of breath. When the program was over I heard her apologizing to the leader in language like this: "I beg your pardon for being late, but I just could not make up my mind which dress I wanted to wear. I tried on a half dozen or more and then looked at my clock and I was late. Then I just buckled on this old thing and then I could not decide on my hat. After I came to the door and looked out I had a time deciding whether I should bring my parasol." There was a woman who could not make up her mind. She was always late because she did not say to herself: "I will wear this dress and hat." It pays to cultivate yourself to a wise decision.

One day a young man came into my study all agitated over a lamentable mistake that he had made. He told me that he was accused of certain misconduct, and that the sad part about it was that he was guilty. I said to him: "Young man, you know and I know why you did that thing and in the name of God why don't you stop drinking?" His reply was so characteristic of the present-day situation of hundreds of men and women: "Preacher," said he, "I know that I should stop drinking, but, Gee, I just cannot make up my mind." Listen to me, folks, when an engineer looks ahead and sees the trestle on fire and ready to fall in, he has got to make up his mind to stop his train and act on it, or take the results. Better make up your mind to quit and quit right now. I bury people by the score who could not make up their minds and they took the results.

A beautiful young bride went into a newly built house and set up house keeping. She had never learned the art of making up her mind. She kissed her husband good-bye at the door and to her he said: "Fix me a good dinner, dearest." No sooner had he gone than she began to think about dinner. All morning she tried to decide but nothing stuck. About eleven o'clock she became agitated, but could not decide. It was ten minutes to twelve and soon he would be coming and she was frantic. It was then too late to cook anything and the hard working young man had to sit down to sliced bread and cold pork and beans. Lack of decision has pushed men and women into the divorce courts.

We called at a home for one who was making a trip with us. She came out in a flurry and climbed into the car all out of breath. We had gone about three miles and she gave out a distress signal and said: "I just can't decide whether I turned off my gas stove or not. I think one minute that I did and then I think that I did not." The outcome was that I had to turn around an go back to her home and let her make up her mind. She turned it off and did I feel good? She was so relieved, but I am still thinking that she should have made up her mind before she left home. People who never make up their minds are calculated to cause other people a lot of trouble.

One day I stood by and watched a contractor as he set some iron posts and supports in a building. The supports were placed in position and then cement was poured around them. A few days later the cement was set and those posts were immovable. I heard a man say one day that he had learned better than to drive down his thoughts and cement around them. Then he said: "I always reserve the right to change my mind." Indeed we are living in a changing world and sometimes we have to change our minds about certain things, but there are other things about which no man should ever change his mind. When I was a boy I drove down my mind on the question of God and right living and I cemented those thoughts, and from that day to this my mind has been immovable. It is the man with a wavering mind that becomes unstable in all of his ways. Better make up your mind on certain fundamentals of life and then cement them with the cement of truth and make yourself immovable.

TRUTH about ADVERTISING

By CHARLES B. ROTH

OH, FOR THE GOOD OLD DAYS

GRANDPA BUTLER was 84 when he died, but he held out to the very last for what he affectionately called "the good old days."

He liked to tell about them. Life was simpler then, said he. We didn't hurry so fast. We had more time to read and to enjoy our friends. And the cost of living—say, you could live for a third of what it costs a fellow these days.

Charles Roth

Where Grandpa Butler's logic fell down was in confusing the standards of living when he was a boy and when he was an octogenarian.

When he was young you could live for less—but you had less in your life. You put up with discomforts which would be unthinkable today. You ate unbalanced meals, lived in uncomfortable homes, had no radio sets, automobiles or electric servants.

As a matter of fact—but we were never able to convince Grandpa Butler of it—the cost of living today, dollar for dollar of value considered, is far less than it was in his young days.

Your dollar actually buys more, brings you more value, than any other dollar in history.

Anyone who understands simple economics will tell you why. Two words will do it. The words are mass production.

Mass production is impossible without mass distribution, which is just another way of saying that when a larger number of things are made a large number of people must be made to buy them.

There wasn't any mass distribution until advertising was developed, and there wasn't any of the things in our lives we call modern until advertising put them there.

In many foreign countries even today you have to spend weeks scouring the markets for what you want. Farmers bring their cattle and produce to market. They stay in town two or three weeks disposing of it. Consumers have to go from stall to stall and dicker for everything they want.

If you have the time and enjoy trading, that sort of thing is fine, is fun; but most of us have other things to do. We find it simpler to do our trading by reading the newspaper advertisements, decide what we will buy and then go down to the store or telephone.

It saves time. It saves more. It saves money. Without advertising to smooth the route of goods from seller to buyer, the cost of everything is higher than when advertising is in the picture.

VERBENA LODGE A. F. & A. M., NO. 754, VERBENA, ALABAMA

To the Worshipful Master, Wardens and Brethren of Verbena Lodge A. F. & . M., No. 754, Verbena, Ala.

Dear Brethren:

It is with sadness that we bow to the Divine Will and announce to you the death of our beloved brother, Pinkney M. Jones, which occurred on the 12th day of February, 1939, at his home in Chilton County, Alabama.

The funeral was conducted from Corinth Baptist Church on the 13th day of February, 1939, by Brother J. D. Hughes, the pastor of the Church, and with masonic honors from the Church to the cemetery, led by Brother Q. C. Meroney.

Brother Jones was born March 22, 1852 and would have been eighty-seven years old had he lived just a little more than one month longer. He was married in early life to Miss Cinda Driver who survives him. They reared a large family, both sons and daughters, who are married and are taking their places as among the best citizenship of our country.

Brother Jones embraced the Christian religion and united with the Baptist Church at Corinth, in his early manhood and remained a loyal and faithful member of this church all of his life.

Brother Jones was made a Mason by Amand Lodge A. F. & A. M. No. 250 about the year 1885 and was a constant attendant of every communication of his lodge as long as his health would permit. He never moved his membership from this Lodge and upon its consolidation with Verbena Lodge No. 754, permitted his membership to pass to Verbena Lodge upon this consolidation. He was liberal in supporting all the demands, appeals and institutions of his lodge and faithful in the observance of its tenets, laws, rules and regulations.

Brother Jones was a thrifty, industrious and upright citizen. He earned his bread by the sweat of his brow. He saved his earnings and was always able and willing to help in every worthy cause of his Church, his Lodge, his community, his neighbor and h s country.

NOW THEREFORE: As God in His alwise providence has seen fit to call our most worthy brother from his labors on earth to the glories of that life beyond the grave, be it resolved:

First: That in the death of brother Jones, this lodge has lost a faithful and loyal member, his church has lost one of its staunch and stalwart members and his community and country has lost a most valuable citizen.

Second: That our heartfelt sympathy is hereby extended to his bereaved family and friends. Though his face we see no more, we shall ever cherish his memory.

Third: That a page in our records be inscribed and dedicated to his memory and that a copy of this resolution be spread upon our minutes, that a copy be furnished his family under seal of this lodge and a copy published in our County papers.

Respectfully submitted,
—J. C. Pattillo, R. L. Duffey, H. T. Williams, committee.

ERADICATE PASTURE WEEDS

Weeds in pastures compete with desirable pasture grasses and legumes just as weeds in cultivated land compete with row crops, according to James H. Wood Superintendent of the Soil Conservation Service in the CCC Camp area, near Clanton, Alabama.

Mowing pastures when they begin to get weedy will help to control weeds by preventing the reseeding of annuals and by weakening the perennial woods through exhaustion of the root reserves, Mr. Wood pointed out.

In almost every old pasture there are some areas that have not been grazed where the grass has become touch and unpalatable. Mowing will clip the tough grass and stimulate the development of new, tender growth which will result in more uniform grazing. It will also tend to develop a thick turf, which resists erosion and aids in moisture conservation.

Many new pastures seeded this spring contain only a few weeds, which can be destroyed by pulling or digging them up. The same method can be used on rough and inaccessible areas. While this is more laborious than mowing, it destroys weeds much more thoroughly.

Elimination of weeds that compete with desirable pasture plants for food and moisture is one phase of more efficient land used which many farmers overlook, but it is an operation that will pay good returns for the labor involved because of the improved grazing and the develcpment of a more desirable sod from an erosion-control standpoint, Mr. Wood said.

LYNCHING RECORD FIRST SIX MONTHS OF 1939

According to the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the Department of Records and Research there were four lynchings in the first six months of 1939.

This is three more than the number 1, for the first six months of 1938, and the same number, 4, for the first six months of 1937.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Florida, 2; Georgia, 1; and Mississippi, 1.

PASTURE CLEARING

Clearing of land for pasture seeding is becoming prevalent in Chilton County, Alabama. This work gained impetus when Camp SCS-7 started clearing part of the land assigned to pasture in their Cooperative Agreements.

To clear this land, members of Camp SCS-7, Clanton, Alabama, cut off brush and trees up to a certain size. Brush is piled separate from poles, thus giving the cooperator a supply of firewood and an opportunity to dispose of brush before seeding.

After proper land preparation and fertilizing, this land is seeded according to recommendations made by the Camp technicial staff. With proper care a good pasture can be established in a short time.

Economic condition render it imperative that beef and dairy herds be improved in the southeastern states. To improve the quality of cattle it is necessary to improve the quantity of pasturage to furnish food both in quanitity and quality sufficient.

Malnutrition Is Important Problem

Malnutrition, commonly termed "under-nourished or underweight," is one of the most serious health problems affecting the people of the rural Southland, according to a statement by the local County Health Officer, Dr. S. D. Sturkie. Twenty-four per cent of 1722 school children in Chilton County examined by the health department during 1938-39 were found to be more than 10 per cent underweight and a larger percentage manifested signs of this condition, the Health bulletin revealed. Hookworm disease, which affects 30 per cent of Chilton County's school children, is directly related to malnutrition. The marked pallor of hookworm infested children is often as much due to a lack of iron in the diet as to the blood-sucking of the worm, the Health Officer pointed out.

The exact prevalence of diseases caused by a lack of an adequate diet in the county is not exactly known. Such nutritional diseases, as pellegra, scurvey, beri-beri, etc., are rarely reported to the Health Department by local physicians but a mild form of these diseases is seen quite frequently according to the Health Officer. An inadequate intake of vitamins is responsible for these and many other of mas's chronic ailments. These substances about which present knowledge is very far advanced, have been isolated in pure form and are used daily by physicians in the treatment of disease. Probably the most sensatiosal of these so-called vitamins is nicotinic acid, a form of vitamin B which clears almost miraculously the sore tongue of pellegra.

It is not merely the underprivileged or the people on relief who are victims of malnutrition, the health official pointed out. As a matter of fact through commodities provided by the Deparment of Public Welfare, some relief families while subsisting on a very simple fare have had a more well-balanced diet than some of their more fortunate neighbors.

This poists to a need for better education of the public as to what constitutes a properly balanced diet, he stated.

The following diet for a normal adult is recommended by the Health Department:

Each adult should take daily one glass of milk, 2 eggs, 1 glass of orange or tomato juice or a serving of any fresh or canned fruit, 1 to 2 serving of any of the following protein foods: meat, fish, cottage cheese, or peas, 1-2 ounce of cheese, 2 or more vegetables (besides potatoes), bread; roots butter, whole grain cereals. For vitamin B, one can eat whole grain bread, yeast tablets or wheat germ.

JONES SEED AND FEED STORE REMODELED AND ENLARGED

The Jones Seed & Feed Co., has just completed remodeling its store. The floor space has been doubled in order to render a better service to its many customers.

S. A. Jones, owner of this business is a local young man, and states that he will install in the near future, a new modern all-electric Jamesway Incubator-Hatcher.

Mr. Jones began this business not quite two years ago and its rapid growth to become of the largest seed and feed stores in the city, testifies to the high standard of merchandising in the past. The Jones Seed and Feed Co. carries a complete line of garden and field seed and has a large cream buying station. A branch office of Anderson Clayton & Co., cotton buyers, is also located at this store.

Located near the L. & N. Railroad, this establishment is headquarters for the famous Jazz Feeds, and a cordial invitation is extended to the public to visit the remodeled store. An advertisement from this firm appears elsewhere in this issue.

K. V. Klinner To Open Store At Opelika

K. V. (Vernon) Klinner, who for the past several years has been manager of the popular Klinner Furniture Co., of this city, announced this week that he was opening up a furniture store in Opelika under the name of Klinner Brothers. Mr. Klinner left Wednesday to prepare for the opening of this new store on Saturday.

On leaving Clanton Mr. Klinner asked the News to express his deep appreciation for the splendid business given him by the people of this county, and voiced the hope that the customers of this store would continue to patronize it in the future. Mr. J. W. Hosey, who has been connected with the store as salesman, will be manager in the future. Mr. Hosey has been connected with the store for quite a while and is well known and liked by the people of this section.

Also leaving Clanton in the near future to join her husband, is Mrs. Klinner, owner and operator of the popular Nell's Eat Shop. Mr. Klinner's son and daughter will also join him. Mrs. Klinner announced that her mother, Mrs. F. B. Goodgame, would manage the Lunch Shop in the future.

Clanton regrets losing this popular couple, but the very best wishes of their friends and customers go with them to their new home.

HEALTH OFFICER WARNS AGAINST DIARRHEA IN CO.

Citing the instance of two recent deaths of infants from infectious diarrhea commonly called "colitis," Dr. S. D. Sturkie, County Health Officer, warned Chilton County mothers against the disease and urged that every possible precaution be taken to protect infants aganst it. A majority of the diarrheas suffered by infants, according to the Health Officer, are caused by a germ, the Dysentery bacillus, which is also responsible for "bloddy flux," a type of dysentery seen commonly in children and adults. A Clanton physician reports 20-25 cases of "bloody flux" seen in his practice during the last month.

Whenever this disease makes its appearance in a home, the same precautions should be taken, the Health Officer states, as in typhoid, as the two diseases are spread in the same manner, i. e. by flies, through food, milk and water, etc. The stool and urine of the patient should be covered with a disinfectant solution and allowed to stand one hour before being discarded. The patient should be kept in a fly-proof room. All linens (baby diapers) used by the patient should be carred from the sick room in a tub and either soaked in disinfectant or boiled immediately.

The following precautions are advised by the Health Officer in the prevention of "colitis" in infants:

1. Boil all cows milk for three minutes with constant stirring (or home pasteurize) before being given to children under 2 years of age.
2. Boil drinkng water unless from a protected water supply such as city water or a well protected with pump and water tight casing and curb.
3. Do not feed indigestible food.
4. Be sure that infants food is protected from exposure to flies.
5. If baby is on the "bottle" be sure that the bottles, nipples, and utensils used in the preparation of the formula be sterilized by boiling for 15 minutes and protected from exposure to flies.
6. Protect the home by screening, installation of a sanitary pit toilet, and a protected water supply.
7. If a member of the family develops diarrhea, use the same precautions as in typhoid fever. This may mean the saving of an infant life.
8. If baby develops diarrhea, give nothing by mouth for 24 hours except water and call doctor immediately.

COSBY-HODGES COMPANY TO REPRESENT AT EXPOSITION

Birmingham, Ala.—July 11—Poultrymenwho have been reading about the World's Poultry Congress and Exposition at Cleveland, Ohio, will be interested to know that Cosby-Hodges Milling Company is sending twenty-two of its men to bring back full and complete reports of the big meeting.

Poultrymen from over forty nations will attend the Cleveland meeting—July 28-August 7—and many of the principal addresses will be made by foreigners. The World's Poultry Congress and Exposition is held every three years under the auspices of the World's Poultry Science Association. This is the first time the congress has met in this country Previously meetings have been held in Holland, Spain, Canada, Germany, Italy and England. The educational exhibits alone at Cleveland will occupy twenty acres of exposition space.

The Cosby-Hodges representatives will attend all exhibits and scientific sessions and report back to the poultrymen of the Southeast everything of value that they can learn from the meeting.

Cosby-Hodges Milling Company is keenly interested in the Poultry and Livestock Industry of the South and again this year will give away fifteen registered boars at the Alabama State Fair to County 4-H Club boys who score the most points for their county with their exhibits. As chairman of the marketing committee of the Alabama State Chamber of Commerce, President J. Chapline Hodges is making fine progress in developing and improving home markets for Southern grown farm products

The Youth in Business

By C. E. Johnston

Dean, Schools of Business International Correspondence Schools

JUNE is an important month in the lives of many young persons. In June thousands of young men and women leave the class room for "the active field of economic endeavor". They go forth to earn a living. Many of them are apt to feel that their future is far from bright, that opportunities are more limited today than a generation or two ago. It is to them that these few words are directed.

An authority recently made this rather startling statement: "Nowadays, with industry increasingly aware that the price of solvency is continual change, there are 300,000 experts in laboratories throughout the world hunting down new products and new uses for existing products. The United States alone spends $750,000 a day on research. No wonder that there are fifty new developments in 1939 for every two in 1899".

Consider such a common agricultural product as corn. Formerly corn was only used as a food for men and animals. Today, as the result of research, corn is used in paints, in artificial leather, in phonograph records, in chewing gum, in plastics, and in many other products. Today, research is "the last frontier". Research that constantly results in the discovery of new products, in new uses for existing materials, and in new methods of manufacturing and distributing commodities means the foundation of new industries and the expansion of old businesses; it means that agricultural materials that now seem too abundant must soon be produced in greater abundance and that agriculture will again flourish and our agricultural population afford a great market for the new commodities produced by industry; it means that opportunities in business far from becoming fewer will become more numerous as time goes on.

Young people who are inclined to be pessimistic about their futures, should take note of research and what it is doing. Because of research, opportunities in coming years will surpass those in the past

CROWDS INCREASE AT BIBLE LYCEUM IN TENT HERE

The Evangelistic meetings at the Bible Lyceum, under the leadership of Evangelist Mitchell R. Garrett, are growing with unabated interest as indicated by the large nightly attendance. In spite of a slow drizzling rain Sunday night more than 1,000 were in attendance, and more were turned away because of lack of seating facilities.

Hundreds of more seats will be provided for this coming Sunday night to take care comfortably, of about 1200. The Lyceum party has promised to make a strong effort to seat everyone who comes before 7:45 after that time it may be necessary to stand.

One of the special features of the service that is helping to draw great audiences, is the special musical program, which is a medley of quartetts and specials, beginning at 7:30. This part of the service is under the personal supervision of C. F. Graves.

The Question Box is another special feature of the Bible Lyceum. Mr. Garrett usually answers Bible questions each night, as fast as they are handed up by the ushers In fact so much interest has been manifested in this phase of the service, until it has been necessary to set aside this Friday night as "Question Box Night."

The following subjects have been announced:

Thursday sight, "Why Are There So Many Denominations, and How Can I Find The True Church?"

Friday night, "Queston Box Night."

Saturday 3:00 P.M., special preaching service.

Sunday night, "Seven Terrible Plagues Soon To Fall On Alabama—Then What?" (Illustrated on screen).

The services are held nightly, with the exception of Monday and Saturday nights. All meetings are open to the public and all are invited.

Home Demonstration

The Verbena Home Demonstration Club met at the home of Merle Burkhalter July 6, 1939.

The meeting was called to order by the President. Serena Mitchell gave a talk on the last meeting. Then Miss Barber and the Club discussed taking a tour to see the interesting sights that we have in Alabama. We also discussed going to the National or State Camp.

There being no old or new business, Miss Barber gave the demonstration on making the face and bath powder. Then some of the members made some of both. Miss Barber also told us some interesting things about the making of cold and cleansing cream

Refreshments were served to 14 members and two visitors.

There being no other business we adjourned to meet again in September.

Forty Tribes Dance at Gallup Ceremonials

War bonnets, ceremonial paint and feathers signal the approach of the Inter-Tribal Indian Ceremonial to be held at Gallup, New Mexico, August 17-20, inclusive.

GALLUP, N. M.—Indian drums are sounding in the far places of the Southwest. Soon it will be time for the many tribes to gather "at the place by the bridge" (Indian for Gallup, N. M.)

Here each year seven thousand Indians from nearly forty different tribes join forces to produce America's most colorful and spectacular Indian Show, the annual Inter-Tribal Indian Ceremonial. For four days they will dance, chant, compete in sports and engage in weird pagan rites before capacity audiences made up of their white brothers. The Gallup Ceremonial is the largest and most authentic Indian spectacle of its kind in the country.

Usually the Ceremonial is held the last part of August. But a change in dates has been announced by Joseph Lieberman, Santa Fe agent and this year's president of the Ceremonial Association. The event will open on August 17th and run through four days with the last performance scheduled for the evening of the 20th. In addition to seven regular shows, the association has also arranged a colorful street parade each day except Sunday.

A special attraction each year is the unusual display of Indian arts and crafts in the Exhibit Hall where thousands of articles are shown. A score of native craftsmen will be at work showing the technique of Indian handicraft.

Yes, the Indian drums are sounding in the far places of the Southwest, and soon the Navajos, Zunis, Hopis, Utes, Apaches, Lagunas, Acomas and a score of other tribesmen and their families will start the trek to "the place by the bridge," Gallup, N. M.

H. V. Kaltenborn, Adventurous News Commentator, Awarded Honorary Degrees

H. V. Kaltenborn (right) interviews Spanish soldiers with General Franco's army before Madrid.

H. V. Kaltenborn, the distinguished foreign correspondent and radio news commentator whose keen reporting of European affairs won him a national reputation almost overnight, was awarded two honorary degrees at commencement ceremonies this spring.

He received the degree of Doctor of More Humane Letters from Hamilton College, Clinton, N. Y., on June 12, and a week later the University of Wisconsin, at Madison, Wis., conferred on him the degree of Doctor of Laws.

Adventures All Over the World

To look at Mr. Kaltenborn, no one would think that this scholarly gentleman was an adventurer. Yet when he dashed out on a Spanish battlefield and made the first on-the-scene broadcast of an actual battle, his action was typical of his entire life.

He was in a tight spot, with shells bursting nearby and bullets whizzing past him, but he was as calm and collected as he is at home. And his resourcefulness and courage carried him through, just as they had many times before.

For twenty years a foreign correspondent and newspaper editor, Mr. Kaltenborn has been all over the world in search of news. He has interviewed Mussolini, Hitler and Chiang Kai-shek. While in China he was captured by bandits but was released when he delighted his captors by juggling a piece of straw on his nose.

Ex-Washington Correspondent

Equally at home in American politics, Kaltenborn was a Washington correspondent and covered the political convention of both parties in 1932 and 1936. His radio career began 18 years ago. Recently he was chosen as the outstanding news commentator of the year, by the Radio Daily poll of newspaper editors and columnists, the Motion Picture Daily, the Scripps-Howard newspapers, the National Federation of Press Women and the Women's National Radio Committee.

As war clouds darken over Europe, millions of radio listeners continue to depend on Mr. Kaltenborn's authoritative observations on the situation. His program, "Kaltenborn Edits the News," is heard every Sunday and Tuesday at 9:30 p. m. Eastern Standard Time over the Columbia network.

Christian Endeavor News

Sunday evening a very interesting program was presented by Gail Gletty. This program was about "Our Hobbies And Their Helpfulness." Ruth Higgins read the scripture and Lucile McCain told of her hobbie of pine needle work. Fred Blankenship told of his hobbie of music and played and sang the song entitled "This Is My Father's World." Sara Nell Collins told of her hobbie of collecting pictures and poems She showed some of her pictures and read some of her poems. This was all very interesting. Then Gail told of her hobbie of working with puppets, after which Rev. Bahr told of the values of good hobbies.

This same program will be presented for evening church services next Sunday with a few alterations and additions.

After the Christian Endeavor meeting was over the group went over to Rev. Bahr's where they did some singing and game playing and were served with a very tasty refreshment.

A GOOD CUP OF COFFEE EVERY TIME YOU TRY

By Katharine Fisher

Director of Good Housekeeping Institute

Michael Angelo said that trifles make perfection—but perfection is no trifle! So it is with coffee making. A good cup of coffee can be made every time you try—but only if you will remember a number of seemingly small but vastly important things which enter into the process. Should you forget about them, it will only be luck if your coffee isn't too weak or too strong, cloudy or bitter. Here are the rules of good coffee making, rules that have been carefully checked and rechecked by months and months of research by coffee experts in our own Good Housekeeping Institute laboratories.

Be sure your coffee is fresh. The coffee you use, whether in the bean or ground, must be fresh. Be sure you know when the coffee you buy was roasted, or that it is vacuum-packed. In the case of coffee which is not vacuum-packed, if there is a date on the container it should be within a few days of the date of purchase.

Select coffee with flavor you like. The price of coffee varies according to the cost of the different coffees that make up a particular blend. The flavor also varies with the blend, so you may find it necessary to try several brands before you find one that appeals to your particular taste. So, buy a brand with a flavor you like and no more than you can use in a week.

KATHARINE FISHER
Director of Good Housekeeping Institute

A universal grind makes good coffee. Usually it isn't necessary to ask your grocer to grind or regrind coffee to suit the coffee-making device you use. If a universal grind is available, it will be satisfactory for any type of coffee maker. If the brand you prefer does not have a universal grind, buy a percolator grind for a percolator, and a drip grind for a drip-coffee maker.

Don't mix fresh coffee with stale. It isn't necessary to transfer coffee, after you bring it home, to another container. In doing this you may jeopardize the flavor of the fresh coffee by mixing it with coffee left in the container.

Keep coffee maker clean. Your coffee-making utensil should be scrupulously clean. Coffee oils have a habit of clinging to the inner surfaces of utensils and eventually give off an unpleasant musty flavor to the coffee made in them. Thorough washing in warm soapsuds and thorough rinsing in clear hot water after each use will remove traces of the coffee oil. You can buy a small brush to clean spouts and the tubes of percolators.

At least twice a month give your coffee maker a more thorough cleaning. Porcelain, enamelware or glass utensils should be cleaned by boiling in a solution of one tablespoon of washing soda or borax to each quart of water. If you wish, you can fill such a coffee maker with the solution and let it boil. If the appliance cannot stand such heat, let it soak in a dishpan full of this hot solution. Bases of coffee makers in which there is an electric heating element must never be immersed in water. Percolators can be filled with either of the foregoing solutions; the application of heat will cleanse the tube. Be sure to rinse thoroughly after cleaning with any solution. And when the coffee maker is set aside keep the cover off so it can "air."

Use standard measures in making coffee. Now we come to the actual making of the coffee. For a brew which suits many people, use two level standard measuring tablespoonfuls of coffee for each half-pint standard measuring cupful of water. These proportions hold good for all methods of coffee making If you prefer some other strength, determine your own proportions and stick to them. If you do not measure carefully, you will have coffee that may taste very grand sometimes and pretty bad at other times.

NOTICE OF AN ACT TO BE INTRODUCED IN THE PRESENT SESSION OF THE LEGISLATURE OF ALABAMA

An Act

To repeal an Act entitled: "To require the Court of County Commissioners or ke governing body of Chilton County, labama, to establish and make payent of an Agricultural Fund for the urpose of paying salaries and travel i a County Agricultural Agent, Couny Home Demonstration Agent, an Asistant County Agricultural Agent in H Club Work and the salary of a lerical Assistant to provide for the ppointment and duties of a County gricultural Agent, a County Home emonstration Agent and Assistant unty Agricultural Agent in 4-H Club ork, and a clerical Assistant to provide cessary expensees to provide out of hat funds and in what order of prefernce said Agricultural Fund shall be id, to provide when this act shall take fect," approved March 17, 1936.

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISTURE OF ALABAMA:

Section 1: That an Act entitled: "To uire the Court of County Commisners or like governing body of Chil County, Alabama to establish and e payment of an Agricultural Fund the purpose of paying salaries and vel of a County Agricultural Agent, County Home Demonstration Agent, an Assistant County Agricultural Agent in 4-H Club Work and the salary of a Clerical Assistant to provide for the appointment and duties of a County Agricultural Agent, a County Home Demonstration Agent, an Assistant County Agricultural Agent in 4-H Club Work and a Clerical Assistant to provide necessary expenses to provide out of what funds and in what order of preference said Agricultural Fund shall be paid paid, to provide when this act shall take effect," which Act was passed by the Legislature of Alabama, at the extra session of 1936, and which was approved March 17, 1936, be and the same is hereby repealed.

Section 2: BE IT FURTHER ENACTED that this repealing Act shall go into effect upon the approval by the Governor.

The above proposed bill for the people to vote on July 11, 1939, repeals the law as you see, which makes it compulsory for the Commissioners Court to appropriate $4,300.00 for the County Agent's Office.

The law to be repealed takes from the Commissioners Court any authority to control the County Agent's Office.

Up to 1936 when this law was passed, the Commissioners had control of the County Agent's Office and every county in Alabama has this power now except Chilton County.

Do you want the people of the county to control the County affairs, or do you want them controlled from Auburn?

Many Former Coosa County Residents Join In Poplar Springs' Homecoming Celebration

Many former Coosa County residents of this county joined in helping celebrate the ninety-ninth anniversary of the Poplar Springs Church, near Rockford, last Sunday when this old Church held its twentieth annual Homecoming

One of Chilton County's prominent citizens, W. T. White, of Maplesville, whose parents were members of this Church for many years, presented the Church with a large oil painting in their memory.

Also for the first time in the history of Coosa County, every one of the county's 45 white churches united in a preaching service. The program was held at the Poplar Springs Baptist Church, founded 99 years ago, to mark the old church's twentieth annual homecoming celebration.

The Rev. W. A. Darden, of Boise City, Okla., former pastor, was in the pulpit, assisted by the present pastor, the Rev. William Bryant. Both perachers are greatgrandsons of Alexander Hamilton Logan, who was charter member and deacon of Poplar Springs Church.

The program began at 9 A.M. with singing featuring several quartets, and was followed by the decorating of graves at a memorial service.

After the roll call of churches, the morning service began with the sermon by Dr. Darden and hymns which were used in the church more than 75 years ago.

At noon, a concert of sacred and patriotic music was given by the Alexander City band of the Avondale Mills, and a short flag program was conducted by A. P. Bryant, World War veteran and a sailor in the U. S. Navy for 16 years. W. T. White, of Maplesville, presented a large oil painting in memory of his father and mother. who were members of Poplar Springs Church for a half century.

Poplar Springs Church is five miles north of Rockford, between Goodwater and Sylacauga, and was organized in 1840.

PEACHES

Friend Webb Stanley of the Greenville Advocate, flitting through to Birmingham Monday morning, stopped long enough in Clanton to order a hamper of luscious CHILCO peaches sent to his friend. Austin Williamson, traffic manager of the P.&O. Steamship Company, Jacksonville, Fla. CHILCO products are fast finding their way into the markets of the world.

Out on Clanton Route 6, Mr. Harmon Headley, one of the County's leading growers, is producing some of the finest peaches we have ever seen. Mr. Headley brought two peaches of the J. H. Hale variety to the News office Wednesday. One of these weighed exactly one pound. Hale peaches do not grow as well in this section of the country as other varieties, and when asked how this peach was produced, Mr. Headley told us that he had a number of the Elberta variety trees growing near the Hales and that the mixture of the pollen of the two varieties caused the Hales to be of good quality in every respect, and so firm that they could be easily packed and shipped long distances.

Farm Loan Assoc. Has Interesting Meeting

The members of the Chilton County National Farm Loan Association elected Will R. Clements of Jemison to a 3-year term on their Board of Directors at their annual meeting held July 10, 1939. Approximately 60 farmers, their wives and guests attended the meeting which was held in the Court House at Clanton.

Of interest to all members at the meeting was the review of association activities for the past year and the presentation of financial reports by D. W. Waite, Secretary-Treasurer. As of June 30, 1939, the Association had 182 members with loans outstanding amounting to $215,175.00, the reports show.

W. H. Kitchens, representative of the Federal Land Bank of New Orleans, was a guest at the meeting and spoke on "The Advantages of a farmer-owned farmer-managed, Cooperative Credit System."

"One of the principal fundamentals and most important feature of this system is that farmers own and operate their own credit institution," Mr. Kitchens said. "At the time each member of this National Farm Loan Association obtained his loan he subscribed to stock in the Association equal to 5 per cent of the amount borrowed. Since no one who is not a borrower can purchase stock in the Association, it, therefore, places sole ownership in the hands of the member-borrowers. Each borrower is entitled to vote for the directors who manage the affairs of the Association, and since these directors must also be members of the Association, it therefore places the management entirely in the hands of the borrowing members.

"This system which was made possible through the cooperation of farmers with each other in the solution of their credit problems has brought to agriculture long-term loans suited to the specific needs of farming at the lowest interest rate in the history of American farming."

Following the general meeting of stockholders, the Board of Directors met to organize for the coming year. C. C. Cofer of Jemison was elected president and W. J. Easterling of Clanton was elected vice president. In addition to Mr. Will R. Clements who was elected for the 3-year term at the stockholders' meeting, the other board members are B. F. Massey of Clanton and O. O. Calfee of Clanton. The directors reelected D. W. Waite secretary-treasurer for the 1939-40 term.

10-Point Program For Cotton Council

A 10-Point program of the National Cotton Council, in its general objective to expand the consumpiton of American cotton, cotton seed and their by-products, was announced here today by C. L. Walton, Alabama director of the council, who was in Chilton County, cooperating with John B. Deramus, Chirman of the Chilton County Committee of the Council.

Mr. Walton stated that Chilton County's quota was set at $207.10 and of this amount $155.91 has been raised, leaving a balance of only $51.19. Mr. Deramus urges all persons who have not subscribed to the county suota to do so immediately so that Chilton County can go over the top.

Jr. G. A. News

Even though it is vacation time the Jr. G. A. of the Clanton Baptist Church hasn't been taking a vacation. We have been combining work, study, and play in a very interesting way.

We held our last regular meeting at the home of Annie Kate Gore June 8. We had fifteen girls present despite the fact that the weather was inclement.

Records were kept and offerings cared for by Hazel and Willene Thomas

Our program consisted of the study of the Star Ideals and their meaning.

Plans were made for a joint meeting with theW.M.U. to be held during G. A. Focus Week.

Plans were made also for an outing at Oak Park.

Two new members, Doris and Dorothey Bossinger, twins, were welcomed into the organization.

Refreshments were served to thefollowing: Betty Armstrong, Doris and Dorothy Bossinger, Jean Donovan, Dean Easterling, Billy Ruth Fant, Annie Kate Gore, Alene Johnson, Sara Alie Rasberry, Martha Jean Stewart, Hazel and Willene Thomas, Martha and Warrene Wingard, Elizabeth Wade and Jr. G. A. Codnselor, Mrs. J. W. Fant.

We were dismissed by sentence prayer.

During the revival the following members of our Jr. G. A. organization confessed Christ as their Savior and asked for membership in the Church: Jean Donovan, Doris and Dorothy Bossinger, (by letter); and Sara Alice Rasberry.

During Focus Week the Jr. G. A. met with the W.M.U. at their Royal Service program meeting at the Church on June 26. At this meeting we presented our Star Ideals, together with our interpretation of their meaning. Those having passed their maiden test wore on this occasion their new arm bands, a gift of Circle Number Four of the W.M.U. Mrs. W. A. Willis is chairman of this Circle.

On the 29th of June, members of the Home Makers Class invited the Junior G. A. to Oak Park for a picnic outing. Members enjoying this occasion were: Betty Armstrong, Doris and Dorothy Bossinger, Dean Easterling, Jean Donovan, Billy Ruth Fant, Annie Kate Gore, Alene Johnson, Sara Alice Rasberry, Martha and Worrene Wingard and Hannah Joy Curtiss.

On Sunday night, July 2, the following members of our G. A. were received into full membership of the Church by baptism: Jean Donovan, Sara Alice Rasberry and Billy Ruth Fant.

Very important days to the Jr. G. A. were the three days of the Mission Study Institute. Leaders in our study classes were: Miss Ruth Gardner, Miss Cumi Luker and Miss Eddie Charles Wilkins. Our book for this study was "Whirligigs In China," by Annie S. Pruitt and Nan F. Weeks. The theme of the book was "God's Love For His People Everywhere."

Adding increased interest to our studies were the visits to our classes by Miss Hannah Plowden who is a returned missionary from China, and Mr. Honorio Espinoza, pastor of the First Baptist Church in Santiago, Chile, who is studying in this country.

Miss Plowden with her first hand knowledge of China, was able to give us a clearer understanding of conditions in China today.

Dr. Espinoza has a charming sense of humor and related a number of very touching and appealing incidents about life in Latin America.

During the general assembly programs we heard a number of interesting speakers among whom were Dr. Espinoza, Miss Hannah Plowden, Miss Ida M. Stallworth, Miss Martha Franks, Dr. F. M. Barnes and Miss Ruth Gardner.

During these three days study we enjoyed pleasant associations with members from several visiting Jr. G.A. scattered over Unity-Chilton Associations.

MIMS KILLING

had apparently fell against it before he landed on the floor.

Headley's story of the killing, to which there were no eye witnesses, was that he was the owner of the place on which Mims lived and that they had been having some trouble over a patch of watermelons growing on the place. He contended that he fired on Mims when he (Mims) attempted to raise a gun to his shoulder, and that he was standing in the road in front of Mims' house.

Coroner Martin stated that his investigation showed that the house was thrity-nine feet from the road. The gun held in Mims' hand contained an unfired shell and a pint bottle was nearby about one-fourth full of whiskey, the investigators claimed.

Funeral services for Mr. Mims were held Sunday morning at ten o'clock from the Mt. Nebo Church with Rev. Joe Gibson in charge. Interment was in the adjoining cemetery with J. Mell Martin & Sons in charge.

Pallbearers were J.E. Williams, Loma, William, and M. L. Williams, Carl and Bernice Culp, and J. E. Ray.

He is survived by four sons, Jim Arthur, L. D., Jr., Charles Edwin and Barney Mims, all of Clanton; four daughters, Mrs. Esther Smoke, Maplesville, Mrs. Clay Hayes, Plantersville, Mrs. Jane Wilson, Clanton Route 6 and Miss Evelyn Mims of Maplesville.

Lions Do Fine Job of Cleaning Cemetery

Needed Improvement Is Made Under Direction Of Recently Organized Club And Cooperation Of Entire Community

Despite the hot weather that prevailed last Tuesday morning, members of the Clanton Lions Club rolled up their sleeves and tackled the Clanton Number One Improvement Needed Job—that of seeing to it that the Clanton cemetery was thoroughly cleaned off.

Observers have agreed that this newly-organized unit of Lions International, which observed its Charter Nght only a few nights ago, have proven once and for all that it means business when it comes to rendering a service to this community, for sponsoring this movement is what can be termed a real service to Clanton.

The Club voted to tackle this job at its regular meeting last Friday night. Without knowing exactly how they were to go about the task, and with only the determination to see that it was done, the Club assessed each member fifty cents to start the ball rolling. With announcements being made in each of the Clanton Churches last Sunday morning to effect that the cooperation of all was desired, members of the Club started out Monday morning of this week asking for contributions to the worthy cause. Approximately twenty Negroes were secured and Tuesday morning work was begun in earnest, with Lions supervising and actually laboring at the task themselves.

In case you had not carefully observed the Clanton Cemetery in recent months, take our word for it—it was not one that would reflect civic pride, and Tuesday night found the place only about half cleaned off, and all day Wednesday was required to complete the ardous task, but completed it was, and the Clanton Lions Club is certainly due the commendation of the citizenship of Clanton.

The Club requested this opportunity to express its sincere appreciation for the splendid support given in this undertaking, the completion of which will mean much in upholding Clanton's civic pride, which, in the case of the cemetery, had drooped slightly—so slightly that it was indeed noticeable.

City Will Rebuild Old Highway Bridge

Mayor C. Fenn Jones announced this week that the City of Clanton will rebuild the bridge on the old highway leading from the City, south, which was washed out during the heavy rains last year. Mr. Jones stated that blue prints and repair estimates are being made on the project at the present time. The structure was not totally destroyed, the center support having washed out allowing it to sink down. This will be raised and other needed repairs made, all of which will be under the city-wide street improvement PWA contract, under which the streets were surfaced some time ago.

The road on which the bridge is located intersects with the U. S. 31 highway less than one-half mile below the City. Repairing this bridge will facilitate the hauling of cotton to two of the gins in the city, which are located on the road. Farmers have complained that they were forced to haul their cotton around the other road to reach the gins. Last Fall a makeshift bridge was erected by Mr. Jasper Dennis, owner of one of these gins, so that his customers would not be inconvenienced. Street work and other improvements, Mayor Jones stated, have prevented the repairing of the bridge until now.

RADIOS WITH VOLUME TURNED ON ARE DRAWING COMPLAINTS

Many complaints have been registered at the office of the Mayor within the past months regarding the playing of radios within the City. It seems that some of the citizens thoughtlessly increase the volume of their sets to the point that it annoys neighbors, who, naturally seek relief from this condition at the City Hall.

So Mayor Jones respectfully asks that radios be kept tuned down so as not to annoy the neghbors. It is believed that this annoyance is created unintentionally and that the cooperation of the people will be forthcoming in the matter.

PARKING LIMIT 45 MINUTES ON HI'WAY IN CITY

CITY TO ENFORCE RIGID CONTROL OF TRAFFIC ON THIS THOROUGHFARE

The City of Clanton will restrict parking on the U. S. Highway 31, which passes through the center of town, to 45 minutes, Mayor C. Fenn Jones announced Monday. He stated that the law was effective immediately. He announced that rigid enforcement of the law would be carried out, and that in connection with this ruling there was to be no more loading or unloading of trucks from the main thoroughfare of the street, and that all autos, trucks and other vehicles must keep moving.

For the past several years, traffic on this road has steadily increased to the point that caution must be exercised to guard the public's safety. As the highway passes through the center of the city, the Mayor stated that the growth of the city and the increased traffic had caused concern on the part of the city officials and the State Highway Department. "The Highway Department," the Mayor stated, "would prefer that there be no parking on this road within the city, but by rigid enforcement of the traffic rules, we hope to avoid this, due to the fact that the parking space is needed."

Full cooperation on the part of the motoring public is expected by the city. "There must be no stopping of cars for the occupants to carry on conversations, neither must there be loading or unloading of cars or trucks on this road unless they are parked properly," Mayor Jones concluded.

The 45-minute parking limit will be in effect from seven A.M. until six P.M., and the stopping, loading or unloading of vehicles from the center of the street will be prohibited at all times. This ruling applies to the section from the Gulfpride Service Station to the Burdette Service Station.

Handicraft Project For Girls Of County Is Rendering Three-Fold Public Service

The very attractive garments, which you will see on display in the window of Mullins & Scott this week and next, are not for sale They are for your inspection. When you see this display, you will undoubtedly want to know more about it.

On February 6, 1939, a handicraft project for girls was begun in Chilton County. This project was made possible by the National Youth Administration and the County Commissioners of Chilton County. The project is sponsored by the Department of Public Welfare and is under the able supervision of Mrs. Edna W. Gilbert, of Clanton. There are, at present, 29 girls employed, and the total cost to the County, so far, has not exceeded $12.00 per month.

At this almost ridiculously small cost to the County, the project is rendering a three-fold public service. First, training in sewing and other handicrafts is being given to girls to whom such training would not otherwise be available; second, it is furnishing paid, part-time employment, which helps these girls to be self-sustaining; and third, this service will make available to the Department of Public Welfare some much-needed clothing as the output of this project is turned over to the DPW for distribution among families who are in need.

Materials for use on this project are supplies jointly by the NYA and the local sponsors. The workers are paid by NYA. It was our aim in the beginning to have centers in the various communities in the county. Thus far, available funds have not permitted such expansion but we have not lost sight of this aim and we hope to establish at least one other center soon.

Believing that training in the repair and renovation of old garments is as valuable as training in the construction of new garments, arrangements have been made with the local CCC Camp for repairing Government-owned clothing used by the Camp.

One of the objectives of the Clanton Pilot Club was the furnishing of layettes for needy mothers. By fur-

County Fair To Be Staged Sept. 26-30

Those Who Wish To Have Displays Are Asked To Begin Making Plans Early; More Prizes To Be Awarded This Year

At a meeting last Saturday night of the Chilton County Fair Association the date of the Chilton County Fair this year was set and plans to make it the biggest and best in the history of the County were discussed. The date, September 26-30, was set. This is the week before the Alabama State Fair in Birmingham, and prize-winning exhibits from the local Fair will be carried to the Birmingham Fair for display.

The Clanton Kiwanis Club will again sponsor the Fair, and the Clanton Airport, Gragg Field, will possibly be the location, according to tentative plans of the Fair Association.

Dr. V. J. Gragg, president of the Chilton County Fair Association, and J. [illegible] week that they had high hopes of [illegible] this the most successful and [illegible] in every [illegible] held here. Interest is already being manifest, and the displays of Chilton County products, livestock, handicraft, etc., are expected to be better and bigger than previous years. Officials of the Association stated that more prize money is expected to be awarded producers in the County than has been awarded in the past.

Should Plan Early

Chilton County farmers and other persons, firms, and organizations, are asked to begin planning now for the week of September 26-30, when they are invited to arrange displays. This date is only a little over two months in the future, and an early start is vital to make this a successful undertaking.

Thomas P. Littlejohn will again this year have charge of the assortment of shows, entertainments, etc. Citizens of the County are familiar with the high type of entertainment Mr. Littlejohn is in the habit of presenting. He has been known to make the statement on several occasions that "although we may have only one lemonade stand, there'll be no flies in the lemonade," meaning that everything will be carried out on a high plane, to insure honest-to-goodness entertainment for those attending.

Dr. W. L. Parrish will again this year have charge of the livestock exhibits. Last year, under Dr. Parrish's supervision, some of the finest stock in the country was displayed to an admiring public. This year is expected to see an

Mystery Surrounds Disappearance Of 3 Jemison Residents

Three residents of Jemison have been reported missing since July 8, according to reports being sent out over the country for the past few days. These persons are Raymond Reynolds and Mr. and Mrs. Otto Blackman, and have been missing since July 8, in an automobile belonging to Reynold's father.

According to Sheriff W. G. Culp, Sam J. Reynolds, father of the missing youth, reported his son, who is about 21 years of age, was last seen with the Blackman couple in the Reynolds family car. No word has been heard from them since that time.

The sheriff said the elder Reynolds and relations of Blackman at Jemison had been unable to give any reason for their disappearance.

Blackman, whom the sheriff reported was "about 30," formerly lived at Waco, Texas, and at one time was employed by the Ford Motor Co., at Detroit.

Young Reynolds always had access to the car, according to his father, and was a quiet, well-behaved boy.

The Alabama Highway Patrol has been notified and police in the nation's cities have been asked to be on the lookout for the automobile, Sheriff Culp said.

Official Count Of July 11th Election

Official count of the election held July 11. at which time three local measures were submitted to the voters of this county in addition to the five state amendments, showed little difference from the unofficial returns carried in last week's issue of the News.

Local Bill Number One, which was the County Agent Bill, showed that there were 1013 votes cast for repeal of the 1936 Act, and 500 against.

Local Bill Number Two, which calls for election of the County Solicitor, carried by a three-to-one majority. There were 1159 votes cast for this proposition and 330 against.

Bill Number Three, callling for establishment of an Inferior Court was voted on as follows: Yes, 972; No, 455.

The County vote on the State amendments was as follows:

Number One—for, 757; against, 606.
Number Two—for, 723; against, 625.
Number Three—for, 627; against, 711.
Number Four—for, 600; against, 688.

"The nation needs men and women who will keep their feet on solid ground, think clearly, and have the courage to stand up and battle for the convictions God has given them."—Judge Walter B. Jones.

A REASONABLE APPEAL FOR FAIR PLAY FOR THE POWER COMPANY

The nation-wide controversy surrounding the TVA and the private power industry has, of course, a very special bearing on Alabama, since a large part of the TVA development lies in this state.

For Alabama, the situation comes down mainly to one important quesion: What part will the TVA play in supplying power needs, and what part will the Alabama Power Company play? This gives rise to the further question, which is all-important at the moment, what can be done to promote harmonious development of both the TVA and the Alabama Power Company, so that each may play its part to the best advantage?

That both must play a part is to be taken for granted. For the TVA, according to its own spokesmen, can serve only part of Alabama. When the 10 dams of the TVA, some completed and some in process of construction or authorized, are all in operation, the primary power output will be about 485,000,000 kilowatts. Most of this power has an actual market now or a market in sight in the present TVA territory.

Now, the rest of Alabama is going to continue to gorw and expand the same as that section of the state lying in the TVA territory, and there will be an increasing power demand for the rest of the state. Somebody must supply that power. The power company is doing so at present, and undoubtedly will continue to do so. But there must also be taken into account the need for expansion of power with growth of the state. It is necessary, therefore, to make it possible for the Alabama Power Company to expand as the need develops. And for the power company to expand, it is necessary to set up some kind of safeguard to give that reasonable security of investment which must be held forth in order to attract the capital needed for expansion.

Such considerations as these were discussed at the legislative committee hearing in Montgomery Thursday when Thomas W. Martin, president of the Alabama Power Company, appeared before the committee

Mr. Martin gave an admirably clear account of the situation. Plainly, his testimony made a fine impression on the committee members, as it must have done upon the general public.

Mr. Martin estimates that there will be a need for about $100,000,000 of expansion in the company's system by 1950, with the normal growth of Alabama. He said that within the next two years the company could spend $10,000,000 for new construction, affording work for thousands, and that it could obtain the necessary capital readily if only there were more certainty in the outlook from the standpoint of investors.

Reasonable assurance, from the standpoint of capital, he indicated, could be had simply if the state law were so amended as to make it necessary for municipalities wishing to enter the power business to purchase existing facilties of private companies either through negotiation or through condemnation proceedings, which would assure a fair price for the property involved. This, it appears, would enable investors in private power development to feel that their money would not be lost.

With this there would be needed legislation requiring a municipal power plant to obtain a certificate of convenience and necessity from the Public Service Commission, as private companies must do, if it seeks to operate outside the corporate limits of the municipality.

This is a reasonable appeal for fair play It should be acted on favorably by the Legislature. The News believes that it certainly will have the approval of the public.

In the circumstances, it seems that the TVA cannot commit itself to operation within a specific area. But the Alabama Legislature can, and should, take the necessary steps to safeguard Alabama investors against needless loss of money by requiring municipalities entering the power business to purchase existing facilities, instead of setting up duplicate systems.—Birmingham News-Age-Herald.

MARK REMARKS

The off again, on again, gone again legislative vehicle of the nineteen thirty-nine Dixon reign started off, puffing and blowing, Tuesday, as was expected, when the long, upgrade, with many stop and go back ups, crossings and other signals, are considered.

"Goat Hill," as the location of our seat of government is affectionately called, will be no quiet, restful place, for the next few months—where highly nervous people may go and find comfort. Sizzling and jittery is the forecast. Sizzling hot Senators and legislative jitterbugs will be doing their stuff, while three million Alabamians will react to the antics in various degrees and emotions.

Among the controversial high spots of the session will likely be:

Reapportionment of the Legislature—a touchy spot with many solons.

Division of available revenues by the general appropriation bill, universal approval of which is virtually impossible.

The school finance problem.

A movement for a Statewide stock law.

Revision of the State alcoholic beverage control law.

Enabling acts for some of the five amendments.

The question of State policy on municipally - owned or Federally - subsidized electric utilities.

Proposed salary increases for certain State officials.

WHEN AND IF

Heard on the yard at an all-day singing in Cullman:

Farmer: "I saw in This Month In Rural Alabama that Governor Dixon says he will see that Alabama farmers get a good price for all they produce."

Second Farmer: "Tha's nothing. Those South Alabama Legislators are going to pass a law to prohibit wiggle tails from making mosquitoes, or tadpoles turning to frogs within two miles of country churches and school houses."

A Rube standing near: "Tha's a good law and I will vote for that man. I love to go to night meetings and I don't like to be bit by mosquitoes or bothered by frogs a hollering while I am listening to the preacher."

A well-dressed traveling man: "The Tennessee law-makers stopped the natural law of evolution from working."

"Third Farmer: "Does nothing ever evolute in Tennessee now?"

Traveling man: 'It can't. It would be against the law."

Third Farmer: "Well, we elected a man to Congress once that said he would get us forty cents for our cotton."

Traveling man: "Did it work?"

Third Farmer: "Yes, it worked until he got to Congress. But it quit working when we started selling cotton."

Traveling man: "I see. It was a high price for cotton as long as you paid it yourself by holding the cotton. But if you sold, the price went down."

Second Farmer: "Will Governor Dixon get us a high price for our strawberries every year."

First Farmer: "Yes, and eggs too, as soon as he gets his plans working."

Third Farmer: "Then why doesn't he get us a good price for our cotton also?"

First Farmer: "That is too big a job for a Governor. The President and Congress attend to that.'

Second Farmer: "When will they begin on Governor Dixon's better prices?"

Traveling man: "He can hardly get his plans to working until the Government moves the surplus cotton out of the warehouses and the Bankhead-Tenant-Landlords finish paying for their farms."

Third Farmer, smiling: "Yes, I understand you now. The Government can change economic laws when wiggle tails quit making mosquitoes and tadpoles quit turning to frogs."

MORAL ECHOES

D. W. Haskew

In recent date Armenian records of an orphan's home have been brought to light. These records were made during the World War. The records show that six ragged, dirty, starving Armenian children came to the home asking for food and a home. The manager told them that they only had room for just one of the six, and that the other five would have to go. The six children stood for a moment their lips quivering with disappointment. Then they walked away and grouped themselves in earnest conversation. Then they returned and said to the manager: "Here, take him," pointing to the strongest one; "He will grow up to be a good Armenian, one who can make Armenia strong and great in years to come." Then the five others saluted and walked away to starve in the devasted desert. Five died that one might live. They died unknown, but their dead will be honored forever.

I saw the water man going to the well with two buckets. They were empty and seemingly I heard one of the buckets say to the other: "How dismal you look as you go empty toward the well." Then the bucket replied, "True, I do feel dismal. I was reflecting on how useless it is for us to be filled for we always come back empty." Then the other bucket spoke up saying: "Dear me, how strange to look at it that way. I was just rejoicing over the fact that no matter how empty we came to the well, we always go away filled to the brim." When we learn to rejoice over our blessings, and not lament over our misfortunes, then life will become cheerful for us.

In one of the sport magazines there was a story of a huntsman who shot a tiger and thought that he had killed him. He ran up to the prostrate form of the tiger, when the furious animal sprang up and seized the hunter's knee between his jaws and crushed the bone. Then he fell back dead. The huntsman found himself unable to walk and his cries for help were not heard. After a short time he forgot the tiger and his broken bones in his terrific struggle against thousands of little ants. They seeme dto come from everywhere and every nerve of his body seemed bored with a hot awl. Just as he had lost hope another huntsman came to him and saved his life. Large sins may sometimes strike a furious blow, but my friends, you had better be on guard against the little sins. They will set every fiber of your being into misery and death.

On the table before a man is a pin and a five dollar bill. He is in great need of both. No one is watching and he knows that to take them will be stealing. Knowing this he steals both the pin and the bill. Now let me ask, was it a greater offense to steal the bill than the pin? A man said to me, "Surely, you don't say that stealing a pin is as great a crime against God as stealing a five dollar bill!" A car is sitting under a pecan tree and a pecan is on the ground by the side of the car. The car and the pecan belong to someone else. Suppose that a boy comes along and steals the pecan and leaves the car. Would he have been more guilty in the sight of God if he had stolen the car and left the pecan? Stealing is stealing. To God there is no difference in the value of a pin than of a bill, a pecan and a car. We should be honest in little things as well as in large things. Honesty is honesty. Stealing is stealing.

One day a friend said to Sam Jones: "Mr. Jones, can you tell me who was the meanest man you ever met?" The preacher thought for a moment and said: "The meanest man I ever met was a fellow who, before his conversion was a drunkard, lived on a rented farm and yet spent two hundred dollars a year for whiskey. Then after he joined the church and God saved him from a drunkard's hell and gave to him a good plantation, and a happy family, murmured and fussed over having to pay his allotment of thirty dollars to keep up his church in the community. That man was willing to pay two hundred dollars a year to be a devil, and was not willing to pay thirty dollars a year to be saved, have property and a happy home." That was rather a terrific blow for some of these stingy saints of his day and of our day. We still pay clubs and parties much and God little.

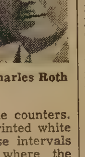
By CHARLES B. ROTH

'HERE COMES THE QUEEN!'

I WAS talking in his office with a man who is head of a large store. I was complimenting him upon the extraordinary courtesy and service a woman told me she always received in that store.



Charles Roth

"My friend says that your salespeople treat her as though she were the queen," I explained.

"Come with me," the executive said, and left his chair, and started downstairs. "I want to show you something."

I followed.

He took me behind the counters. He pointed out neatly printed white cards pasted up at close intervals throughout the store, where the clerks couldn't help seeing.

I read what they said.

"HERE COMES THE QUEEN!"

"It's our slogan," the executive explained. "Yes; it's more than a slogan. It's our watchword, our business policy, to treat every woman who enters the store as though she were the queen."

I happen to know that this policy has paid handsome dividends to the store. As I think it over, however, only in form and expression is that policy different from that of every other organization which advertises for your trade. All have to treat you as though you were the queen—or the king.

Anyone who has been buying much in the stores will tell you that the treatment received from clerks is vastly different from what it was years ago. They are more considerate. They are better informed.

The reason for this change is that they have the ideal which advertising has created in their minds, and to this ideal they must conform.

All over the country, in every newspaper, advertisers are vying with one another in telling the story of their products and in improving their products to make them more acceptable.

Their desire is to produce something fit for the queen—or the king—and their advertising sets up a standard to which they must strive.

In the process you get the best products and service it is possible to provide.

Regarding Veteran Legislation

In reply to a letter written by Mr. Grover A. Bice, former Commander of the Local American Legion Post, he recently received the following letter from the National Rehabilitation Committee of the National Organization. Mr. Bice stated that he had received several inquiries from veterans of this County regarding legislation passed by Congress, and that he wrote a letter of inquiry, receiving the following answer:

"Mr. Grover A. Bice,
Box 137,
Thorsby, Alabama.

"My Dear Mr. Bice:

"This acknowledges your letter received July 5 in which you ask that a copy of all laws passed by the present Congress regarding all World War veterans' widows be furnished you.

"No laws have been enacted to date by the present Congress. H. R. 5452, the so-called American Legion omnibus bill pertaining to the disabled and to widows and orphans and other dependents, passed the Senate as did H. R. 2296 concerning misconduct cases on July 6, 1939. Both bills had previously passed the House but because of amendments in the Senate it is necessary that conference action be had. It is expected that in the near future the completed bills will be sent to the President but it is not known, of course, what his action will be.

'Sincerely,

Local Soil Conservation Unit Of CCC Urges Conservation Of Chilton County Forests

The present dry season will bring on an epidemic of forest fires unless steps are taken to prevent them. Newspapers are already carrying stories of terrible fires in the great forests of the West.

Chilton County forest reserves are already greatly depleted. In the past forest products have played a great part in the economic set-up here. They can be a continued source of revenue if managed properly.

The most important part of preperly managing these forests is to keep fire out. Most forest fires are the result of pure carelessness on the part of someone. Some fires are deliberately set by persons with criminal intent.

Convictions of arsonists were obtained in the courts of several Alabama counties last year. No doubt this will tend to curb the activities of this class.

Try and prevent forest fires in your community! Should a fire occur that cannot be extinguished by the local residents, call the S.C.S. Camp at Clanton, Alabama, phone number 222 or 132 for assistance.

T. L. M'KEE DISCUSSES RECENT ELECTION ON LOCAL MEASURES

"Editor, Chilton County News:

"WILL OUR DEMOCRAT SENATOR REPUDIATE THE WISHES OF THE VOTERS OF CHILTON COUNTY?

"I have stayed clear and had no interest in the local election held on Tuesday, the 11th, at the request of the Senator and Representative. But I cannot stand by any longer and see the wishes of the voters or this County as expressed so overwhelmingly in that election, disregarded, and trampled under foot. I am ready now to join arms in helping the voters secure what they voted FOR at that election.

"I am not going to discuss the merits of these Local Bills, and whether they are a success or not does not mean anything of gain or loss to me But the people have already spoken by their vote, and there is only a principal of Democratic Government at stake. That is whether the people rule by their vote, or whether they be ruled "Back in March, the Senator and Representative suggested to those interested in repealing the County Agent Bill to call a mass meeting and let all parties be heard. Their request was followed out, the mass meeting was held, and the Senator and Representative were present and all parties interested were requested to be present. At that meeting, with the Court House filled, the voice of the meeting was to repeal that local bill. However, the Senator and Representative again in face of that sentiment, insisted upon this proposal and the electing of the County Solicitor, and the creating of an Inferior Court all three be submitted to the people at an election July 11. So the people presumed that if they expressed themselves favorable on these issues at that election that their wishes would be carried out immediately. It was the sentiment from those with whom I have talked, that these local matters approved by the people would be IMMEDIATELY put into effect. Those of you who read the letter of the Senator in the County papers July 6, well know that he meant to abide by the wishes of the people on these three proposals and insisted that all three be submitted to a vote of the people, County-wide, July 11. Well, the people voted on all three issues and all three as shown by the offical returns carried. The papers this week revealed that they were carried by majorities of two or more to one. Is this any indication of what the people of this County want? Or did the Senator mean to be fair to the people and give them what they want?

"The developments show he did not for you will see printed in this week's paper a Local Bill which proposes to abolish the Deputy Solicitor's office of the County, and to create a County Solicitor, who is not to take office until January, 1941. Yes, and in the same paper an Inferior Court Bill is published and a Special Election is being called in that Bill which no doubt the people expected after the election, to be held immediately to elect the Judge of the Inferior Court Why is it that the County Solicitor who draws $100.00 of the taxpayers money and has NO DEFINITE TERM OF OFFICE, but is appointed at the will of the Circuit Solicitor, WHO IS A NON-RESIDENT OF THIS COUNTY, is not made elective at the same Special Election as the Inferior Court Judge? Does it look anything more or less than political influence or selfish political gain that the County Solicitor is not being elected at this same Special Election? Not one penny more would it cost the tax payers to have an opportunity to elect their County Solicitor at the same Special Election.

"Our Senator has said that he does not believe in legislating anyone out of office, and individually I agree with him, but in the second breath he agrees to do the same thing as legislating our County Agent out of office Is this a sincere position, when he will go right ahead and be a party to legislate the County Agent out of office as demanded by the voters, at once, and yet tell the people that he does not believe in legislating the County Solicitor out of office regardless of how they voted. These are plain facts that the people should know.

"I have discussed the variances in these Local Bills with our Representative, and he is ready, willing, and wants to put the Bills through, as demanded by the people, and let them be effective at once, but that due to the insistence of our Senator and realizing that it takes the cooperation of the Senator in the Senate to pass these Local Bills that the Solicitor's Bill is made elective but not to take effect until January 1941. I can't see any difference in the wishes of the people on these Bills and I fully believe that they should be treated alike and the mandate of the voters respected, and all passed to be effective immediately. The Senator in his letter July 6 said he would not consider the vote of the people on one matter unless all three Local Matters were voted on. That was done. Now it is my judgment that if the Senator disregards the wishes of the people on one Local Matter why not disregard the wishes of the people in the whole thing. I think consistency should be a jewel.

"Respectfully,

MISS MARY COURTNEY JONES GETS SCHOLARSHIP RENEWAL

Doctor George F. Donovan, President of Webster College, the Loretto Sisters' four-year College in Webster Grove, Missouri, a suburb of St. Louis, has just announced that the scholarship of Miss Mary Courtney Jones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Jones, Clanton, Alabama, has been renewed for the coming school year.

Miss Jones will be a Senior in September.

To qualify for the renewal of her scholarship at Webster, she was obliged to maintain a grade point average of 1.8, or about 85 per cent, in her studies and participate in two extra-curricular activities The value of the tuition scholarship is $150.00.

These scholarships, regional in character, were awarded to students in six different states, and are part of an educational program to make both Webster College and St. Louis national in the higher education of women.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Shields and daughter of Huntsville and Mr. L. B. Rainey, Jr., of Gadsden were the week end guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Ramsey.

DR. V. J. GRAGG WRITES LETTER REGARDING NEW HIGH SCHOOL

"Editor, Chilton County News:

"In your week before last issue, the editorial 'How Much Longer,' referring to the lack of a building for Chilton County High School, was one of the most timely editorials ever written.

"Maybe some of Chilton's citizens have never stopped to think what it means for Clanton, the county seat and the largest town in the county, located near the center of the county as well as the geographical center of the State, and nearly equal distance between the State's two largest cities; to have no high school building and no prospects of an adequate one in the near future.

"Taking into consideration its location and distance from Birmingham and Montgomery, it should have a high school almost, if not quite, equaling Phillips or Lanier. And taking Clanton's location and rank in the County, it should be expected to have the best school in the county. Certainly the best school in the county should rank at the top and be accredited with entrance to our best colleges and universities, not only in Alabama, but out of State as well.

"Now, I have no one to send to school, so my interest is only that of an ordinary 'disinterested citizen of Chilton County, but I recall that some time ago, a man wanting to send his son to a certain University wrote that institution asking if we had a school in our county system whose graduates could enter without examination, in other words, fully accredited, and the answer was no.

"Now, there can be no question that our county school system should provide one school that could equip its pupils to enter any college or university that might wish to attend

"Clanton is the logical place. No one could consistently contend otherwise. But you ask 'How Much Longer.' Well, it will be twice the seven months referred to, and then some; if the people of Clanton and Chilton County don't begin to realize that this is The Chilton County High and not a school for Clanton and Clanton alone.

"When the powers that be, see it that way, and Clanton and Chilton County put forth a united effort, then and only then, will it be easy to construct a building large enough, good enough, and perfect enough for anyone in the entire county who needs or desires to enter with the assurance that he or she will get all that should be coming to them, and will, when graduated from this, have no fear as to entrance in higher institutions of learning of their choice—truly a county High School. One that would be a monument to our Superintendent, our Board of Education, our parents, our teachers, builders and all concerned.

"If this is not done, and, on the other hand, we allow sectionalism, prejudice, and petty politics to rule and govern the matter, then we will have no county high school in Chilton County or we will have one that is useless as a real prep school—one that the citizens of Chilton County will be ashamed of—one that will, to say the least of it, embarrass all who took an active part in its building. In a few words, a standing monument to the asiminity of its builders.

"Clanton has often bragged that it had no empty houses, and how hard it was to find a house for rent, and how the town grew right on during depressions. But let me tell you, brother: if Clanton don't watch its step, there will be empty houses and rent signs and some of the best people will be moving to some other county where they have real county high school buildings, and are not satisfied to house their leading county high school in a church building indefinitely.

"And citizens of Chilton County, my county, where I have lived all my life—your high schools have never been too good at the best. It has at one time been graded very low. Now, after building to a rather respectable standard, are we going to stand idly by, until the children are thrown in the street, and then get in a great rush and hurry, and accept anything that is 'thrown at you', from a chicken coop up, or, are we looking for the church to carry on?

"Yes, Mr. Editor, I join you: "How Much Longer?" And What Will It Be?

"V. J. GRAGG."

IT'S A SCOOP FOR THE YELLOW FRONT STORE IN BARGAINS

D. L. Blackketer, manager of the Yellow Front Store here, stated this week that he and Mr. M. T. Holliman, manager of the Maplesville Yellow Front, made a trip to Tuscaloosa one day last week and just happened to be at the warehouse of the Sumter Farm and Stock Company when a shipment of dresses arrived.

There were two thousand (plenty of dresses) of these dresses and Mr. Blackketter stated that he had never seen such a display of real honest-to-goodness values in ladies summer dresses. Buyer of this Company purchased an entire floor lot of them and the Clanton and Maplesville stores got their share. Wonderful bargains are being offered in this item, as well as other items in their stores. An advertisement in this issue of the News tells all about these bargains. Turn to it.

CLANTON FOUNDRY IS EQUIPPED FOR ALL TYPES OF WORK

For expert workmanship and real craftsmanship in the repairing of stoves and general foundry work the Clanton Foundry Company will be hard to beat.

C. J. Bossinger and son, expert foundry men of Birmingham, have recently taken over the business, the only one of its kind in this city, formerly operated by Mr. Sam Hanson. This business is located next to the L&N Railroad.

Mr. Bossinger has made extensive improvements around the plant. A complete overhauling has been given the machinery and it now is one of the best equipped small foundrys to be found in Alabama

"CHILD OF EVIL"—Thrilling Serial Story by Octavus Roy Cohen, Will Start in Chilton County News July 27th.

Your Electric Dollars Are Worth $1.67

WITH the cost of government and many other things you pay for much higher than in years past, isn't it a relief to know of at least one thing that has gone down in price with the passing of the years?

On the average, Alabama Power Company residential customers can use 67 per cent more electricity in their homes today for the same amount of money they paid ten years ago. Or, to put it another way, they get today an average of $1.67 worth of electric service for only $1.00!

Besides this, out of each dollar paid it by customers, Alabama Power Company pays 15c in taxes (totaling over 3 million dollars annually) which is used by local, state and federal governments for schools, highways, law enforcement, social welfare, and many other things designed to be of benefit to the individual citizen. So he gets not only dependable electric service at a low price, but many indirect benefits as well.

"Added to individual comfort are the benefits derived from the immense tax paid in by the Alabama Power Company for schools, public welfare and rural development."
—Mrs. J. L. Bishop, 801 Tremont St., Selma, Ala.

"Wherever there is wealth owned by individuals or private enterprises, there is revenue for the State in the form of taxes. There has come from this pioneer institution, the Alabama Power Company, in the State of Alabama, a vast amount of money in taxes with which to build roads, run schools and meet many other obligations of a proud and progressive state, to say nothing of the enhanced value of personal property from which the State enjoys an increased taxation due to its electrical service."
—H. A. Greene, Camp Hill, Ala.

"Besides furnishing excellent service day and night, year in and year out, the Alabama Power Company helps in a great way toward making it possible to educate my child—your child, and your neighbor's child—by contributing over a million dollars annually in taxes just for upkeep of schools."
—Theron Synco, West 5th Ave., Florala, Ala.

"I have five children being educated in the public schools of our State, and when I pay my bill on the first of every month, it is just a contribution to their educational welfare."
—J. W. Boyd, Route 2, Montgomery, Ala.

"I see a State marching on in its upward fight to a higher and nobler place in educational ranks aided and greatly so, by the taxes paid our State by the Alabama Power Company, which that switch represents when it cheerfully floods your home with light."
—John Preston, 1419 Attalla Ave., Gadsden, Ala.

NOTICE OF LOCAL BILL

Notice is hereby given that at the adjourned session of the Legislature of Alabama, which will re-convene on Tuesday, July 18, 1939, there will be introduced the following bill for the relief of J. C. Pattillo, Circuit Clerk of Chilton County, Alabama, for passage and approval.

J. C. PATTILLO,
Clerk.

Said bill will be as follows:

For the relief of J. C. Patillo, Clerk of the Circuit Court of Chilton County, Alabama, and to relieve said Clerk from any and all liability for and on account of fees or compensation received by him under the provisions of General Acts of Alabama, 1931, page 668, for issuing subpoenas before the Grand Jury of Chilton County in cases where no indictments were found, said fees or compensation being in the amount of $81.10.

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF ALABAMA:

Section 1: Whereas, under the provisions of General Acts of Alabama, 1931, page 668, subpoenas were issued for necessary witnesses to be and appear before the Grand Jury of Chilton County, and Whereas, said Act did provide for the payment to the Clerk the same fees as for issuing other subpoenas and Whereas, said Clerk did collect the same fees, being 25c for issuing each of said subpoenas out of the Fine & Forfeiture Fund of Chilton County, the total amount of said fees collected being $81.10, and Whereas, the Attorney General of Alabama, has held in his official opinion that said fees could not legally be paid out of the Fine & Forfeiture Fund of the County, and Whereas, the State Examiner of Accounts has charged the said J. C. Pattillo, Clerk of the Circuit Court with said sum of $81.10. And Whereas, the said J. C. Pattillo, Clerk has performed the duties and services as provided in said general laws, Acts 1931, page 668, THEREFORE,

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF ALABAMA:

Sertion 2: That J. C. Pattillo, Clerk of the Circuit Court of Chilton County, Alabama, be and he is hereby relieved from any and all liability for and on account of said fees received by said J. C. Pattillo, Clerk, out of the Fine & Forfeiture Fund of the county, in performance of his duties in issuing subpoenas for necessary witnesses before the Grand Jury, as provided by General Act of Alabama, 1931, page 668.

Section 3: That all laws and parts of laws in conflict with the provisions of this Act be and the same are hereby repealed.

Alabama Business Continues To Pick Up

Business has enjoyed a steady rise in Alabama during the first five months of this year, reports Langston T. Hawley instructor in statistics in the School of Commerce and Business Administration at the University of Alabama, who has just completed an exhaustive study of the state's business activities.

According to the results of this study which appeared in the July issue of the University of Alabama Business News, a monthly publication of the Bureau of Business research, building construction in Alabama measured by floor area and value of contracts awarded was larger during the first five months of 1939 than in any corresponding period since 1930.

Employment also increased from January to May of this year, but the small increase was not sufficient to bring the number on payrolls to the 1937 level, he stated.

Sales activity in Alabama during the first five months was higher than during the same period in 1938. New cars sold during this period exceeded not only the sales in the early months of 938 but of every similar period since 931, he declared.

The dollar volume of retail sales of all types of independent stores was found to be 10.6 per cent higher than during the first five months of 1938.

ATTENDANCE RECORD BROKEN AT BIBLE LYCEUM LAST SUNDAY

With all attendance records broken, last Sunday night, the Bible Lyceum program under the direction of Evangelist Mitchell R. Garrett, continues with increasing interest as indicated by the nightly attendance.

The merging of Bible preaching with screen illustrations and music, makes a diversified spiritual menu which has been proved a successful method of evangelism by Mr. Garrett and his associates. The large nightly attendance with the Sunday night overflow at the Lyceum tent, indicates that the general public appreciates this method of gospel services.

The following program has been announced:

Thursday night: "Will Hell Ever Burn Out, And How Long Will Sinners Burn?"

Friday night: "God's Last Call, And Will Rome Rule Or Ruin?"

Saturday 3 P.M.: Sabbath School, and 4 P.M. preaching service.

Sunday night: "Should Clanton Have Sunday Baseball and Movies?. What Should Be The Attitude of Preachers, Polticians, and Laymen?"

Because of the public's interest in these announced subjects the evangelistic party is expecting large crowds each night. Every available seat will be brought into use Sunday night, because of the particular interest in this subject. Mr. Garrett has promised an additional number of seats will be provided for the overflow.

The usual cordial invitation is extended to all.

DOUBLE MURDER

. . . all because Kirk Reynolds, ne'er-do-well gambler, returns to Beverly, a Southern resort city. The grim-faced, taciturn gambler forces young, beautiful Kay Forrest to marry him. Barney Hamilton, in love with Kay, must wait patiently while she obeys Reynolds' every command, not knowing that she alone holds the key to the mystery of Cathedral Gardens.

How the god of chance untangles the lives of these young people, restoring their happiness, makes one of the most fascinating stories ever written by that master story teller, Octavus Roy Cohen.

TO CONDUCT REVIVAL MEETING

The Midsummer Revival will begin at the Temple Church, 3 miles southeast of Clanton, Sunday, July 30, to continue through Sunday, August 13, or longer.

Rev. and Mrs. Troy B. Helms (shown above) our new pastor, will have charge. A great feature will be the special music and singing by Rev. and Mrs. Helms.

Mrs. Helms wll also conduct Junior Church each Tuesday, Friday and Sunday, beginning at 7:00 P.M.

It will be remembered that Rev. and Mrs. Helms were in charge of the singing at the Council meeting of The Assembly of God, held at the Clanton Gospel Tabernacle last October. They have also been attending the various singings over the county.

A cordial invitation is being extended to surrounding churches to come and help out in this drive for lost souls. Come praying for a great revival, and if you can't come, then pray, anyway.—Amon Jones, Secretary.

DEATH OF JOHNIE ONEAL SCARBROUGH

The death angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jasper Scarbrough and took away their precious little darling infant son, Johnie Oneal Scarbrough on May 13.

The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away. We know our loss is heaven's gain. We miss him so much, but the Lord took him to make heaven brighter. We just want to live the life so we can meet him in heaven. He is gone but not forgotten.

He leaves to mourn his loss, his mother, father, two sisters, Mrs. Winfred Cleckler and Mrs. Roy Knight, three brothers, Junior, Eugene and Edword Scarbrough.

NEW TRACTOR WITH "CULT VISION" PREVIEWED IN B'HAM

"I couldn't believe it until I saw it," said Mr. W. M. Polk of Polk Brothers Motor Company, who has just attended a preview of the new Farmall-A tractor, held at Birmingham by the International Harvester Company.

"This latest rubber-tired addition to the Farmall line,' 'continued Mr. Polk, "which sells for a new low Farmall price, brings the grower of row crops something he has never had before—full vision of the work that is being done directly under the tractor. Just as television brings the radio listener something he has never been able to see, so the Farmall-A enables the man who is cultivating corn or other row crops to see what he is doing without having to crane his neck or twist his body.

"It's all in the design of the tractor," said Mr. Polk. "The engine is cleverly placed so it does not obstruct the view of the rows. The driver rides easily in a comfortable sponge-rubber upholstered seat and watches the cultivator shovels at the same close range that is possible on a horse-drawn riding cultivator.

"It's suprising," Mr. Polk said further, "how much more power and low-cost service have been built into the new Farmall-A. It will bring power farming to the man who farms small acreage, with 40 to 50 acres under cultivation. It will also be welcomed by the big grower who needs a second or a third tractor to supplement the power of his larger tractor.

"A complete line of quick-attachable field machines has been designed to fit the Farmall-A. The owner will be independent of horse power and freed from the tiresome chores and expensive upkeep of horses.

"At its interesting low price this new Farmall-A will be in big demand immediately. Production at the factory is in full swing and samples should arrive soon. Nothing of such importance has happened in the agricultural implement field for a long time. Growers in this vicinity will look forward with interest to seeing and trying out the new Farmall-A as soon as the first shipment arrives."

Petroleum Industries Convention July 25-26

Mr. D. H. Bohler, Chairman, Alabama Petroleum Industries Committee, has announced that the Second Annual Convention of that organization would be held in Montgomery on Tuesday and Wednesday, July 25th and 26th.

In commenting on the success of the Convention held last year, he stated that every thing pointed to an even better one this year, with an even greater attendance. Those attending will reap benefit from an excellent program of entertainment, as well as nationally known speakers on subjects of interest to them and their customers, the motor vehicle owners of the State, he said.

All oil men, including service station dealers and their employees, are invited to attend and participate.

nishing necessary materials, the Club was able to have these layettes made by the girls working on the project, at a minimum of expense Services of this project will also be available to the Pilot Club for making toys and repairing used toys for distribution at Christmas. The Department of Public Welfare will be happy to contact any other organization interested in working out similar plans for distribution of Christmas toys.

From the beginning, this project has enjoyed the whole-hearted cooperation and support of the public. When Court was in session and the courtroom was not avilable, the girls were permitted to use the church building of the Church of Christ and the conference room at the office of the County Farm Demonstration Agent. Later the custodian of the courthouse made available a room in the courthouse for the project.

The County Home Demonstration Agent, the local Vocational Home Economics Instructor and the County Health Nurse have given most generously of their time and efforts to the upbuilding of this project. Valuable suggestions, pamphlets, etc., have come from these agencies and interested individuals have contributed patterns for use on the project.

The Department of Public Welfare wishes to take this opportunity of publicly expressing its gratitude to all those individuals and agencies who have helped in making a succes of this project. Especially do we wish to thank Mullins & Scott for so graciously permitting the use of their show windows for display purposes.

We hope that every citizen of Chilton County will see this display which is entirely the work of NYA girls. The arrangement of the display itself is the work of the girls, and the poster was contributed by one of our very talented NYA student workers. Don't fail to see it.

Application forms and information may be secured from the vocation agriculture teachers at Isabella High School, Jemison High School and Chilton County High School or R.M. Foshee and O. H. Lawrence, county FSA Advisory Committeemen. Applications made in this county are submitted for examination of the local FSA Advisory Committee, composed of residents of this county. Approved loans will be certified by this committee within the limits of the funds available for the present fiscal year's program.

Land must be bought at reasonable prices and must be capable of affording an abundant living for the family and margin of profit necessary to meet loan payments. FSA will not list land far sale, said Marvin Durbin. Options may be taken for lands only after the applications have been approved. The FSA will recognize no obligation to buy until after appraisal of land and official approval of the purchase proposition. Farm and home plans will be made out for each farm considering the available family labor and the production possibilities of the farm to be bought. No loan will be approved in this program where the farm and home plan does not reveal sufficient probable income to justify adequate farm buildings. All services of the Rural Rehabilitation program will be made available to farm families who acquire land in this program, concluded Mr. Durbin.

CHILTON COUNTY NEWS

Misery And Poverty Come Thru Dissension

Community Interest In Its Editorial Policy Is The Cornerstone Of This Newspaper.

VOL. XVII — CLANTON, ALABAMA, JULY 27, 1939 — EIGHT PAGES — NUMBER 41

We Observe

By BONNIE HAND

A JOB WELL DONE—

The Clanton Lions shoved us off the page last week—but we didn't mind. We'er glad to get pushed around by fellows like that, anyway. That was a pet ambition of ours—to see that the Clanton cemetery was made presentable, so we relinquished this column and tipped our hat to this energetic group of roaring Lions.

And too, it was really hot those two days the work was going on, and we kept quiet, afraid of conscription you know.

We See By The Dailies—

This is not an editorial against newspapers that write editorials on matters about which they are not informed, but it is becoming almost daily that we find in the editorial columns of some of the Alabama daily newspapers, editorials on a certain matter which, from the course of their remarks, they know little about. This is the matter of the Tuscaloosa-Montgomery Highway, and the part Chilton County plays in said matter.

We are not blaming these newspapers for keeping up the agitation for this road---it is to their interests. What we are blaming them for is in raising a big fuss that in the long run will gain them nothing. In fact the big noise they are creating daily drives from their door that which they seek. It is almost amusing.

These editorial writers say Chilton County is not cooperating in the least in the matter. The University Highway is scheduled to pass through the southwestern section of this County, and they are wailing that we are not willing to foot our share of the expenses of building this road. Put all these editorials and news stories in a sack---shake well, and here's the sum total of what falls out.:" . . . They tell us that Judge Smith is holding up the project. . . " " . . . They tell us that Chilton County is not willing to bear its share of the expense because the proposed road does not go by way of Clanton, the county seat. . . " You've heard of course, the old saying about how much confidence can be placed in "what they say."

Now let us take a short cut off the University Highway, that, everyone agrees is Alabama's most important undeveloped highway in the State. That statement has been included in every editorial ever written about this matter. Thats what we call "agitation") Let's go down the Birmingham-Montgomery Highway south of Clanton until we come to where the old Birmingham-Montgomery Highway branches off towards Marbury, Deatsville, and on to Montgomery. It has been known for years that this was an important road, and should be paved. In our judgment, it is of utmost importance that this road be surfaced all the way, and why not do it before biting off a chew as big as the proposed Tuscaloosa road.?

There is only about one mile of this road in Chilton County, and Chilton County wants that mile paved. But what has happened? The Highway Department that is feeding the daily boys the stuff about Chilton County being the wrench in the machinery saw fit to negotiate for the completion of this road on up to the Chilton County line. There it stopped. The Department does not want to talk about cooperating with Chilton County in getting this section paved—but they do want to talk about Chilton County plunking down thousands for the Tuscaloosa project, when this one mile of road would mean about as much to Chilton as the whole of the "University Highway." Now speaking of "cooperation," high-pressure boys; how's that for cooperation.

Right here we'll borrow the daily boys' phrase "they tell us." And here's what they tell us: That Chilton County doesn't even know what is expected of it in the project. The Highway Department has been asked point blank what would be Chilton's share, and in what kind of proposition the State might be interested.

The only answer Chilton has received from newspaper headlines and editorials to effect that it is the monkey wrench in the machinery. That is what we are inclined to dubb "high pressure."

Our opinion in Chilton County will do its part in any worthwhile road building when these high-handed methods being used are abandoned by the Department and the newspapers. Right now Chilton County has more paved road between Tuscaloosa and Montgomery than any other county. Let Bibb, Tuscaloosa and Autauga match what Chilton has—in other words do more work than talking, and they'll find Chilton will deliver the goods.

The Centreville Press says that it hasn't quite figured out yet whether or not Chilton's lack of cooperation is a political move or not. A thorough investigation by the Press might lead it to the conclusion that the politics is on the other side of the fence.

CANTALOUPES

He Found Them Here In Chilton County

The Birmingham News hit a responsive chord among county-reared newspapermen when it recently dwelt at length on the poor quality of cantaloupes to be had nowadays as compared with the delicious melons of our childhood. We remember the Rocky Ford melons of central Georgia back 25 years ago with a watering mouth. The cantaloupes of today may be firmer, more easily shipped without damage and more attractively colored than the Rocky Ford, but we shall never see small boys eating them down to the rind. Yes, we need another Burbank to bring back the old Rocky Ford cantaloupe.

P.S. This reminds us of the farmer who wrote Sears, Roebuck he couldn't find the handle to the cream seperator. However, before mailing the letter, he found the handle so he added a postcript: "Please disregard the above. I found the handle." Then he mailed the letter.

Since writing this squib about cantaloupes, we have found some real Rocky Fords in Alabama, and our lament about Alabama's short-comings in this respect may be disregarded. For the information of our readers, we located them in Chilton County between Jemison and Clanton. Now if we could just find some real Georgia rattlesnake watermellons, our joy would be complete.—Alabama News Digest.

FOX HUNTERS

Buddy Ellison Elected President Chilton Co. Association

Wednesday evening, July 19, some one hundred and twenty-five sportsmen attended the supper and fox hunt sponsored by Buddy Ellison at Dixie's new camp.

The crowd gathered about 5:30 p. m. and started admiring each other's hounds and bragging on their own. (Fox hunters will brag on their own dogs.)

Buddy had offered a new horn to the best horn blower. Just before supper, a committee composed of John Armstrong, Cleve Littlefield and Mr. Patrick were asked to act as Judges. Hugh were asked to act as judges. Hugh Ware of Autauga County and Phillip Headley and Jess Davis of Chilton had to blow in the finals and Mr. Jess Davis of Stanton won the horn.

SEPTEMBER 26-30 SHOULD BE IMPORTANT DATE FOR CHILTON COUNTY

Advance reports concerning the Alabama State Fair to be held in Birmingham week of October 2-7 state that "Alabama On Parade" will be the general theme of the Fair this year. This means that emphasis will placed on what Alabama is producing and can produce in the way of all kinds of products.

It is our opinion that the same should apply this year to the Chilton County Fair, the date of which has been set for the week of September 26-30. Emphasis should be placed on what Chilton County is producing and can produce to make it an even more progressive county.

We have this Summer seen the beginning of what has been termed a large scale peach industry in Chilton County. The harvest this Fall will find our people with an abundance of fruit of the soil, and other products that our people have produced by the sweat of their brows. The week of September 26-30 should see "Chilton County on parade," not in a small way but a big way. Besides the cash premiums that will go to the producers of these products, what greater satisfaction can be derived from a year of labors, than placing on exhibition the cream of the Chilton County crop?

For Chilton County to stage a fair that will do credit to its people, it will require the interest and help of Chilon County people—one and all. We should not this year be satisfied to equal last year's fair. That was last year, and the march of progress is from day to day. This year should be the time we stage the fair of fairs.

Keeping in mind that it is cooperation that makes great things possible, let Chilton County, Clanton, each Community and each individual work toward a bigger and better Fair during the week of September 26-30.

Virgil Headley Out Under Bond

Following the preliminary trial before Justice of the Peace J. L. Wilson last Friday morning, Virgil Headley, charged with the murder of Lorenza Mims on July 7, was allowed to make bond in the amount of $3,000.00.

Headley's bond was made shortly after the trial, and he was released from Chilton County Jail where he had been held since the shooting. Headley is alleged to have shot and killed Mims during an argument over some watermelons. The charge from a 12-gauge shotgun took effect in Mims left shoulder, killing him instantly.

UNEMPLOYMENT

Little Chance Of Farmers Being Used

The employment division of the Works Projects Administration (formerly Works Progress Administration) of Alabama is expecting a deluge of applications for work from farmers of the state who will be in need of additional work to supplement their low farm income this year, according to Colonel W. G. Henderson, Administrator for Alabama.

The WPA of Alabama accepted approximately 70,000 farm families as eligible for part time employment under the special arrangement to supplement their low income during 1938. As this group was accepted under what we term the farmula basis, rather than the usual qualifications for eligibility for relief work, they are not considered relief eligibles. With the amount made available under the present appropriations it is definitely known that this group cannot be considered on the former basis. The only help available to these farm families will be on the needs basis.

No encouragement for such relief in this matter was seen in statements

THIRTY DAY WPA LAY-OFF WILL AFFECT THOUSANDS IN ALABAMA

By Billy Smith

Several thousands of persons employed on the rolls of the Works Projects Administration in Alabama will be affected by that part of the 1939 Relief Appropriation Act, which provides that any person, employed on WPA projects for a continuous period of eighteen months shall be removed from such employment, according to Colonel W. G. Henderson, Administrator for Alabama.

In making this announcement, Colonel Henderson cited that section of the Act which leaves no alternative for the administration in removing these people from the WPA rolls.

Machinery for this action is already set up and notices will go to approximately 16,000 certified workers in Alabama advising them that they are being removed from the rolls due to their continuous employment for eighteen months by WPA. In these notices Colonel Henderson states:

"Your attention is called to the fact that you will be ineligible, under the terms of the Act, for recertification or reemployment until thirty days after the date of your removal, and in addition, the Act requires that your eligibility be recertified before you can again be employed on a WPA project."

Which means, Colonel Henderson explained, that these persons who are removed must, after thirty days, make new applications for reassignment for work through the regular channels set up for this purpose by the local County Departments of Public Welfare.

"It must be thoroughly understood," he said, "that the Act specifically states this and by Act, I mean the law and when a person makes application for reassignment to work under WPA their cases will be investigated as has been done in the past, and no exception will be made. We have several of persons who have been awaiting assignment to work and we intend, to the best of our ability to give them work insofar as the quota for the State will permit."

If, when thirty days have expired for these workers who are notified, they are unable to get a job in private employment and are still in need, they may make immediate application to their local Department of Public Welfare for recertification. If eligible,, and recertified, these workers will be reassigned as jobs become available within limitations of quota.

SELF-SUSTAINING FARMS

A mighty lot of stuff has been written about the farm, farmers and farming—much of it pure bunk, some of it worthwhile, and practicable; a little of it sound and sensible. The recommendation that "continued emphasis should be placed upon making farms self-sustaining through the production of food for the family and feed for the livestock and poultry," embraced in the report of the Legislature's Joint Committee on Agriculture, is, in our judgment, the soundest logic. The report continues:

"For diversity of production, better balance in farming and higher income in both cash and products consumed," the committee recommended that each farmer adopt a program based upon land use, as follows:

"1. Having enough land on every farm in food and feed crops to feed the farm family, the tenants, and the livestock.

"2. Obtaining the best yield possible from the allotted acreage to cotton, peanuts and other cash crops.

"3. Growing enough corn, hay, pastures and other feed crops for livestock, including poultry ,that will supply home needs and produce surplus livestock for sale.

"4. Taking proper care of timber by keeping fire out and harvesting timber wisely rather than slaughtering it as has been done in so many instances. These two practices should double the income from timber.

"The above program will (1) use wisely all the land each farmer has, (2) keep farm labor employed all of each year, (3) give farmers a daily income as well as an anuual income, (4) improve the soil and maintain its fertility, and (5) increase the income of farmers in cash as well as in products consumed on the farm and in the farm home."

WHAT PRICE ECONOMY

Not so many months ago a convict camp was located in Henry County (because Houston County did not want it, so the story goes) in order to get the services of the convicts for the building and maintaining state roads. By some, it was thought of as means of adding some revenue to the business of the county. The convicts are now being used for road construction, but is that all the story. In the name of economy these outlaws are usurping the jobs of honest, upright, self-respecting citizens—some of whom have held their jobs over a long period of time. These people who have been supplanted by convicts, some of whom have families to support, are now without employment. Jobs are scarce and for some it will be a difficult thing to get employment sufficient to support a family.

Economy is vital to institutions and and businesses. We all like to know that economy is being practiced in the handling of tax monies, but there is such a thing as false economy. For a farmer to starve his mules for the sake of economizing on a feed bill would be foolish and end in disaster. For the state to save a few dollars here, while at some other place it may be wasting thousands, seems to be poor management to say the least. A state's citizens should be its greatest asset, especially the law-abiding type. Instead of reducing the number of jobs, some provision should be made to create more jobs for those who need the work and want to work. We repeat that we favor consistent economy, but in some instances a multitude of sins are covered up and lasting injury is done in the name of economy.—Abbeville Herald.

D. W. Haskew

A story comes to us from the long ago of a certain king who desired of his subjects an expression of appreciation and dedication. This king promised that there should be a special demonstration at the altar of the Church were the gifts and dedications were made when the gift was made; that would please him well. Multitudes came and rich and rare were the gifts placed upon the altar. Gold, silver, gems, stones large and valuable, but nothing unusual appeared at the altar. At last a poorly clad girl came down the aisle and all eyes were turned toward her. It was whispered here and there: "Poor thing, she has nothing to give and why does she come?" This young lady on reaching the altar knelt and folding her hands she placed them upon the altar among the gifts rich and rare. At that moment three large white lillies sprang from beyond the altar and the king's voice was heard to say: "This beautiful child has brought her all and it pleases the king well." Do you want to please the King of kings? Then come to his sacred altar and there kneel, dedicating yourself to Him and then place your hands upon His altar for service to your fellowman. That will please the King well.

Our train stopped at a town in the desert sands of the west. All to the South of the track there were beautiful homes, growing shrubbery, and extensive farms. I asked of a citizen who came to meet the train: "Why is it that you have such splendid farms to the south of the road and on the north there is nothing but blistering sands." The man pointed to the mountains to the South saying: "Do you see those lines along that upper range. Those are dikes and they hold the water of the melted snow and once each week this water is turned upon this valley to irrigate our farms." Then the man added: "That blistering sand over there will produce like this if it only had water." That gave to me an idea of the real need of every human life. When we are connected with God then we are productive All that the worst of us need is God's spirit to irrigate.

The race of today is running wild after the luxuries of life. They run from one center to another after the luxuries. They know that they will have the necessities of the flesh because they have money and the power of production. Luxuries possessed creates selfishness. The man who bows down to nothing can never bear the burden of himself. God is not a luxury. He is a necessity. Men may worship mankind, science, himself, luxury, but in all of these he only receives a baptism of selfishness and a benediction of vanity. It is time for the race to turn its attention, not to the luxuries of life, but to the necessities of life. Food, rainment, culture, happiness, peace, God. These will produce unselfishness and from them we will receive a baptism of the life abundant and a benediction of love.

In our advancements it is so easy to lose sight of the fellow who is behind us. Anyone with a classical training may forget the man who has not been favored with his culture. A preacher pastor of this type was approached by one of his hearers who said to him: "Pastor, I am sure that you are giving to us splendid sermons, but they seem to be over our heads, and many of us suffer because we cannot understand them." The preacher replied: "Well, my brother, I can't furnish brains for you." The smart man can take his super thoughts and put them in practical simplicity. The really great man has the power to lead others to live in his thoughts.

People can't fool a burglar by leaving the lights on. They have other ways of finding out if we are at home. They can ring the door bell, call over the phone. They can knock on the back door as if for a handout. When we are not at home a skilled burglar can soon find it out. His majesty, the Devil, has no trouble in finding out if we are really religious. We may have Bibles on the table, Sunday school literature scattered around, but you know the devil has a way of peeping into churches to see if we are there. The devil is a wise old guy and he can find out the truth about folks. We can put up all forms for deception, but the devil knows when we are trying to deceive him. He has a way of checking up on us.

TRUTH about ADVERTISING

By CHARLES B. ROTH

MONTAIGNE'S 'GREAT REGISTER'

IF EVERYTHING else that gifted writer, Michael Equem de Montaigne, wrote were to disappear, the world would still be indebted to him for his ideas on what he called his "great register."

Montaigne was a Frenchman who lived and wrote 400 years ago. Now admired excessively by a few readers, he's almost forgotten by the world at large. But every time you read an advertisement in your newspaper, you do homage to his memory.

For it was his idea that people, who want to buy, need some place where they can get information about the products which others have to sell. In Montaigne's time the buyer had to look for the seller, the seller had to look for the buyer.

Charles Roth

Montaigne proposed a register to be posted where all might see. Here the owners of things they wanted to sell would list them. Here also those who had needs would list those needs. Buyer and seller would thus be brought together.

It was a good idea. It still is a good idea. Every time, indeed, you look over the "ads" in your newspaper you express your approval of the idea.

Sellers tell you what they have. You save time and money because you compare what one seller offers with what another offers. You judge which is the better value.

Norman Angell, the English writer, wished that someone had advertised more in England when he set out to buy a horse scraper for some farming operations he had on hand.

He scanned the advertisements. No scrapers. He wrote a few manufacturers he knew. No scrapers. Later he came to America and in Chicago discovered, through an advertisement, of a horse scraper for sale. He looked into the matter—and found it was made within 20 miles of his English farm.

That you have a "great register" coming to you regularly, with the day's best opportunities to buy the things you need, is one of the beatitudes of living in America and in these modern times.

You do not, like Mr. Angell, have to fret and worry and search for what you need. You merely open the pages of the newspaper, and, lo, there right in front of you, you find a world of useful things from all over the world.

The more you rely upon the "great register" of modern life to help you in your buying, the more you get from every penny you spend. The best values, the best merchandise, the best prices—they comprise the contents of that useful, indispensable modern version of Montaigne's sound idea.

The morning was pleasantly cool and the bed was comfortable so that when the first knock sounded on the oak panels of the door Kay Forrest burrowed more deeply into the pillows, pressed her young body closer against the mattress and sleepily tried to ignore the summons.

For a brief ecstatic moment the girl dropped off again into a deep sleep, but this time the knock at the door was more insistent and a woman's voice came to her, determined but carefully subdued so that the other members of the household would not be disturbed. It was Miss Maynard's voice, and somehow, perfectly modulated as it was, one could not hear that voice and believe that Miss Maynard ever failed of having her way. This time she said, "Five o'clock, Kay."

Kay Forrest threw off the sheet which covered her. She called to the unseen person, "All right, Miss Maynard, I'll be right down." She walked across the room in her bare feet, poured water from an ancient china pitcher into an equally ancient wash-bowl, dipped her hands in the crystal fluid, splashed water plentifully on her face, laved slender throat and soft, white shoulders; shivered, and finally succeeded in opening wide her sleep-laden eyes.

She sat on a chair—a dignified old chair upholstered in red—and drew silk stockings over firm young legs. She slipped her feet into shoes ridiculously small. Then she walked to the window and for just a few moments stood looking down upon the haze which hung over the Gardens.

Cathedral Gardens at dawn! Gray shot through with crimson and yellow and the delicate white of young blossoms. Cypress trees with brownish gray trunks rising from lagoons of onyx. Overhead a canopy of gray Spanish moss casting deep shadows. It was very black there under the cypress trees; black as midnight, save where here and there the girl's keen young eyes could discern a splash of brilliance; the brilliance of sub-tropical flowers.

Beyond the Gardens lay the grim waste which was called Little Moccasin Swamp; ugly and forbidding. Yet from that waste these Gardens had been claimed—Gardens of such exquisite beauty that the girl at the upstairs window forgot that she had been sleepy, forgot that her whole nineteen years of life had been spent within six miles of this spot, forgot everything save that here Nature and man had collaborated to produce a place of such exquisite beauty that it was always new and always overwhelming.

Reluctantly, Kay moved away from the window. A minute later, clad in a simple dress of light blue, she tiptoed into the hallway and down the steps. Miss Christine Maynard was waiting in the dining-room. Miss Maynard said, "The coffee's ready, Kay. And we'll have to hurry."

Kay glanced at her companion over the rim of her coffee-cup. Miss Maynard now . . . well, she wasn't pretty. Somehow, you had to think of her as efficient. Just that. Thirty-eight—and Miss Maynard admitted it honestly and somewhat defiantly—immaculately tailored even at this absurdly young hour; black hair meticulously arranged, light tweed suit seeming as though just to have escaped from the pressing iron, brown eyes cool and observing, voice sharp but kindly. That was Christine Maynard of New York: Christine Maynard, spinster, who was by profession an art photographer and by nature a thwarted mother. Christine Maynard who was spending weeks at Cathedral Gardens making photographic studies.

They were utterly different, these two: Kay, just half Miss Maynard's age, possessing a buoyancy and freshness and vivid beauty which Miss Maynard lacked and envied. But then Kay envied the older woman her poise, her certainty, her assured sophistication. And between them there was this in common: that beauty, such beauty as lay just beyond the door, overpowered them; that they could look at each other with the certain knowledge that another pair of eyes was seeing what theirs was seeing, that another brain was translating it into the same emotional reaction.

They walked from the house to the edge of what had once been part of the swamp; Kay Forrest helping Miss Maynard with her bulky photographic equipment. This was stowed in half of the middle seat of a dun-colored bateau which was hitched informally to an oak post with a bit of thin rope. Miss Maynard sat with her camera on this seat and relaxed, after a fashion, against the high back.

Dating back before Kay's birth, the South had been blessed with spots of beauty so outstanding as to place them on a plane above mere loveliness. There was the famous Azalea Trail of Mobile, and certain places in the coastal country of South Carolina and Georgia where Nature had concentrated its generosity. And these spots came to be known as Gardens, though some of them extended for miles and some were reckoned in acres.

In most instances, Nature had begun the work by providing a luxury of bloom and color more intense than average. Then man had developed and organized this beauty. Where hundreds of bushes blazed with a riot of color, thousands more had been planted. The work had been done artistically, so that there were breath-taking vistas of blossoms. There were gardens which were formal and some which were informal. All were astonishingly, unbelievably, beautiful.

And years ago the first tourists, returning from winter vacations in Florida, had discovered these places which southerners had taken for granted. The fame of the various Gardens spread and became national, then international. Good roads were built so that the Gardens could be visited comfortably, railroads inaugurated excursions during the season of greatest floral perfection. Old families responded to the sudden popularity of their places by cultivating them with greater care and expertness, and by charging admission fees to strangers.

And it was this custom which had given one woman a vision beyond any other vision which the South had known. To Ruth Hamilton had come the idea of snatching from the gray waste of the swamp a few hundred acres, and of creating beauty where there had been only grim ugliness. The work had been long and arduous, but this spring Cathedral Gardens had become a new shrine.

Today, as on every other day, Kay Forrest could not believe that this had recently been like the rest of Little Moccasin Swamp: dreary and menacing. The underbrush had been cleared away; the water was unblemished by drift. And here and there through the vaulted arches she could see islands, ablaze with Indian azalea. Each tiny island was a living flame of color; rich red and pink and magenta. There were no leaves to be seen; merely a welter of color splotching the gray-and-black of cypress and moss and water. In this hushed hour the place was unearthly, and to have conversed would have seemed sacrilege. So Miss Maynard did not speak until they approached an island near the edge of the Gardens, an island larger than the rest, an island rising from the water and rioting with color. Then Miss Maynard said, "We'll stop here."

The bateau nosed into the bank, and Miss Maynard stepped out, carrying her photographic equipment. The older woman was quietly efficient. She critically surveyed the spot she had chosen, scrutinized the light sifting through the gray moss; expertly appraising camera angles and backgrounds; observing the rich magnificence of azalea bushes, and noting with approval a great live oak rising majestically from the middle of the island. She said, "This will do, Kay. Come along."

Kay Forrest helped. She offered no comment, but watched Miss Maynard as the camera was set up at a proper vantage spot. And while Miss Maynard was experimenting with camera and tripod and lens, Kay Forrest walked to the water's edge and stared into the infinite beauty.

She didn't hear Miss Maynard approach, and she was startled by the touch of Miss Maynard's hand on her shoulder.

Miss Maynard said, "It gets you, doesn't it, Kay?"

The girl smiled: "Always."

"You're a peculiar little thing . . ."

"Because I love this?"

"Perhaps. You were raised in Beauregard County. You've known these swamps all your life—"

"But not as they are now. Oh! I reckon it seems crazy, but I've always wondered why somebody else didn't understand how lovely the swamp could be."

"And now someone has." Miss Maynard's eyes twinkled. "I don't suppose Barney Hamilton has anything to do with this joy of yours, has he?"

Kay's eyes crinkled at the corners. "Barney's pretty swell. I like being teased about him."

"You should. He's rather gone off the deep end about you."

"Really?"

"What do you think?"

"I'm scared to say." Kay touched the hand of the older woman. "Whatever it is, Miss Maynard, I can't help being happy. I suppose . . . well, I suppose I've just discovered what fun it is to be alive. And I enjoy posing for you, too."

"I see." Dryly. "You merely responded to the summons of Art. You left your home in Beverly to uplift the rotogravure sections of newspapers." Miss Maynard's eyes had a gentle, faraway look. "Listen, Child, keep what you've got. Make the most of it. Of this natural beauty, of your youth, of Barney . . . There I go, talking like a silly, sentimental old maid . . ."

Miss Maynard turned away. Her voice was impersonal again, professional. "I'm going to take two or three shots by that live oak yonder. Better get your clothes off."

Easily, naturally—without embarrassment or false modesty—the girl removed dress and slip and shoes and stockings. She stood forth in the dawn, firm and young and beautiful; her youthful figure touched by the first rays of the sun. She said, "You're sure my face will never show in these pictures, Miss Maynard?"

"Don't be absurd. I'm using you as part of the background. Silhouettes."

HOMECOMING AND MEMORIAL DAY AT OLD BETHESDA SET FOR JULY 30

Friends And Relatives Of The Late Rev. Darius S. Martin Will Gather At Old Church Made Into "Martin Memorial" Near Equality In Coosa County

Sunday, July 30, is the date set for the Annual Homecoming and Memorial Day services at the Old Bethesda, (Martin Memorial) Church, located near Equality, Alabama, in Coosa County. It is on this day that friends and relatives of the late beloved Rev. Darius S. Martin will gather at the old Church that he loved so well, and commemorate the life and work of this minister of the Gospel, who passed away at the ripe old age of 82, in 1933.

For nearly a century there has stood nestled in the hills of Coosa, a little Baptist Church by the name of Bethesda. Not many years ago, before the death of Rev Martin, a new building was erected near the native site of Old Bethesda, and the old church was abandoned. Rev. Martin was reluctant to see the old frame dwelling destroyed in which he had consecrated himself to a life of service, and in which he had worshipped for more than a half-century, so he purchased it and let it stand. A few years later, in 1933, Rev. Martin, loved by all who knew him, passed away and was buried in the little cemetery near the church he loved.

In tribute to him, the old building was repaired and renovated, and with the four acres of ground surrounding the church and cemetery, was made into a memorial for Rev. Darius S. Martin, and his work of character building. His sons, J. Mell Martin of Clanton and Silas Martin of Wetumpka, were in charge of the work. Many friends and relatives who loved this man, voiced a desire to have a part in the work, and for these loyal friends a permanent scroll bearing their names, now adorn the walls of the building.

Articles most sacred to the venerable minister during his life, including his books and other equipment from his study were arranged and dedicated with the building.

By action of the Central Baptist Association in session following the death of Rev. Martin on April 14, 1933, the first Memorial Day was set for the following October 18, at which time a large crowd of friends gathered to pay tribute to this beloved man. Rev. Martin was Clerk of the Central Baptist Association for 35 years, and was Moderator at the time of his death. He was pastor of Old Bethesda for over 30 years. And now each year one day is set for the Homecoming and Memorial Day services at Old Bethesda.

The program announced for Sunday, July 30, is as follows:

10:30 o'clock A.M.—Called to order by B B. Martin.

Song, "How Firm A Foundation".

Prayer—Rev. A. P. Thomas.

Song, "What A Friend We Have In Jesus."

Words of Greeting—Rev. Judson Martin.

Quartet, W. M. Devaughn Family.

Scripture Reading and Prayer, Rev. Ed Harden.

Sermon, Dr. Bennett T. Waites.

Song, "When The Roll Is Called Up Yonder."

Closing prayer—(To be assigned).

12:00 o'clock—Lunch—everybody invited

2:00 P.M.—Called to order by B. B. Martin.

Song, "Amazing Grace."

Quartet, Wetumpka Quaret.

In Memorial—Rev. W. Anderson Darden.

"Precious Memories",—W. M. Devaughn Quartet.

Prayer—Dr. H. C. Threadgill

Song, "Take The Name of Jesus."

Benediction—Rev. Shepard Bryan.

L.&N. Loadings Point Upward Trend

L.&N. carloadings in June 1939, showed an encouraging increase over the previous month, as well as over the same month last year, according to the July 1939, issue of the L.&N. Employes' Magazine and the total cars handled registered 75.3 per cent of normal on the Company's Business Barometer. Total cars handled in June 1939 amounted to 104,968, as compared with 89,995 in May 1939 and with 89,614 in June of the previous year. So far this year—at the end of the first six months—the L.&N.'s freight business shows an improvement of 4.7 per cent over the same period in 1938.

Sam Dale Society To Meet Oct. 15th

Col. Jim Walton, Eupora, Miss., director of the General Samuel Dale Society, was in Clanton Wednesday in the interest of the organization.

He reports that the State of Mississippi has just completed fifteen miles of paved road from U. S. 45, primary highway between Chicago and Mobile, to Dale's grave, at Daleville, Miss. A bill is pending in the United States Senate to locate a national park around Dale's grave, so Col. Walton says.

The society will meet October 15, 1939, county seat of Cherokee County, Alabama, where Dale had an Indian trading post in 1798. Dale was born in Rockbridge County, Va., October 15, 1772.

State House Echoes

The Administration has proposed to the Legislature the creation of a three-member, all-time board of pardon and paroles. Salaries to be fixed at $5000.00 a year each.

Attention around legislative halls is being called to the attitude of the State Stock Law advocates. When the liquor question was voted on, and a majority of the voters of the State voted against legalizing sales of alcoholic beverages, they, the stock law advocates, were loud in their demand that "local option" prevail—that counties voting wet be allowed to sell alcoholic beverages, that those voting dry be deprived of that privilege. Now, according to capitol corridor gossip, this same bunch is demanding a state-wide stock law, regardless of the wishes of the people in counties where stock law is not desired.

Thus early in the adjourned session, indications point to a determined effort of the drys to bring about repeal or amendment of the present liquor laws.

Crashing the portals to the Governor's sanctum, isn't what it used to be.

Judging from the "pieces" he has put in the papers, Director of the State Personnel Board I. J. Browder, wants it distinctly understood that he is not doing all that firing and hiring, that's going on around the Capitol.

There is talk of using 22 of the remaining legislative days and adjourning until January. There is also talk that a special session may be called in January.

Senator Homes of Foley is said to be making plans for the enactment of legislation that will provide $15,000.00 for the erection of a "Summer Mansion" for Alabama governors on the Baldwin County gulf coast.

We're waiting to see who'll be first to take the bull by the horns when the state stock law bill comes out of committee.

One hundred and seven new bills were introduced at the opening session of the reconvened Legislature.

Dr. R. L. Hill, representative from Marion County introduced a bill, giving every citizen over 65 years old $5 a month out of the state treasury.

Representative E. C. Boswell ,of Geneva, filed a dissenting report from that filed by the recess judiciary committee, in which he claimed much of the committee's investigation into attorney's fees, and other matters of the previous administration, was "unnecessary, useless and wasteful," and that its activities "bordered on muck-raking and mud-slinging." Malaria Reported In County

Eighteen cases of malaria have been reported in Chilton County to date during 1939, by local private physicians according to a weekly bulletin issued by the County Health Department. Four cases occurred in June and thirteen have been reported so far in July.

Only five cases of this entire group showed the parasites present in the blood on laboratory examination; the diagnosis in thirteen cases was made on the basis of the clinical appearance, the report indicated. Dr. S. D. Sturkie, County Health Officer, urged Chilton Countians affected with symptoms of malaria to consult their family physicians for diagnosis and treatment and not rely on "chill tonic" for relief.

"Malaria is not a serious health problem in our County," Dr. Sturkie asserted in a discussion of the disease, "yet we should, nevertheless, protect ourselves against it, for there may occur unexpectedly a rapid increase in our malaria incidence. Since it is transmitted only by the bite of the female anopheles quadrimaculitus mosquito, it is wise to mosquito proof homes to prevent the entrance of the mosquito. Screening to be effective must be of a good grade of 16 or 18 mesh wire; not only should bedrooms, dining rooms, etc., be screened, but also the front porch. The latter is necessary because the aopheles is nocturnal in her habits and is apt to be most active when the family is sitting on the front porch to cool off on hot summer nights.

"No heavy foci of anopheline breeding are known to exist in the County at present. Light breeding is reported by officials of the Alabama Power Company on Lake Mitchell."

Dr. Sturkie warned local fishing enthusiasts to protect themselves by sleeping in screened cabins or under mosquito netting while on fishing trips. One case of estivo autirmnal malaria (a serious type) was reported contracted at a local fishing camp last week. Experiments are being conducted by the State Health Department, according to the local Health Officer, to determine the effectiveness of small daily doses of atabrine in the prevention of malaria.

MULLINS-JACKSON ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED

Of interest in Chilton County is the announcement made Sunday of the engagement of Ruth Mullins Shepherd to Hogan Jackson, Jr., of Macon, Ga.

Miss Shepherd is the daughter of Mrs. Jacob Martin Shepherd, the former Ruth Kate Mullins, of Clanton and the late Jacob Martin Shepherd. Her maternal grandparents were the late Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Mullins, and among her family connections are many names well known in the history of the South.

Miss Shepherd's schools were Stephens College and the University of Alabama where she was a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma social fraternity and prominent in many campus activities. Since her graduation from the University in 1936, she has traveled widely in Europe, Asia, and Central America.

Mr. Jackson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Hogan Jackson of Albertville. His father is a well known banker of North Alabama, notable in both civic and business circles.

Mr. Jackson attended Georgia Tech, where he was a member of Beta Theta Pi, and the University of Alabama. He was graduated from the latter in 1935 and is now an executive of the Union Dry Goods Company of Macon, Ga., where the young couple will make their home.

Mr. [illegible] Weil spent the early part of the week in Birmingham with his parents.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hollis and family spent the past two weeks in Panama City.

Ralph Johnson returned Saturday from a week's vacation at Daytona Beach.

Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Stewart left Monday for North Alabama where they will visit her parents for several days.

The Clara Mullins Circle met at the home of Miss Mary Robinson on Monday evening, July 24. Mrs Dewey Cox and Mrs. Wilson had parts on a very interesting program which was planned by Mrs. Searcy. Delicious refreshments were served to six members and two visitors.

Mrs. J. H. Willams left Sunday for Denver, Col., where she will visit Mrs. E. J. Morris (Elizabeth Williams.)

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Mullins, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Mullins, and Misses Elizabeth and Jean Mullins left Sunday on an extended trip through the western states. The party is planning to visit the World's Fair in San Francisco and other points of interest.

MRS. FRANK FOSHEE HOSTESS TO CIRCLE

Circle six of the Baptist church met at the home of Mrs. Frank Foshee Monday afternoon. Mrs. Willie Bean read from the fifteen chapter of Matthew and Mrs. J. P. Hayes led in prayer. Three characters were reviewed from Mission Study book by Mrs. J. W. Hayes after which a business meeting was held.

Mrs. Foshee, assisted by Mrs. Philip Foshee served refreshments to the following: Mesdames W. W. Jones, Spicer, Dewey Eubanks, J. P. Hayes, Nobles, Wallace Wood, Willie Bean, Curtis Billingsley, J. W. Hayes, Andrew Jones and Miss Lula Raspberry.

Miss Doris Newell returned Tuesday after spending several weeks in Montgomery.

Miss Kathryn Foss has returned from Selma after a short visit with her sister, Mrs. Ralph Mason.

The marriage of Miss Dorothy Hughes, of Wessley, Miss., and Thomas Edward Mahan, of Clanton, took place at the home of the groom. Only members of the families were present at the ceremony which was performed by Rev. Troy B. Helms.

Circle one of Clanton Baptist church met at the home of Mrs. J. D. Rockett Monday afternoon at 3:30. This was a business meeting and there was fifteen present. Mrs. John Mullins gave the devotional and led in prayer.

After the business session the Circle surprised Mrs. R. M. Tucker with a shower which was carried out in a very lovely way. Everyone enjoyed this social hour very much and also the delicious refreshments served by the hostess.

Mrs. R. L. Lion of Union Springs, is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Jester this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Caidwell Roper of Louisville, Ky., and Mr. and Mrs. Mayfield Slaughter of Bessemer, were also guests of Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Dennis this week.

Miss Davis Newell has returned home after a visit to relatives in Montgomery.

REV. AND MRS. DAVIS ATTEND BAPTIST ALLIANCE

Rev. and Mrs. Oscar A. Davis left the latter part of last week for Atlanta, Ga., where they will attend the meeting of the Baptist World Alliance, which is convening there next week.

Following the meeting, Rev. and Mrs Davis will continue on to Ridgecrest, North Carolina, where they will rest for several days. There wil l be no preaching services at the Baptist Church while the Pastor is away. He will be absent from the pulpit for three Sundays.

LAMBERT-WOODFIN

Mr. and Mrs. Carlie L. Woodfin of Clanton wish to announce the marriage of their daughter, Laverne, to Mr. Ealon Madison Lambert.

Mr. Lambert is the son of Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Lambert of Opelika. The bride and groom will make their home in Los Angeles, California.

Mrs. Ben Tyus had as her guest Friday her daughter, Mrs. I. D. Kimbrough and Mrs. C. B. Jones of Chatanooga Tennessee. Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Tyus and Mrs. W. F. Geiger all of Birmingham.

Work To Start Soon On Electrification Project

According to a news release from the Rural Electrification Administration, work on the Central Alabama Electric Membership Corp., project will begin within the near future.

This project includes 479 miles of electric lines and is composed of 930 electric lines and Corporation has a membership of 930 members. Lines will constructed in Autauga, Elmore, Coosa Chilton and Bibb Counties.

Allotment for this project is $378,000. Basil Thompson is superintendent, Gordon Persons & Co., Inc., Engineer with Richards Bros., of Carrollton, Ga., Contractors.

The present status is as follows:

REA has approved a contract between the project sponsors and Richards Bros., Carroltlon, Ga., for building the first and second section of this project consisting of 479 miles of line to serve some 930 farms. The successful bid was $242,592 and includes materials and labor. The total cost, with substation, meters and overhead added, will be $292,200. REA has wired the engineer to have work start at once. The contract calls for the work to be completed by late fall.

The Wood Preserving Co., will furnish 81 carloads of poles; Aluminum Co. of America will furnish about 1192 miles of wire, and the Line Material Co., will ship 526 transformers, ranging from 1½ kva to 10 kva.

Construction of these lines will provide nearly 77,000 man hours of employment in direct labor alone.

All who wish to get service from the new lines should sign up for it at once and make arrangements for wiring and plumbing installations. The route of the line is now being laid out, and the network is planned to reach areas where enough member service contracts have been signed to make construction economically feasible. If insufficient contracts have been signed in any particular area, the lines will be routed another way.

Experience has indicated that usually a number of requests for service come in after construction has started. These requests cannot ordinarily be granted until the contractor finishes building the project as planned and laid out before his crews arrive. Priority must be accorded those lines for which service contracts are signed up early. Construction of other lines must depend upon the availability of funds after the main project is built.

59 miles of lines will be erected in Chilton County, according to the release.

Birmigham-Southern Scholarship

Birmingham, Ala.—A free chance to go to college!

Boys and girls, and mothers and dads too, have dreamed and hoped that such a thing would happen.

And Friday, August 4th, on the campus at Birmingham-Southern College that opportunity is going to be offered every Alabama boy and girl.

For on that date the third annual Phi Beta Kappa Honor Scholarship Tests will be held.

Six winners will be selected from those taking the tests and they will be offered free opportunities to continue their studies in college.

The tests have been divided into two classifications.

One classification will be for students living in Jefferson County, Alabama, and the second classification will be for students living outside of Jefferson County.

To the student scoring the highest number of points in each classification, an $800 scholarship will be awarded. This scholarship may be used for either tuition and fees or tuition and fees and board and room while attending the college.

The student scoring the second highest number of points in each classification will be given a $400 scholarship to be used in the same manner.

The student scoring the third highest number of points in each calssification will be given a $200 scholarship to be used in the same manner.

The only qualification necessary to take the tests is that the student be eligible for admission to Birmingham-Southern College.

Originated in 1937 to reward interest in study, research and scholarship achievement and accomplishment, the tests have already given six students the opportunity to go to college with most of their expenses paid.

This year, Dr. Raymond Paty, President of the College, doubled the number of scholarships and pointed out that the college's plan of acknowledging scholarly achievement had been a success and that he wanted to help make the dreams of as many boys and girls as possible come true for them.

Those wishing to take the tests should notify the Scholarship Chairman in care of the College before midnight, July 29th.

Thomas W. Martin, President of the Alabama Power Company and a scholar of note, will address the contestants on the rewards of study and the college will be luncheon host to those competing.

A limited number of dormitory rooms will be available to men who make arrangements in advance.

STRAW STACKS FURNISH FERTILIZER

Farmers who burn straw stacks not only destroy valuable livestock feed but they also destroy large amounts of fertilizer elements along with mulching materia which might be widely used in erosion control and moisture retention on farms, according to Mr. James H. Wood, Superintendent of the Soil Conservation Service in the CCC camp near Clanton.

Mature horses, cows and sheep which are merely being maintained, can live chiefly on straw roughage, for in every 1000 pounds of oat straw there are ten pounds of crude protein, 426 pounds of carbohydrates and 9 pounds of fat.

Straw spreads over pastures and used as mulch on gullied and galled land is an excellent moisture conserver, according to Mr. Wood, for every 1000 pounds of oat straw contains 885 pounds of dry matter.

Straw spread upon the ground and then plowed under, furnishes valuable fartilizer elements, as in every 1000 pounds of oat straw there are 5.8 pounds of nitrogen; 2.1 pounds of phosphoric acid and 15 pounds of potash.

In view of the value of straw for the farm, it can readily be seen that burning or destroying straw is a waste of useful material, Mr. Wood points out.

Mobile To Get $8,000,000 Air Depot

The War Department has announced that an $8,000,000 air depot will be built at Mobile.

It will be one of three main air depots in the country, the others being at Sacramento, Cal., and Ogden, Utah.

The one at Mobile will serve Army planes throughout the Atlantic Seaboard, the Southeast, Puerto Rico and Panama. It will store, service, rebuild and repair planes.

Funds have already been appropriated and work is expected to get underway shortly.

The three main items in the big project will be:

1. A main building costing $2,500,000. It will serve two main purposes: As a flight test and inspection hangar and as a repair dock and equipment repair building. It will be 1000 by 600 feet.

2. A depot supply building costing $1,000,000. It will be 900 by 450 feet.

Other items will include: Barracks for officers and non-commissioned officers, hospital, garage, radio installations, an engine test stand costing $175,000; a fire alarm system, a gas system, water storage reservoir, water distribution system, storage system, signal corps installation, roads and walks, grading and seeding the field, runways and taxiways.

CHILD of EVIL

SYNOPSIS

Beautiful, young Kay Forrest has been employed by Christine Maynard, photographer, to pose for a series of pictures, the background of which will be exquisite Cathedral Gardens, famous Southern resort.

Miss Maynard walked with the girl to the old oak. She posed Kay and draped her with chiffon. She said, "I'd like to be young again, Kay—and have your figure."

She peered through the lens of her camera and said, "Perfect. I'll get two or three good shots here. Then we'll try some near that big azalea bush. Over yonder by the black gum." Suddenly, she smiled: "You're an interesting person, Kay Forrest. You're as free and natural . . ."

And the young girl answered, "I don't feel embarrassed, Miss Maynard. Out here—this way . . ." She groped for words. "It sort of seems the right thing."

"It is," said Miss Maynard. And then, almost curtly, "Take your pose now. That's right. Hold it . . ."

Mr. Jefferson Butler was sleeping, his bony, elongated figure covered informally by a patchwork quilt which made no pretensions to cleanliness.

Jeff's bed had been a thing of beauty in the days of its youth—or so Jeff considered. It had been white then: white enamel, and there were curlicues of iron at the head and foot, and four brass balls marking the corners. Three of these brass decorations had long since disappeared, and the white enamel had been chipped so that the iron bedstead now was a mass of ugly black scabs.

Jeff grumbled, grunted, tossed—and finally opened weak gray eyes upon a world of gray. Framed in the window was the mustached countenance of Mr. Clem Ross, a man diminutive of stature and of intelligence. Beyond Clem's face was a brief vista of Big Moccasin Swamp: a miasmatic blanket hovering over it, chilling the air and rendering Jeff's patchwork quilt more than usually seductive. Clem spoke again, his beady eyes eager, "It's 'most daylight, Jeff. Don't you git up we ain't goin' to see nothin'."

Remembrance came to Mr. Butler and he eased his long figure out of the bed.

Jeff's home in Big Moccasin Swamp was considerably more than ever so humble. It contained five rooms and was weatherproof save when the weather was inclement. On the dogtrot stood a rickety table and five chairs. In the corner was a washtub which was used by a visiting colored woman on such rare occasions as Mr. Butler decided that his wardrobe needed cleansing. Two pigs snored happily near the back steps and chickens roosted on the chairs. An underfed and mournful hound dog slouched forward to greet his master. tail wagging warily.

In the dim light of early morning, Mr. Butler could see the borders of his estate. He could see the scraggly cotton patch, as yet not planted; and the brief field which would—if he happened to get around to it—produce corn during the coming summer. There was the truck patch, too, wherein Jeff was inclined to raise greens and turnips and potatoes, and beyond the truck patch, through an opening in the pines, he could see Willow Creek which was an undignified tributary to the almost-as-undignified Catbill River.

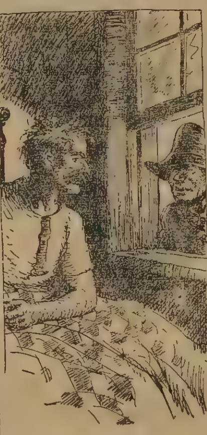
Clem Ross said again, "We sho' better hurry, Jeff," and Mr. Butler swung off in a southerly direction, his long strides compelling the smaller man to drop into a half-trot in order to keep pace, so that Clem said complainingly, "Well, there ain't that much hurry."

"You reckon Kay Forrest will be there?" he inquired anxiously.

Jeff cast a weatherwise eye skyward. "She's sho' to be."

"How come you know?"

"'Cause the sun'll be out in a few minutes. Kay an' that female pitcher-taker always go out right after sun-up. I found out about them accidental one mawnin' when I got to work too early."



"Don't you git up we ain't goin' to see nothin'."

Clem's weak eyes blinked. "But Kay—she don't really take off all her clothes, does she?"

"You'll see."

"S'posin' the folks in Beverly was to know about it?"

Jeff whistled. "They'd be hell to pay, sho' nuff."

"Ain't you truthin'," endorsed Clem.

Jeff Butler could not long remain silent. He said, "Beauregard County was a quiet, God-fearin' place before Ruth Hamilton come down from New Yawk an' had them Gardens builded."

"Sho' was."

"I never figured out what got into her . . . doin' a lot of work prettyin' up a swamp."

"Money!" sneered Jeff. "She craved to make money." Then his eyes lighted with interest. "It cost her a whole slew of cash to git things goin', but she's makin' plenty now."

"Mmm-hmm! Must be th'ee hund'ed tourists in Beverly." Then he added virtuously, "Tha's what ruinin' the town an' sendin' our young folks straight to hell."

Jeff was in thorough agreement. He even elaborated upon the theme. He said, "I knowed Ruth Hamilton when she was knee-high to a drop of rain. Purty kid, and it never s'prised me when she married that rich feller from New Yawk."

"He died, didn't he?"

"Sho' did. Left her with them two children. Folks tell that they was rich but the depression ruint them. So she come back to Beverly an' put her money into fixin' up them Gardens. That was all the property her ol' man left her."

Clem said, "Tchk! Tchk!"

"They're kind of nice," Jeff admitted grudgingly, "but folks hereabouts ain't aimin' to stand 'em for long. You know . . ." He dropped his voice confidentially: "There's some awful hell-raisin' goin' on in Beverly ev'y night. Dancin' an' all such as that."

"It's the work of the Devil," confided Clem. Then, somewhat anxiously, "You reckon Kay Forrest really is goin' to take off ev'y stitch of clothes?"

Jeff said, "Sssssssh! Yonder she is . . . on that island."

They threw themselves flat and crawled under and between azalea bushes. And they peered out at the little island where Miss Maynard was posing Kay and rearranging her chiffon drapes.

Clem inhaled sharply. "She sho' is purty."

Jeff was pardonably triumphant. "Didn't I tell you?" he whispered. "Nary stitch."

"She's got a veil on," chided Mr. Ross.

"Shuh! Ain't no thicker'n mosquito-nettin'."

They watched eagerly. They saw the efficient Miss Maynard, though they were not interested in her. They saw the smooth white body of a young and beautiful girl against a background of breath-taking color. But theirs was not an artistic appreciation. Their interest was lecherous . . . and tinctured with righteousness, though it was not until the sun rose higher over the cypress trees and Kay became apprehensive; not until the girl had clothed herself again and paddled back through the Gardens with Miss Maynard and the photographic equipment—that this righteousness was put into words.

Clem said, "It's awful." Then, "Me an' you can come back some other mawnin's, cain't we, Jeff?"

"Sho'ly. But nobody ain't to be told. Not now."

"How come not?"

"'cause then ev'body would start a-comin'. An' she'd find out."

Mr. Ross considered this judicially. "If we was ever to tell what's goin' on heah . . ."

Jeff Butler nodded grimly. "Some day we will," he said. "It'll be our bounden duty An' when we do . . ." he gestured expressively " . . .well, Beauregard County knows what to do with immoral females like her."

CHAPTER II

Breakfast was over—a delicious breakfast of hominy grits and bacon and of thin, light biscuits and crisp crumbly waffles; of grapefruit and coffee and of bright conversation and good-natured badinage.

Kay Forrest was first from the table. She ran upstairs to her room, touched her makeup lightly and somewhat carelessly, pulled a little rust-colored tam over her soft brown hair, glanced at herself once more in the mirror over the ancient dresser and gave ear to the below-stairs summons from Barney Hamilton.

Kay walked to the head of the stairs and looked down upon the tall, blond young man: the Barney Hamilton who was never serious for a moment, yet who was rapidly becoming the most serious thing in Kay's life.

Barney gestured from the foot of the stairs. "The chariot awaits. Will the Princess be so gracious as to hurry before the road commences to swarm with tourists?"

Lawson Holds Any Doctor Can Inoculate Dogs

o

Says Rabies Inspector Can't Dictate Time Or Place To Owner

o

Several inquiries have come to Chilton County News in regard to inoculation of dogs against rabies.

According to a ruling of Attorney General T. S. Lawson, any competent Veterinarian may vaccinate dogs.

The following article on the subject appeared in The Montgomery Advertiser, Thursday, April 20th, 1939:

Any competent veterinarian may vaccinate dogs against rabies, the office of Atty. Gen. T. S. Lawson held in an official opinion issued yesterday, which also ruled the vaccinating does not have to be done by the rabies inspector. It was further held that dog owners cannot be forced to deliver their dogs to the rabies inspector at any named place or time for vaccination, so long as the dogs are vaccinated prior to September 1 of each year.

The opinion was addressed to R. L. Farrow, rabies inspector for Marshall County, who inquired whether any veterinarian was eligible to vaccinate dogs against rabies; whether the rabies inspector was compelled to make calls at private homes to vaccinate dogs if called on to do so; and whether there was anything in the rabies control act to force people to deliver their dogs to the rabies inspector at any particular place or time, to be vaccinated.

"There is, in my judgment," the opinion said, "no provision of the 'dog control act' requring the owner to present his dog at any specific place named by the rabies inspector at a specific time The requirement under the new act is that the dog shall be inoculated 'prior to September 1 of each year . . .' How he does this or when, so long as it is done by September 1 and by the rabies inspector or a competent veterinarian, is not the concern of this act.

"In other words, you cannot force the dog owner to have his dog inoculated by the rabies inspector. Therefore, it necessarily follows that he cannot be forced to have his dog at any particular place at any particular time for this purpose. The intent of the act is carried out when the dog has been inoculated prior to September 1 by a duly qualified person."

As to whether the rabies inspector calls at the house of the dog owner "for inoculation purposes," it was ruled, is "purely discretionary" with the inspector, as there is no provision of law requiring him to do so.

NOTICE OF LOCAL BILL

Notice is hereby given that at the adjourned session of the Legislature of Alabama, which will re-cohvene on Tuesday, July 18, 1939, there will be introduced the following bill for the relief of J. C. Pattillo, Circuit Clerk of Chilton County, Alabama, for passage and approval.

J. C. PATTILLO,
Clerk.

Said bill will be as follows:

For the relief of J. C. Patillo, Clerk of the Circuit Court of Chilton County, Alabama, and to relieve said Clerk from any and all liability for and on account of fees or compensation received by him under the provisions of General Acts of Alabama, 1931, page 668, for issuing subpoenas before the Grand Jury of Chilton County in cases where no indictments were found, said fees or compensation being in the amount of $81.10.

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF ALABAMA:

Section 1: Whereas, under the provisions of General Acts of Alabama, 1931, page 668, subpoenas were issued for necessary witnesses to be and appear before the Grand Jury of Chilton County, and Whereas, said Act did provide for the payment to the Clerk the same fees as for issuing other subpoenas and Whereas, said Clerk did collect the same fees, being 25c for issuing each of said subpoenas out of the Fine & Forfeiture Fund of Chilton County, the total amount of said fees collected being $81.10, and Whereas, the Attorney General of Alabama, has held in his official opinion that said fees could not legally be paid out of the Fine & Forfeiture Fund of the County, and Whereas, the State Examiner of Accounts has charged the said J. C. Pattillo, Clerk of the Circuit Court with said sum of $81.10. And Whereas, the said J. C. Pattillo, Clerk has performed the duties and services as provided in said general laws, Acts 1931, page 668, THEREFORE,

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF ALABAMA:

Section 2: That J. C. Pattillo, Clerk of the Circuit Court of Chilton County, Alabama, be and he is hereby relieved from any and all liability for and on account of said fees received by said J. C. Pattillo, Clerk, out of the Fine & Forfeiture Fund of the county, in performance of his duties in issuing subpoenas for necessary witnesses before the Grand Jury, as provided by General Act of Alabama, 1931, page 668.

Section 3: That all laws and parts of laws in conflict with the provisions of this Act be and the same are hereby repealed. 40-4

ORDER FOR PUBLICATION TO NON-RESIDENT

The State of Alabama, Chilton County. Circuit Court. In Equity. No. 1627. May 29, 1939.

W. E. Barns, Complainant, vs. Rubie Barns, Defendant.

In this cause it is made to appear to the Register by the affidavit of W. E. Barns that the Defendant is a non-resident, and that her place of residence and post-office address is unknown, and that such address cannot be ascertained after reasonable effort; and, further, that, in the belief of said affiant, the Defendant is of the age of twenty-one years:

It is, therefore, ordered by the Register that publication be made in the Chilton County News, a newspaper published in the County of Chilton, once a week for four consecutive weeks, requiring her, the said Rubie Barns, to plead, answer, or demur to the bill of complaint in this cause by the 31st day of July, 1939, or, in thirty days thereafter, a decree pro confesso may be taken against her.

Done at office in Clanton, Alabama, this 29th day of May, 1939.

Forest Land Problem

Washington—The Joint Congressional Committee on Forestry, of which Senator John H. Bankhead of Alabama is Chairman, will hold hearings at Mobile some time next fall. This Committee created in June, 1938, by the problem of the entire United States. "These investigations of the Committee will be of great interest and importance to the people of our state," said Senator Bankhead in discussing the subject at his office in Washington, "because Alabama is outstanding in several respects relating to forestry and the continuous production of forest products."

He pointed out that Alabama, for example, has more active saw mills than any other state in the United States except North Carolina. In lumber production it ranks fifth among the states of the country and first in the production of southern yellow pine, the cut in 1937 having been reported as about 1,100 million board feet. Besides yellow pine, about 200 million feet of cedar, cypress, oak, red gum, tupelo, yellow poplar and several other hardwoods were produced. The number of wage earners employed in saw mills exceeded 17 thousand and the wages paid $3,339,000. The total value of all saw mill products in Alabama in 1937 was nearly 32 million dollars.

Some of the finest forest land any place in the Southern Pine Belt occurs in Alabama. Of the total area of 33,000,000 acres in the State, nearly 19 million acres is commercial forest land. About half of this occurs on individual farms. There is no doubt that the future welfare of the State is dependent upon keeping these forest lands productive, and further it is for these reasons that the work of the Joint Congerssional Committee is going to be of immense importance and value, not only to the people at large, but also to the farmers and small woodland owners.

The definite date for the hearing will be announced long enough in advance to permit every one to appear who has views to present on ways and means of forest restoration of lands incapable of growing other crops than timber, of managing existing private and public timberlands so that they will continue to produce lumber and other forest products for all time to come, and of assisting the farmer in growing and marketing material from his own woodlot.

DEATH OF MRS. SARAH LITTLETON

On July 14th, the death angel visited the home of T. K. Littleton and carried away his precious wife, Sarah. Mrs. Littleton had been in ill health for two or three years, but seemed to be in better health for the past few months.

She was a sweet and loving wife and mother. She was loved by everyone who knew her. She always had a kind word for everyone she met.

She leaves to mourn her going, her husband, Noell Littleton, one son, Erbie Littleton, 2 daughters, Mrs. Same Robinson and Mrs. Preston Mims, 2 brothers, Tom and Melvous Collins, 4 sisters, Mrs. John Popwell, Mrs. Arthur Marcus, Mrs. Fred Barrett and Miss Lizzie Collins.

The funeral was held at Collins Chapel Saturday afternoon with burial in the adjoining cemetery, Rev. W. P. Lowery officiating, Spigener Funeral Home in charge.

100 CHILTON COUNTAINS ATTEND "KUDZU JAMBOREE"

Over 100 Chilton County citizens attended the "Kudzu Jamboree" at Camp Hill, Alabama on July 19th. This trip was sponsored by the Soil Conservation Service and the County Agent's office.

After making field trips and listening to lectures in the morning the main event got underway in the afternoon, and picnic lunches were enjoyed by a crowd estimated at over 2700 persons.

Kudzu Queens and Kings were chosen, and speeches were made by notable people, including H. H. Bennett, Chief of the Soil Conservation Service.

Many favorable comments were made by those attending the "Jamboree" from Chilton County, and no doubt all were impressed by the virtue of Kudzu.

Though kudzu is not a cure all for erosion and land depletion it should be included as a very important factor in a well balanced program of erosion control.

Farm Agent's News

J. W. FANT, County Agent

In view of heavier boll weevil infestations than usual, County Agent J.W. Fant has advised Chilton County farmers to use recommended control measures on their cotton to combat weevils, so as to insure normal yield.

"Since most cotton is of considerable size, dusting applications may be made, Mr. Fant pointed out. "Three dustings with calcium arsenate dust may be made at five-day intervals, using five to six pounds of calcium arsenate to the acre for each application.

Mr. Fant also called attention to the fact that some farmers have reported injury to the cotton squares by the boll worm or corn earworm. Heavy dustings—about twice the amount used for boll weevils—of calcium arsenate will control the boll worm effectively.

The only way to know whether or not the boll weevils are numerous enough to warrant dusting is to make infestation counts of the squares. In making these counts 100 squares are examined in each of several places in a field. Stalks of cotton are selected at random and each square is examined for punctures before counting is begun on a new one; squares on the ground are not counted. The number of punctured squares among 100 examined is the per cent infestation at a given place.

OLD TIMER VISITS PUBLISHER

Alabama Needs More Sheep

Dr. R. S. Sugg, livestock specialist of the Alabama Extension Service, had a question the other day he could not answer: Why aren't there more sheep in Alabama? He calls it the forgotten animal and says that records show that returns on investment in properly managed sheep are greater than for any other common livestock. He believes there is room for more sheep in the state.

Gosh, it's hot weather---and that reminds us, when you read this we'll be getting all blistered on some Florida Beach.

UNEMPLOYMENT

made by the Alabama Administrator of WPA.

"We certainly realize the situation that is facing us with reduced quotas and orders to lay off all project workers who have been contnuously employed by WPA for eighteen months. This order, which is contained in the 1939 Emergency Relief Appropriation Act, will affect approximately 16,000 certified project workers in this state who must be recertified for employment if they are still in need after thirty days," Colonel Henderson pointed out.

"Of course, we intend doing all we can for these farmers under the circumstances but right now the only hope I can see is to try to take care of those who are in the most dire circumstances and are actually destitute. The vacancies created by the lay off of the 16,000 project workers will be absorbed mighty quick by the quota cuts and the over 20,000 certified unemployed persons on our lists who are awaiting assignment to jobs.

"It is easy to see, with the above figures in mind, the problem that is facing us for the coming months," Colonel Henderson stated, "and we are seeking the cooperation of these people in our efforts to aid them all we can and, at the same time, stay within the requirements as set by the new Relief Appropriation Act. In other words, we have about five times as many eligible per-ments as we have places to put them sons on our lists wanting work assign-under our quota. So, the best thing I can see to do is to take care of the most destitute cases and I believe the people will agree with me on that point.

camp stew, barbecue, fried chicken etc., they could take care of the crowd was assembled for a discussion of the possible organization of a County Association of fox hunters for the purpose of promoting game conservaton and good fellowship among the sportsmen of the County. This discussion was led by Cohen E. Stapp. Buddy Ellison was named president and Cohen Stapp asked to serve as secretary-treasurer. Ellison and Stapp were asked to present proposed rules and regulations at a later hunt.

A heavy rain delayed the hunt until about 9:30 at which time the hounds, seventy-two in number were lined up in the road ready for the signal for release.

Apparently the old fox of that territory was not stirring but the hounds ran several young foxes in after thirty or forty minutes chasing each. Many of the hounds and hunters were in the woods near Ball Mountain at 5:30 a. m. Thursday.

Everyone seemed to have a good time and expressed a desire to have another hunt soon.

BIBLE LYCEUM

civil law," said Mr. Garrett, "has been established to deal with civil offenses, and since this is true, if baseball is wrong on Sunday it is just as wrong on Monday or any other day. As soon as the religious element enters into the controversy, just so soon the issue becomes, not civil, but religious, and therefore beyond the point where the state has any jurisdiction." He stated further that "History has proven over and over that when the state begins to legislate on religious matters, just so soon do we see intolerance and persecution rear her ugly head." Let us forever keep church and state separate."

Prof. Devaughn gave a very fine musical program which was greatly enjoyed by all. The inspiring song service conducted by Mr. Graves also adds greatly to the interest of this unusual series of meetings.

Mr. Garrett has announced the subjects for the coming weeks as follows: Thursday night, "Is Baptism Essential to Salvation?" Friday night, "Christ's Greatest Sermon." No meeting Saturday night. Sunday night, "The One Sin Which God will Not Forgive Here or Hereafter." According to word given out by the evangelistic party, the public is cordially invited to all the services at the Bble Lyceum tent.

Dr. Parrish Writes On County Fair

You are all aware we are to have another County Fair this year and as with everything else, we cannot have a fair without your help and cooperation, this we are asking and sincerely soliciting. You realize the Chilton County Fair is still in its infancy, but with all doing and saying their bit we can put her over in a way in which we will all be proud as most of you know the livestock department will betailed to me. Mr. Breedlove the assistant County Agent, will be in charge of the cows and hogs, see him about yours. Mr. Bill Fiquette will help me with the horses and mules.

Several have asked me about our races. See me if you have a horse or pony you wish to ride and I'll appreciate it if you see me early so we may schedule it without conflicts.

To you who have pulling mules or horses, if you wish to try their strength in a pulling contest we may be able to schedule this. I'll be glad to talk it over with you.

Again for your information about the races we will try to plan them as wisely as we can but under no condition do we assume any responsibility should an accident happen.

We are expecting you to enter your mules, mares and colts. Let's give those we are to bring to the fair a little extra care from now until then.

A little building every day and extra roasting ear, just a lots of ways to put a little better finish on same. We have a nice place to keep them, lets fill it with nice horses, cows and pigs.

See any of us about anything you wish to know if we cannot tell you we can show you where to get the information.

One and all for a bigger and better Chilton County Fair with all departments well represented and just a lots of fun.

Very sincerely,
W. L. PARRISH.

WORK TO BEGIN ON SCHOOL

We Observe

By BONNIE HAND

Heavier Loads— The truckers in Alabama are pound-ng away for a heavier load limit. The present limit being 20,000 pounds, they re asking for permit to haul 40,000 pounds over Alabama highways. One rgument for the new load limit says he roads were not built for pleasure nly, and that letting down the bars would allow a freer flow of Alabama roducts to the markets. Maybe there s something to that, after all. The motorists could build their own private oads, which they will ultimately have o do if the trucks grow much larger, nd just completely surrender their ights to the trucks. But how's this for a suggestion: Let the trucks have the present roads, and the motoriss use he many new roads Chris Sherlock s going to build over Alabama. On second thought that might not work ot so well. The hitch would be when he trucks tore up their roads, which would be in short order, they'd be demanding the motorists' roads, and then we'd be in the same predicament.

In Appreciation— Read a letter Governor Dixon wrote o a South Alabama weekly newspaper ast week which was published, and was an expression of his gratitude for he splendid support that section had given to his five constitutional amendments. Newspapers in this county having received no such letter, we ust supposed that the Governor was ot so appreciative of the vote Chilton accorded the amendments. The vote ot being so overwhelmingly favorable, Governor Dixon's appreciation was not so overwhelmingly expressed.

The Stock Law— Motoring down through several South Alabama counties and Florida ast week, we were again cognizant of he fact that a State-wide stock law would make those roads safer for motorists to some extent. We almost met our Waterloo when about a dozen open-range cows ambled across in front of our car one night. This did not happen in Alabama, however, for you know Florida allows its cattle to run wild also. But just as prevalent in South Alabama is this menace to the motoring public. But we do admit that there are two sides to this question, and many of the South Alabamians have reasons to oppose the law that would force them to keep their stock up. And if you don't believe many of them do oppose such a law, just mingle among them for a while. For many years they have been allowed to let their stock run at large. For them to bring this to a stop would entail much expense to the farmers and cattle raisers, many who are not financially able to do so Yes, there are two sides to this question, and even after narrowly escaping the probable serious consequences of an accident from cattle at large, we can understand the viewpoint of the people of South Alabama

At Panama City Beach— Strolling out the pier at Panama City Beach, Florida, who should we see but Mr. and Mrs. V. J. Elmore, their daughter, Olive Rainer and son, Jack. The Elmores have been in Florida for some time

Our County Fair— Again it is time for Chilton to begin making plans for its annual County Fair. We should never lose interest in this event, and we see no reason why we should not have a bigger and better one this Fall. We feel that everyone will agree that we should, by all means, have a fair annually, and in the same breath we feel that everyone will agree that for a successful fair, we must have the cooperation of everyone. Begin now planning for the Chilton County Fair, September 26-30.

Forward— Although there is disappointment that no Federal assistance has been secured so far to erect a new Chilton County High School building, we feel sure that the news that the Board has decided to proceed on its own hook to replace this building will come as good news to the people in general. Under the existing conditions we feel that the Chilton County Board of Education has acted wisely, and that their efforts all along have been bent toward securing a building that the County could be proud of and that as soon as possible.

"Child Of Evil"— Of course you're reading the new serial that started in last week's issue of the News. Undoubtedly Octavus Roy Cohen is at his best in this novel—and we have every reason to think so. We haven't had time to read a preview of this story, but we took one home with the intention of doing just that—and what happened? You're asking me? The little lady who resides at our house has practically starved ye olde Observer; in fact she's almost forgotten to censor this column for the past several issues, she has been so wrapped up in that novel. She has let the soup boil over, the toast burn, and what not—while she read "Child Of Evil." We repeat; it must undoubtedly be a corking good one. We must—and you must—read it.

FSA APPLICAT'NS MUST BE FILED IN NEAR FUTURE

LOCAL OFFICE NOW TAKING APPLICATIONS TO BUY FARMS UNDER TENANT ACT

We have been notified by Marvin Durbin, RR Supervisor, Farm Security Administration, that his office is now accepting applications to buy farms under the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act. It is very important that all tenants, sharecroppers and farm laborers who are interested in being consider ed for one of these loans should file application at once.

Forms and applications may be secured at the Farm Security Administration office in the Johnson Building, across the street from the County Agent's Office.

Vacation Bible School At Friendship

Announcement was made this week that a Vacation Bible School will begin at the Friendship Baptist Church, two miles northeast of Clanton, next Monday, August 7.

Classes will be held for all ages, the announcement stated and the hours from 1:30 to 4:30 in the afternoon has been designated as the time. The school will be in progress one week, and persons interested in this religious school are invited to make arrangements now to attend.

Man Walks Into Store; Robs A Cash Register; Walks Out Of Store

Walking into the V. J. Elmore Five and Ten Cent Store last Saturday night just before closing time, a man proceeded to open one of the cash registers while no one was looking and scooping up the contents, hurried out again. The amount taken was near fourteen dollars, it was learned.

The robbery occurred at a time when the store was bare of customers, just prior to closing. Busy at the rear of the store, the clerks knew nothing of what was taking place until the register sounded. The thief opened the register in the correct manner. No statement was given out as to whether or not the man was recognized, but it is understood that one of the young ladies employed as clerks got a fleeting glance of the bold culprit as he made a hurried exit. He took only bills from the register, which was at one of the less busy counters, and contained no large sum of money.

NINE CASES DISPOSED OF IN CIRCUIT COURT SATURDAY

Circuit Clerk J. C. Pattillo announced this week that nine cases were cleared from the Non-Jury State Trial Docket here last Saturday, July 29.

Lum Roseberry, charged with Assault and battery, was fined $25 and costs.

Sam W. Collins, charged with Public drunkenness, was fined $49 and costs.

Harvey Stone was fined $20 and costs for playing cards or dice at a public place.

Minuard Williams et al, defaulting bond, was set aside on payment of fees.

Eva Broadhead, charged with Assault and battery, was fined $1 and costs.

Albert S. Sargent, charged with Petit larceny, was convicted on two counts. Count number one, he was sentenced to hard labor 10 months and 54 days. County number two he was sentenced to six months and 53 days. Sargent was captured after a chase by residents of near Clanton who caught he and two others in the act of stealing chickens. One, his brother, Lester Sargent, was fatally wounded by the pursuers.

Three civil cases were settled between the parties involved.

Kiwanians To Tour Local CCC Camp

For the usual meeting of the Clanton Kiwanis Club tonight, the Program Committee has announced that the Club membership will gather at the local CCC Camp, at six-thirty, where they will have lunch and tour the camp. Attention is called to the change in hour of the meeting, which is from seven-thirty.

Kiwanian Horton Walker, Educational Advisor of the Camp, located on the Clanton-Maplesville Highway, will have charge of the program for the evening, which will consist of a tour of the Camp, with members of the staff of officers in charge.

Spanish War Veterans To Meet Here Sunday

There will be a meeting of the County United Spanish War Veterans at the courthouse in Clanton, Sunday, August 6, at 2:00 P.M., according to H. S. Sewell, adj.

Mr. Sewell stated that all members are urgently requested to be present at the meeting.

Jemison FFA Plans Educational Tour

Members of the Jemison Chapter of the Future Farmers of America will take an educational tour August 8-13, it was learned this week.

Plans are being made to go through the Auburn Experiment Station and to visit Fort Benning, Georgia. The tour will also include Jacksonville or some other coast town in Florida, where most of the time will be spent swimming, boat riding, fishing playing soft ball, etc.

The Chapter will pay the bus out of treasury funds and each member will pay $2.00 for incidental expenses.

Each member planning to go is to give his name to ~~Mr. Denson or Char~~les Littlejohn, not later than Sunday, August 6. He can also get a list of the produce he is required to take.

Watts Shoppe Closing Out Business In City

Miss Callie Watts, of the Watts Shoppe, is this week announcing that she is positively closing out her business in Clanton. She is quitting business in Clanton—no fooling, and commencing Friday of this week, she is placing her entire stock of $7,500 on sale.

The Watts stock is always exclusive lines of high grade merchandise, the brands that you see advertised in the national magazines and papers. Here you will have the opportunity of buying fine ladies ready-to-wear at very modest prices. The fixtures are also offered for sale.

The Watts Shoppe, formerly known as Watts Hat Shop, has been in operation in Clanton for the past ten years, and the store has established a record of handling only quality merchandise and dealing with fairness and honesty to all. Clanton will lose a good business and a good woman when Miss Watts moves from here to Gadsden.

She has already rented a place for her business in Gadsden, and will begin business there the first of September.

ALL DAY SINGING AT ENTERPRISE NEXT SUNDAY, AUG. 5TH

There will be an all day singing at Enterprise next Sunday, the News has been requested to announce.

Everybody invited to come and bring new books and a well filled basket.

Chilton County Is Still Growing

The population of Chilton County on July 1 was 26,207, as compared with that of 26,031 on July 1, 1938, according to an estimate by the Bureau of Vital Statistics of the State Department of Health.

The population of the State as a whole on July 1 was estimated at 2,942,599, or 32,027 more than the estimated population of 2,910,562 for July 1 of last year. The installing officers were:

Mrs. Effie Griffin, Past Worthy Matron and Mr. R. N. Griffin, Past Worthy Patron of Woodlawn Chapter, Birmingham; Mrs. Rubye Williamson, Auburn, Marshall, and Mrs. Essie Walker, Chaplain.

Following the installation a short musical program was rendered by Miss Kathryn Foss, Miss Mae Anniece Polk and Miss Mary Louise Rinehardt honored the group with a reading.

The hall was prettily decorated with vari-colored summer flowers. Light refreshments were served to about thirty-five members and visitors.

BOARD OF EDUCATION VOTES TO ISSUE BONDS TO FINANCE PLANT

Bids To Be Asked For As Soon As Specifications Are Complete; Little Change To Be Made From Original Plans

While the outlook for securing Federal assistance in the near future continues gloomy, the Chilton County Board of Education voted at a recent meeting to authorize the immediate construction of a new Chilton County High School building to replace the one destroyed by fire over seven months ago

A statement from the office of Superintendent of Education Rascoe Maddox Monday was to effect that the Board will issue bonds against the Capital Outlay Fund in the amount of $50,000, to be used along with the $42,000 in insurance on the old plant. This will give a total of $92,000 for the project.

Immediately following the destruction of the old building last December application was made through the WPA for Federal assistance in replacing the plant. This was abandoned later in favor of the PWA, as it was believed that the possibility of securing a grant through that agency was better With time passing swiftly by, and another school term approaching, the Board decided to begin construction on a new building with the hope of having it ready for occupancy just after Christmas.

Shortly after the old building burned, E. B. VanKeuren, architect of Birmingham, was secured to make a drawing to submit to the Board for their approval or disapproval. The building was estimated to cost in the neghborhood of $100,000. Supt. Maddox announced that this plan would be used for the new building, with a few minor changes.

Federal assistance in the erection of the building is greatly needed, and even yet, it was announced, erection of the plant would begin with the hope that the present application would bring a grant as the work progresses, and that should aid be forthcoming, the building could be enlarged.

Mr. VanKeuren has been instructed to draw up plans and specifications for the building as quickly as possible. Bids will be asked for as soon as this work is completed

In the meantime Supt Maddox stated that the 1939-40 term of school would open Sptember 4, in the Clanton Baptist Church, where classes have been held since the building burned. It is presumed that the site of the new building will be on the grounds which the old one was located.

HOME OF RICHARD HICKS DESTROYED BY FIRE TUES

The home of Richard Hicks of Thorsby was destroyed by fire early last Tuesday morning, about 4 o'clock.

The family had left about 3:00 o'clock for Tuscaloosa where they were carrying Mr. Hicks to the Veterans Hospital, it was learned. Origin of the fire was not known but the entire furnishings were destroyed.

TYPHOID CLINICS ANNOUNCED BY HEALTH DEPT

SCHEDULE ANNOUNCED FOR MONTH OF AUGUST; CITIZENS URGED TO TAKE ADVANTAGE

Typhoid clinics to be conducted by the County eHalth Department during August were announced today by Dr. S. D. Sturkie, County Health Officer. The following schedule has been planned for the month:

Spring Hill School (Stanton) begins August 10, ends August 31—9:30 to 10:00 A.M.

Terry's Store, Riderville, begins August 10, ends August 31—10:15 to 10:45 A.M.

Riderville School (colored), begins August 10, ends August 31—11:00 to 12:00 A.M.

Smith School, begins August 11, ends September 1—10:45 to 11:45 A.M.

Residents of these communities were urged to take advantage of this opportunity to protect themselves against typhoid fever. Toxoid for the protection of infants and children against diphtheria will be offered. Dr. Sturkie pointed out that the Alabama State Health Department advises that typhoid vaccine should be taken every two years in order to insure the best results. "Toxoid," he states, "should be given to infants at six months of age and to any unprotected child up to the age

From The City Hall

From the office of Mayor C. Fenn Jones in the City Hall comes the following statement by the Mayor that will be of interest to all:

"I think the time and conditions justify the suggestion that our merchants discontinue displaying their goods and wares on the sidewalk. This method to sell goods is always used by small country towns, and as Clanton is now in the class of a city, I am sure our merchants will gladly keep pace with the progress and improvement Clanton is making. The sidewalks were never intended to be used as a place to display merchandise, but was provided for people to walk on in going from place to place.

"I wish to ask again that the people not stand in groups on the walks to talk. This prevents the free and easy passing of others. Many people from over the country come to Clanton now, and our walks should not be closed by merchandise or by those who wish to discuss matters of interest to themselves."

Those who would park their cars on the highway in the main section of the city are reminded by City officals that the 45-minute parking law will be rigidly enforced and they are urged to keep the ruling in mind so as to avoid paying of fine.

There was no cases to come before City court Monday morning, the Mayor announced.

The City of Clanton promptly paid off a $500 bond which came due Tuesday of this week. Money was paid out of the City of Clanton treasury.

CEMETERY CLEANING AT SHILOH FRIDAY THIS WEEK

The News has been requested to announce that there will be a cemetery cleaning at the Shiloh Baptist Church, Friday of this week, August 4. All persons interested in this cemetery are asked to be on hand early with tools with which to work.

Miss Mildred Pipes is spending a few days in Florida.

A Bouquet For Us From The Local Soil Conservation Service

From the local Soil Conservation division of the Clanton CCC we received the following release:

Newspapers continue to be America's greatest source of information, despite the advances made by radio and the distribution of periodicals and books. A good paper is an asset to any community, and Chilton County is blessed with two good weeklies.

This being primarily an agricultural section, the "Farm News Section' 'is probably the best indication of the progressive papers. Both local papers maintain a large amount of space devoted to this section of the news.

The Soil Conservation Service Camp at Clanton, can well appreciate the cooperation given by the local papers in publishing weekly news items released by the service.

ED TAYLOR'S PARTY

Sorry we were unable to get to Friend Ed Taylor's barbecue at Narrow Lane Inn last Thursday, but listen to Atticus Mullin tell about it in The Montgomery Advertiser:

One of the nicest parties we have ever attended was the one given by Edward F. Taylor, former clerk of the Alabama House of Representatives Thursday. Mr. Taylor invited members of the Legislature, State and county officials and members of the press to a barbecue at Narrow Lane Inn Thursday.

Every appointment was in perfect taste, Judge Jimmie Parrish was the toastmaster and a number of guests were introduced

There was no political significance whatever to the party. Mr. Taylor gave a similar affair in February at the Elks Club just after Gov. Dixon took office.

Among guests who accepted invitations and who were present were ex-Governor and ex-Senator, Mr. and Mr. Bibb Graves, Mrs. Marie Bankhead Owen, John Brandon, Howell Turner, and many others. The writer counted more than 90 members of the Legislature besides scores of Montgomerians There were more than 500 guests and they had a great time.

Gov. Graves and other notables made speeches but there was not the slightest political significance attached to them. Dixon members of the Legislature were there as well as former Graves appointees and former Legislators in the Graves administration.

Ed Taylor knows how to serve guests and is an ideal host and everybody enjoyed the occasion because it was entirely devoid of political significance. Ed was host to his friends and that was all there was to it.—Atticus Mullin, in Montgomery Adveriser.

"LOOK OVER ALABAMA

Alabama's industrial, agricultural and recreational opportunities are presented in attractive pictorial form in a 20-page booklet just published by the Alabama State Chamber of Commerce for circulation to individuals and organizations seeking information concerning the state.

More than 75 illustrations, selected to provide a comprehensive picture of the state's attractions, are contained in the booklet, which is captioned "Look Over Alabama." The cover page is in color, a brilliant red matching the color of the state flag, and bears a picture of two men overlooking a valley from one of Alabama's mountain-tops. A sub-caption on the cover is "Opportunities for Successful and Happy Living."

CREDIT VS. CREDIT

If and when the current consumers of Birmingham enjoy a reduction in rates averaging from 40 to 50 per cent, it is going to be interesting to see whether or not they give credit to whom credit is due.—Alabama Courier (Athens.)

It will be even more interesting to see whether or not Birmingham can get credit if and when a reduction of 50 per cent in power rates eliminates private utility service and tax revenues therefrom.—Selma Times-Journal.

"HIGH-HATTING" ON GOAT HILL

Who put the brilliant light of J. Miller Bonner under a bushel?—Huntsville Mercury.

We were thinking on the same subject only a few days ago. We haven't heard anything of Bro. Bonner for a long while. The last time we were in Montgomery we went to the Capitol and asked where was his office, and were shown a small room adjoining the waiting quarters next to the Governor's office. Having known him for a number of years before he was made the Governor's legal adviser we wanted to pay our respects, but he was not in.

That same day we were standing on the sidewalk near the Exchange Hotel and saw Bro. Bonner coming up the street wearing a long "jim swinger" coat and a tall beaver hat, with his head high in the air. He looked seven feet tall. As he got opposite us we stepped up, extended our hand and said 'Howdy Senator." He glanced casually down at us and replied, "howdy-do, sir," and kept on his happy way.

We thought "damn," but reflected that perhaps the former Senator's five thousand dollar job as the Governor's legal adviser had gone to his head, and that his old-time admirers were being "high-hatted."

That's the last time we have seen Hon. J. Milier (Bull) Bonner.—Greensboro Watchman.

COTTON PICKING RULES

Here is a good rule for cotton growers to follow during the coming cotton picking season·

Never put off until tomorrow picking the cotton you can pick today. Not that one day's delay in itself amounts to so much, but each day lost after a field is ready to be picked increases the chance of running into a rainy spell or into interruptions of days or weeks that will amount to something.

Cotton specialists of the U. S. Department of Agriculture and the State agricultural colleges now have definite proof that long delays in picking knock down the grade of the cotton. In fact, from investigations throughout the cotton country, they say that on the average a delay of four weeks in picking causes a loss of about one full grade in lint quality. Remember, exposure of four weeks in the field cuts the quality of the cotton a full grade. Put in dollars and cents, that delay of four weeks in picking cuts the value of the cotton anywhere from 50 cents to two dollars a bale, depending upon the grade and staple length of the cotton.

On top of the damage to the lint itself, you have to add extra losses due to the extra trash that the cotton has in it when picked after standing too long in the field. And those losses aren't all. The Mississippi Agrculturai Experiment Station found that delayed harvesting damaged the quality of the oil produced from the seed, and also reduced the germination of seed kept to plant.

So, remember, by letting a field go a month after it is ready to be picked, you may knock off anywhere from 50 cents to two dollars from the value of each bale.

MARK REMARKS

The big problem of every Legislature is how to find something else belonging to John Q. Citizen that can be taxed. Frequently the Legislature is unable to find anything untaxed. In that case they just put more tax on something already taxed.

* * * *

What's worrying us about finding plant life on the planet Mars is this: Wall Street will be shouting "over production" just when the farmer is getting ready to sell his cotton this Fall.

* * * *

Mars came almost to within speaking distance, saw how Old Mother Earth was cutting up then turned up his nose and went the other way.

* * * *

Alabama Needs: A dry cleaning plant for politics.

* * * *

John L. Lewis, in his intemperate denunciation of Vice-President John N. Garner, exposed himself to the public gaze for exactly what he is: a dangerous vulgarian clothed with power.

* * * *

What we want to know: who is going to bust up Racket Buster Dewey's political racket?

* * * *

A dangerous Bill in the shape of a price-fixing proposal on merchandise has been introduced in the Legislature. An effort to fix a minimum price on merchandise will most assuredly bring an effort to fix a minimum profit base, also.

MORAL ECHOES

D. W. Haskew

A brother in the ministry came into my study and during our visit of fellowship he made this statement: "I do not believe in miracles." On my desk sat a vase of beautiful roses and after a moment of meditation I pointed toward the roses and said "What about roses?" He was ready with this reply: "Roses, bah, no miracle there. That is a product of nature." Then I replied: "Listen to me brother, a miracle is something that a man cannot do and that man cannot understand, and I challenge you to produce a rose, or out of your wisdom tell me how that rose grew and produced those colors." His mouth dropped open but nothing came out. If you do not believe in miracles to be sure you never saw a vase of flowers, How those little plants gathered up their colors and made the flower as it is, is beyond me. That is a miracle.

In a country community where I was pastor a man moved in and brought with him what it takes to be a success. He had a lot of common sense, an abundance of energy and he knew how to practice economy. In a few years he was the leader in the community. Everybody loved and respected him. He had lots of corn and hay to sell and his neighbors would buy it on a credit. They would not pay him and soon he had over two thousand dollars worth of hay distributed among his neighbors. when the neighbors became indifferent and soon they were critizing him. They left the man alone and lonely and all because they had cheated him out of his farm produce. Do you want to know why some church members are indifferent toward God? I can tell you. It is because they have much of what belongs to God and his church in their possession and they refuse to deal honestly with Him.

A small lad of three was with his father in the yard. It was Christmas time and the father had been drinking. He and his little boy were playing soldier together and the father would stagger around. At one time he was reeling along and the boy shouted to him: "Walk straight for me, Daddy." That is the voice of youth to every father and mother in the land. In your home, following in your footsteps, there is a lad and he is shouting to you: "Walk straight for me, Daddy." If you expect your child to walk in the straight path, you had better walk that way yourself.

On a construction job there was a quiet workman who went about his task of laying brick. When the day was over it became known that this bricklayer managed to lay thirty thousand brick in one day. One of those inquisitive fellows went to him and made inquiry as to how he had managed to lay so many brick. The workman took his pipe from between his lips and replied: "I never cackled after the laying of a brick." Doubtless you have observed that a hen cackles after laying each egg and she only lays one each day. We learn from this that it never pays to stop after each thing that we do and cackle. We also learn that the matter of laying the brick, as well as the laying of the egg, is of more importance than the cackle that follows. Remember that if you do anything worth while that someone else will do your cackling for you.

My friends, put this on your calendar. "I am the friend of mankind. I stand for honor, truth, love, helpfulness, hope, and salvation. I safeguard men and women, boys and girls along the pathway of life. I lift up the fallen. I strengthen the weak. I help the distressed. I show mercy to the wayward and give gitfs that gold cannot buy to all who come to me. I come to you with the freshness of life and the joy of living. I live in the lives of the young and in the dreams of the old. I find a constant dwelling place in the minds and hearts of the greatest people on earth. I am your greatest necessity. I AM THE CHURCH." That is the voice of the church calling to you. What are you going to do about it?

The time was when we could look at the calm faces and steady tread of men and women, but now we are called to look at their speed and nerve. A woman is a member of many clubs, a sitter in at many a bridge table, a veteran of not a few committee assignments, a server of numerous tables. Finally she goes to the doctor's office with the complaint: "Doctor, I feel all run down." Should that doctor make a correct reply to that woman he would say: "No, madam, the trouble is not that you are all run down, but that you are all wound up." We have allowed too many call bells to ring in our ears. That old deep peace of life is not in us any longer. It is good for our souls to get away to a peaceful, calm life. To be still and know God. The mainspring of life breaks when it is wound up too tight.

Headachy, Breath Bad?
Make This Check-Up

The Police Siren means "Look-out!" And so do Nature's signals—headaches, biliousness, bad breath, which are often symptoms of constipation.
Don't neglect your sluggish bowels, for a host of constipation's other discomforts may result: such as, sour stomach, loss of appetite or energy, mental dullness.
Help your lazy bowels with spicy, all vegetable BLACK-DRAUGHT. Acts gently, promptly, thoroughly, by simple directions.
BLACK-DRAUGHT'S principal ingredient is an "intestinal tonic-laxative." It helps impart tone to lazy bowel muscles. Next time, try this time-tested product!

TRUTH about ADVERTISING

By CHARLES B. ROTH

WHEN SHOULD A MAN ADVERTISE?

BUSINESS men often talk about the problem of when they should advertise most. Should it be when business is good and sales come easily or when business is slow and sales are hard?

Those who believe in advertising most intensively when everybody has money, argue logically enough that it is wise, as Shakespeare himself pointed out several centuries ago, "to take the tide when it serves." Advertising then will prove of most value, some men believe.

Charles Roth

Those, on the other hand, who believe a business should spend money for telling its story most aggressively when times are slow, say that advertising is a business-building force and that it is, therefore, needed most when business needs building.

Whenever we have a temporary lull in business we see the spectacle of many advertisers "drawing in their horns" and refusing to spend money for advertising until times are easy once more.

The late P. D. Armour, great packing magnate, had the sanest view on the subject.

He always told his associates: "Advertise when times are good, because then your dollars show greatest returns. Advertise when times are poor, because if you don't advertise then your public won't know what you have to sell."

The public responds immediately to the man with courage enough to invest his money in advertising even when the condition of the market is not so good as he would like to see it. The public responds always to courage.

In 1921, when America had a short business depression, A. W. Erickson, now dead, made the directors of a company in which he was interested, agree to spend $150,000 a month for advertising during the next 12 months.

Business fell off. The directors wanted to renege. Mr. Erickson wouldn't let them. He made them spend their monthly advertising allowance. He had faith.

When prosperity returned, as it always does, that company, because of courageous leadership, skyrocketed to the top, a position it still holds.

What had happened was that its public, you consumers, read those advertisements and subconsciously became friendly to a business which would continue to tell you its story, in bad times as well as in good. The public reciprocated by giving it its trade.

Whenever a business man advertises it shows he has faith in himself, in his community, in his goods and in his customers.

He is a good business man with whom to trade.

DEATH FROM MENINGITIS REPORTED IN MILL VILLAGE

One death from meningitis occurred in the Mill Village last week, according to a report from the County Health Department early this week. The disease was of the type known as "Meningococcic Meningitis." Dr. Sturkie, County Health Officer, said that there was no cause for alarm as the disease is usually of very low prevalence.

With regard to meningitis in general, Dr. Sturkie explained as follows: "There are a number of types of meningitis based on the type of germ causing the disease, for examples there are tuberculous meningitis, streptococcic meningitis, pneumococcic meningitis, influenza menngitis, and meningococcic meningitis. The latter is the most familiar type. It is treated with a serum which is administered into the vein and into the spinal canal. Examination of the spinal fluid is necessary to determine the type.

"Meningococcic meningitis is not a highly prevalent disease. Due to the fact that 5 to 10 per cent of the general population carry the causative organism in the nose and throat. little good is accomplished from quarantining contacts. The disease is not likely to become epidemic except under conditions in which people are crowded together as in ships, barracks, lodging houses, etc. There is, therefore, little cause for alarm from the appearance of a case in any community.

Honky Tonks Hit On Two Fronts

Montgomery, Alabama, August 2—Law-violating retail beer outlets were caught in a cross-fire of enforcement this week as the Alabama ABC Board and beer industry itself drove steadily ahead in their campaign for improved conditions among retail establishments.

Chairman E. Roy Albright of the ABC Board announced the revocation of five licenses and the suspension of four others as follows: Revocations—Harry's Service Station, Opp; Half Way Inn Service Station, Red Level; County Line Barbecue, Village Springs, Jefferson County; Jimmie's Cafe, Birmingham; Starlight Inn, Montgomery. Suspensions—Riverside Barbecue, Birmingham, 30 days; The Panic, Fairhope, 30 days; The Coffee Pot, Bessemer, 15 days; Shady Nook Cafe, Selma, 15 days.

The beer industry speaking through the Brewers and Alabama Beer Distributors Committee, initiated the cases against the Shady Nook Cafe, the Halfway Inn Service Station and Harry's Service Station after receiving complaints from private citizens that these establishments were violating the ABC Law.

Davd E. Dunn, Director of the Beer Commttee's "clean-up or close-up" campaign, said that the Board's record of 10 revocations and four suspensions during July was "unquestioned proof that the honky-tonk and the jock-joint are on their way out in Alabama

"These law-violating outlets must go," Director Dunn said. "And we appeal to the people to help in this campaign by patronizing only reputable, orderly establishments."

BIRTHDAY PARTY ENJOYED

On Friday, July 21, from four to six o'clock, Mrs. Clyde Mims entertained a number of little folks in honor of her daughter, Mary Clyde's ninth birthday.

Many games were enjoyed on the lawn after which the little guests were invited to the dining room. The table was centered with a beautiful cake holding nine candles, the color scheme being pink and white.

The gifts were then shown after which delicious refreshments of punch ice cream, and cookies were served by Mrs. Clyde Mims, and Mrs. Willie Mims, and Mrs. Alton Harris.

Those enjoying this delightful occasion were Evelyn Lowe, Doris Smith, Ruth Atchison, Mary Faith Cancellor, Norma Jane Lawrence, Willie Dorothy Mims, James Popwell, Charles Smith, Curtis and Elmer Harris Kenneth Mims, all of Clanton; Betty Marcus of Mitchell Dam and Love Joy Adams of Birmingham and the honoree.

Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Oden of Lawley visited Mr. Silas Oden and family for a few days recently.

Mr. and Mrs. Buck Shaw visited home folks here Sunday.

Plan Oat Crop To Furnish Feed

"Three acres of oats to the plow" is a program launched by the Alabama Extension Service to make up for a certain-to-be corn shortage this year. From every section of Alabama come reports of the poor showing of corn—from Baldwin County, where corn follows Irish potatoes, to Sand Mountain where the best corn yields in the State are obtained. Figuring three acres to the plow will give each farmer additional feed for livestock that many are sure to need.

Good part about oats is that they furnish winter grazing in addition to furnishing a cover crop and making hay and grain. Livestock make no bones about eating oats any time, anywhere and feeding experiments show that they rank near the top as a grain feed.

Around September 1 is a good time to plant oats. Then to make a bigger yield nitrate of soda can be added around March 1. County agents say there are hundreds of Alabama farmers who are going to need this extra feed.

Not Taken "For Granted" In The Country

"AS I live in the country, it is easier to appreciate the benefits obtained from Alabama Power Company, for we country folks don't take our conveniences for granted like most city people do.

That comment in a letter from Mrs. Jasper Scott of Taylor, near Dothan, Alabama---and comments from numerous other rural customers---make us feel glad that for so many years we have been extending electric service to rural communities. (Perhaps you will recall that we were one of the first two companies in the United States to pioneer rural electric service.) Our only regret is that economic conditions and governmental competition during the past several years have made it impossible to raise money enough to build rural lines to the extent that we would like to build them. 61,000 rural customers now get electric service from Alabama Power Company.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

To the Chilton County Masonic Conference:

We, your Committee on Memorials, beg leave to report as follows:

Whereas, the Supreme Architect of the universe, in His wisdom has called from us the following brethren, viz: Pinkney M. Jones on February 12, 1939, and J. Steeley Jones on June 30, 1939, both of Verbena Lodge No. 754, and whereas, each of the deceased were true and faithful to the duties and trust required and imposed on them as Masons and citizens, and were held in high esteems by all who knew them.

THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED, by the Chilton County Masonic Conference as follows:

First: That in the death of these brethren the Masonic Fraternity, the State, have lost true members and citizens and the family of each an irreparable loss.

Second: And with deep sympathy with each of the bereaved families and relatives of each, we commend them to the infinite Father who doeth all things well. He will fold the arm of His love and protection around those who put their trust and confidence in Him.

Third: That a copy of these resolutions be furnished to the press for publication and a copy sent to each family, and one spread on the minutes of the Conference.—J. B. Atkinson, chairman Committee.

At The Bible Lyceum

The service at the Bible Lyceum tent was well attended Sunday night as near one thousand people again listened to Evangelist M. R. Garrett answer another great Bible question, "What is the sin that God will not forgive here or hereafter?

A very fine musical program featuring a variety of special musical numbers was rendered by local talent under the leadership of Evangelist C. F. Graves. The meetings have been announced to continue for at least another week. According to announcement, the following subjects will be given at the Bible Lyceum tent beginning tonight:

Thursday night, "The Heavenly Aviators Coming; What Will Be Their Message?"

Friday night, "What Must I Do To Be Lost?"

Saturday at 3 P.M., Sabbath School and at 4 P.M., preaching.

Sunday night, "What Is God's Last Message To The World?"

It has been announced that there will be a very special inspiring musical program given Sunday night, beginning promptly at 7:30. The choir of the First Seventh-day Adventist Church of Birmingham are to render special numbers, as well as quartettes and duets. This musical organization has been heard many times over the Birmingham radio station. The Lyceum party is also expecting local quarttes to take a leading part in this musical program. The Evangelistic party suggests that the public come early as they can only seat 1,000 on comfortable seats.

SUNDAY SCHOOL MEETING AT AT PILGRIM'S REST AUGUST 6

Let everyone keep in mind the Sunday School meeting next Sunday afternoon at Pilgrim's Rest Church. Mr. Phil Maxwell, State Sunday School Field Worker from Montgomery, will be there. This is a meeting that every pastor, superintendent, teacher, and officer should by all means attend. We have a most excellent program.

At that meeting plans will be made for the association-wide teacher training campaign. For the sake of making and building better Sunday Schools, please come. It will be utterly impossible to plan the campaign for all the Sunday schools unless all of them are represented.—J. D. Griffin, Association Superintendent.

Christian Endeavor News

The C. E. program for Sunday evening was led by Fred Blankenship. The topic under discussion was "beauty in the common place." The same questions "What forms of beauty appeals to you most? Why. How does it affect you?" were given to three speakers. Each of them expressed different ideas concerning it Those speakers were Sara Nell Collins and Velma Bahr, and Rev. Bahr. Fred Blankenship told of the beauty others had seen, and read poems by those persons that expressed their views. At the close of the program a Prayer hymn was played and sung, following which sentence prayers were offered as the organist continued playing. Next Monday night's program will be lead by Mildred Stewart.

Maple Springs

Our singing and home coming was well attended last Sunday. There were several members and friends of our Church present whom had not been with us for a long time. We were glad to have them back.

The singing began about 10:30. The opening prayer was led by Rev. Willie Wilson, after which a chairman was elected.

Song directors for the day were Rev. Emmett Wilson, Jasper Jones, Raybon Crew, Floyd Devaughn, Archie Collins, Orvid Hughes, O. L. Devaughn, J. B. Crew, Philip Headley, Claude Little Melvin Devaughn, Latham Wilson, Coolidge Devaughn, Rev. Clark Burkhalter, L. T. Grant, Dewey Hughes, A. O. Boswell, Lee Grant, John Devaughn, Rev. M. Lockhart Ralph Grant, T. E. Wyatt, Vester Miller, Uriah Wilson, Sam Headley and Floyd Little.

The Clanton Four and others rendered specials that were greatly enjoyed by everyone. Our pianists for the day were: Mrs. Floyd Devaughn, Mrs. Vera Mae Nelson, Lee Grant and Ralph Grant.

We hope everyone will come back to our home coming next year.

Our revival is in full force. Rev. Jones is sure bringing us some wonderful messages. Come to hear him and come praying

Field Trip To Dismals Enjoyed At Florence

Recently a group of students of Florence State Teachers College enjoyed a field trip to the Dismals in the college bus.

The purpose of the trip was, of course, nature study. But someone discovered that the day was the first anniversary of the marriage of Dr. Richard H. Bauer, visiting professor in the department of history, and Mrs. Bauer. In celebration of this event a mock wedding was staged, as weddings will be in the year two thousand and something:

Sarah Rudder, of Stevenson, the bride, was attired in trousers, while Howell Morris, Danville, the groom, wore a dress. The ceremony was performed by Dr. Frank R. Thornton another visiting professor, who solemnly told the couple "they must abide by the rules of the new curriculum." After their first shock of surprise the Bauers enjoyed this little drama, students say.

Making this trip from Chilton County was: Frances Strock of Verbena.

Pickens To Hold County Farm Tour

Pickens County farmers are doing something on August 9 that would be a nice thing for every county to do—hold a tour to see their own farming and development. On August 9 farmers are getting together to see Pickens County's new farm practices and the results on an all-day tour of the county.

Price-Regulating Statute Proposed

Another price-regulating proposal—latest of a series of similar measures offered this session and aimed at the public's pocketbook—was tossed into the Senate hopper Friday morning. The measure known as the "loss leader" proposal, would prohibit the sale of any goods or commodity at a price lower than 6 per cent above cost. Senator E. F. Hildreth Green, its sponsor, said he offered the bill in an effort "to take care of the little fellow." He admitted, however, "the little fellow" he intended to help was the retailer and not the consumer.

IMPROVEMENT ORDINANCE

AN ORDINANCE to provide for the construction of certain sanitary sewers in the City of Clanton.

BE IT ORDAINED by the Mayor and City Council of the City of Clanton, Alabama as follows:

Section 1. That sanitary sewers be constructed as follows:

Beginning at a point on the sanitary sewer on Second Avenue north approximately 350 feet east of the east property line of Chandler Street; thence westward along Second Avenue north to the intersection of Selma Road; also beginning at a point on the sanitary sewer at the intersection of Second Avenue north and Hinkle Street, thence southward along Hinkle Street to the intersection of Francis Avenue; also beginning at a point on the sanitary sewer on Second Avenue north and 15th Street, thence northward along 15th Street to the intersection of Selma Road, thence westward along Selma Road to the western corporate limits of the City of Clanton.

Section 2. That said sewers shall be constructed with the necessary manholes and connections, and in accordance with full details, drawings, plans and specifications, and estimates on file in the office of the City Clerk in the City Hall where property owners who may be affected by said improvements may see and examine the same, to which reference is hereby made.

Said sewers and appurtenances are to be constructed of brick and concrete masonry, cast iron and vitrified clay sewer pipe, manholes of brick with cast iron covers the same as is shown by said details, drawings, plans and specifications.

Section 3. Said sewers are to be constructed for the purpose of draining, serving, and benefitting the territory or area bounded as follows:

Beginning at the intersection of 17th Street and Second Avenue north, thence southward for a distance of 150 feet, thence westward 150 feet from and parallel with the south property line of Second Avenue north to a point 135.7 feet east of the east property line of Hinkle Street, thence southward 450 feet to the north property line of Francis Avenue, thence westward along the north property line of Francis Avenue to a point 158.7 feet west of the west property line of Hinkle Street, thence northward to the southwest corner of Lot 4, Block 1, Chandler Terrace Addition to Clanton, thence westward 150 feet from and parallel with Second Avenue north a distance of 400 feet, thence northward to the intersection of Second Avenue north and Selma Road, thence westward along Selma Road to the western corporate limits of the City of Clanton, thence northward along the western corporate limits of the City of Clanton a distance of 150 feet, thence eastward 150 feet from and parallel with the north property line of Selma Road to a point 150 feet north of the north property line of Selma Road and intersection of the centerline of 15th Street if produced northward, thence southward to the intersection of 15th Street and Selma Road, thence southward along the centerline of 15th Street to a point 150 feet south of the south property line of Selma Road, thence westward 150 feet from and parallel with south property line of Selma Road to a point in 17th Street, said point being on the centerline of 17th Street and 150 feet south of the south property line of Selma Road, thence southward along 17th Street to the point of beginning.

Section 4. That the cost of constructing the improvements authorized by this ordinance shall be assessed and levied upon and against all lots or parcels of land lying within the district drained, served, or benefitted by said sewers, and assessments shall not exceed the total cost of said improvements, provided however, that no charge assessed upon or against any lot or parcel of land drained, served, or benefitted by said sewers or any of them shall be greater than the increased value of said property by reason of the special benefits derived by such improvements.

Section 5. That the detail estimates of cost of such improvements on file in the office of the City Clerk aggregate $10,100.00, and that the Mayor and City Council of the City of Clanton will meet on the 5th day of September, 1939, in the Council Chamber of the City Hall of Clanton at 7:30 o'clock P.M., to hear any objections, remonstrances, or protests that may be made against said improvements, the manner of making the same, or the character of materials to be used.

NOTICE OF LOCAL BILL

Notice is hereby given that at the adjourned session of the Legislature of Alabama, which will re-convene on Tuesday, July 18, 1939, there will be introduced the following bill for the relief of J. C. Pattillo, Circuit Clerk of Chilton County, Alabama, for passage and approval.

J. C. PATTILLO,
Clerk.

Said bill will be as follows:

For the relief of J. C. Patillo, Clerk of the Circuit Court of Chilton County, Alabama, and to relieve said Clerk from any and all liability for and on account of fees or compensation received by him under the provisions of General Acts of Alabama, 1931, page 668, for issuing subpoenas before the Grand Jury of Chilton County in cases where no indictments were found, said fees or compensation being in the amount of $81.10.

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF ALABAMA:

Section 1: Whereas, under the provisions of General Acts of Alabama, 1931, page 668, subpoenas were issued for necessary witnesses to be and appear before the Grand Jury of Chilton County, and Whereas, said Act did provide for the payment to the Clerk the same fees as for issuing other subpoenas and Whereas, said Clerk did collect the same fees, being 25c for issuing each of said subpoenas out of the Fine & Forfeiture Fund of Chilton County, the total amount of said fees collected being $81.10, and Whereas, the Attorney General of Alabama, has held in his official opinion that said fees could not legally be paid out of the Fine & Forfeiture Fund of the County, and Whereas, the State Examiner of Accounts has charged the said J. C. Pattillo, Clerk of the Circuit Court with said sum of $81.10. And Whereas, the said J. C. Pattillo, Clerk has performed the duties and services as provided in said general laws, Acts 1931, page 668, THEREFORE,

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF ALABAMA:

Sertion 2: That J. C. Pattillo, Clerk of the Circuit Court of Chilton County, Alabama, be and he is hereby relieved from any and all liability for and on account of said fees received by said J. C. Pattillo, Clerk, out of the Fine & Forfeiture Fund of the county, in performance of his duties in issuing subpoenas for necessary witnesses before the Grand Jury, as provided by General Act of Alabama, 1931, page 668.

Section 3: That all laws and parts of laws in conflict with the provisions of this Act be and the same are hereby repealed. 40-4

Don't Try To Fool Uncle Sam This Year

o

You just can't get by with it when you are fooling with Uncle Sam. Last year, says he, a great many farmers with white cotton marketing cards (penalty free) helped their neighbors with excess cotton by ginning it along with their own to keep him from being penalized. This year the white card man had better take care of himself because he might lose all of his payments if he is caught doing his neighbor this favor.

SYNOPSIS

Beautiful, young Kay Forrest has been employed by Christine Maynard, photographer, to pose for a series of pictures, the background of which will be exquisite Cathedral Gardens, famous Southern resort. Unknown to them, one Jeff Butler, mean, unscrupulous "swamp angel," has led a friend to spy on the two women. Kay, of necessity, is scantily clad while posing for the camera studies.

Kay laughed as she walked down to meet Barney. He was so irrepressibly boyish, so chronically good-humored, attractive in his own way: a bit slouchy (so that he looked less than his six feet), a bit human so that he was not too handsome, a bit too assured in his acceptance of the good things of life. A young man free from care, worry and responsibility; friendly with everybody, a young man who had set himself the task of enjoying life and, thus far, had made a very excellent job of it.

Kay said, "There's no sense in you driving all the way to town, Barney."

He grinned. "Which is probably the reason I do it. Let's travel."

Ruth Hamilton moved from the living-room to join them. She was a striking-looking woman, slightly less blond than her tall son, and possessed of a poise and manner which was the despair of other Beverly ladies. She was forty-four, and one could still see more than a suggestion of the beauty which had once been hers. Kay was conscious now—as always—of the ambition to mature as Mrs. Hamilton had matured: with dignity and graciousness. Mrs. Hamilton said, "Must you go home this morning, Kay?"

"Yes, ma'am. Really."

"And you'll be back tomorrow?"

"Yes'm. Miss Maynard wants [illegible]"

Margaret called in from the veranda. "Take care of Barney. He's been driving more crazily than usual these past few days."

Barney backed the little car out of the shed and whirled it into position. Kay clambered in beside him, and for just a moment her eyes quested through avenues of blossoms, beyond the house and thence into the illimitable vista of graceful cypress and black water· of trees and shrubs and flowers.

"It's unbelievably beautiful," she said.

He caught her mood and held the car motionless for a moment. "Just finding that out, Kay?"

"Yes."

He looked down at her. "You are a crazy kid. What do you mean: just finding it out?"

"Because it's always different." She groped for words. "Each day I think I know just exactly how exquisite it is . . . and then the next day I see something new."

She laughed awkwardly. "I suppose," she said, "that you'd have to be me to understand what I mean."

And in this she was right. From earliest childhood, Kay Forrest had met the world with fearless honesty and unwavering trust . . . though the straightforward simplicity of this trust had, it is true, often reacted in a manner which would have shaken a less devout convert.

At the age of six Kay had returned from the woods with chubby hands red and swollen from too intimate contact with some poisonous wild flowers. Emma Forrest had bandaged them to the accompaniment of a maternal tirade against Kay in particular and Nature in general, and Kay had submitted to both treatments in stoic silence. But it was later that day—when throbbing fingers had refused to be soothed by her father's gentle, sympathetic caresses—that she had sobbed out her justification:

"Oh! Daddy . . . they were so pretty."

Even through years which had brought disillusionment and unanswerable questions, she had managed to retain her faith that somewhere there was a serenity, a beauty, which was a justification for living.

And for this ideal, Kay fought gallantly. She gratefully acknowledged her maternal inheritance: Fixed determination and unwavering strength of purpose. She knew what she wanted — not explicitly but vaguely—and rebuffs only temporarily shadowed young hazel eyes.

Today, at nineteen, Kay was the same courageous little girl, eager to accept the risk of throbbing fingers for a touch of beauty. Standards, she had discovered, were too variable to be depended upon. They were yard-sticks which merely measured the mentality of the user. And so she came to depend more upon herself and her own judgment. Where there was no wrong in her own mind, no evil could exist. She was strong physically and sensitive emotionally, and until very recently her father had been her only real friend.

Kay laughed as she walked down to meet him.

It was difficult, even yet, for Kay to realize just what Cathedral Gardens had meant to her. It was a fulfillment of nineteen years of struggle. To Christine Maynard she gave freely of her body because it was an outlet for the artistic urge within her . . . and in return, this communion with Nature had strengthened her faith.

The Hamiltons had contributed more than they—or she—suspected.

Kay Forrest had been raised in that deadly middle-class atmosphere which is happily regarded as the backbone of the body politic. Her family was looked up to and regarded highly. They were fine, respectable, honest folks—held in great esteem by all who knew them, but somehow (save for her father) falling short of the ideal which she had created for herself.

And it was not until Kay had found herself briefly a part of the Hamiltons' family life that she had realized how she had, for nineteen years, been compelled to accept the makeshift for the genuine.

She brought her thoughts back to the present as Barney shifted into gear and rolled across the parking space which was already commencing to congest with the cars of eager tourists. He swung onto the hard-packed dirt road, touched the accelerator and headed toward town.

Kay said, "Have you the faintest idea, Barney Hamilton, what a wonderful thing your mother has done: creating those Gardens out of a section of swamp?"

He laughed. "Mother, two hundred workmen and a landscape engineer."

"Smart lad, aren't you? What I'm driving at is that it had to be someone like your mother . . . some unusual person even to think of doing what she has done. Do you realize that piece of swamp was worthless?"

"Do I realize it? My dear child, I know it! It was the only piece of property my revered maternal grandparents left which couldn't be sold for love, money or mortgage." His eyes were focused on the road with its border of tall, straight pine trees. "Mother's a pretty swell gal."

"She's more than that." Kay was very earnest. "She's the most colorful person in Beauregard County. You don't realize—"

"I'm dumb. You explain."

"Oh! I don't know . . . She's been a tradition around here. All my life I've heard women talk about Ruth Hamilton. They all boast about the fact that they went to school with her in Beverly. They talk about what a lovely girl she was, and how sweet. They marvel at her life . . ."

"From rags to riches," said he. "Ruth Hamilton, only child of a poor but honest druggist . . ."

The girl laughed and said sternly, "Nuts! She was the darned attractive child of an intelligent couple who adored her and gave her advantages which weren't even thought of in Beverly in those days. College in the East. Europe . . . when to most folks here Europe meant nothing but a small section of the big globe in the little red school-house."

"Keep talking, Child. I love to hear you become enthusiastic." His eyes were thoughtful. "Queer how things work out. It was in Europe . . . Villefranche, I think . . . that Mother met Dad." He was silent for just a moment, "I wish you had known him. There was a grand guy."

"He must have been."

"I'm stating that he was. Had enough dough and enough family not to care about either. Fell for Mother like a ton of bricks, and they played sweetheart until he died. It was a bump . . . but there's one good thing about it."

"What?"

"That he didn't live to see the crash. That he never worried about what might happen to Mother and Sis and me. You see, when he did die he thought we were pretty well taken care of even unto the third or fourth generation." Barney was trying to shake off a momentary feeling of oppression. "Dad and I were mighty good pals. We played around together."

"It must have been pretty wonderful . . ." Kay made an effort to lighten Barney's mood. "You never will quite know what your mother has meant to this town. Growing up here . . . and then going away. Living in New York. Entertaining folks with names that are merely printed words to Beverly folks. It's been right funny: before I could understand I used to hear the ladies talking about Ruth this and Ruth that . . . 'My dear, did you read where Ruth Hamilton entertained the So-and-so's at Southampton last week?' And, 'Ruth will be sailing for a season on the Riviera very soon with her family.' I didn't know who she was . . . and it didn't matter. She was a Beverly girl—"

"Home-town lady makes good."

"Exactly." Kay Forrest was quite serious. "Perhaps that's why she came to mean so much to me, even when I thought I'd never meet her. I'm pretty much of a small-town girl myself."

"But with possibilities."

"Perhaps. You know, I wonder how your mother really likes being back in Beverly after all these years: after all the luxuries she's been accustomed to?"

"She likes it. Plenty."

"But where did she get the courage to come back?"

"Sacrifice for mé. The infant terrible. I've been given to understand that her real motive was to save me from destruction and dry-rot."

"You're crazy."

THE KEY TO THRIFT

Annual Reunion Of Hand Family Set For August 13th At Poplar Springs Church

Sunday, August 13th, is the day set for the annual Reunion and Homecoming of the Hand Family, which will be held again this year at the Poplar Springs Baptist Church, three miles south of Clanton.

For approximately fifteen years this family and their friends have gathered each year for an old-time reunion and Homecoming at the Church dear to them all—Poplar Springs. Several years ago the family voted to make this church the permanent meeting place for the affair.

The program for the Reunion this year includes a sermon by the Rev. J. D. Hughes, beloved friend of the Hand family for many years. No Hand family reunion would be complete without this elderly minister of the Gospel, and so it is that he has become looked upon as almost a member of the family itself.

The morning part of the day is always set aside for the members of the family. This is climaxed by a bountiful lunch spread under the large trees on the Church grounds. But in the afternoon, all friends of the family are cordially invited to join in, with singing taking prominent place on the program. Several well known quarettes are always on hand and members of the Poplar Springs Church are especially invited to attend:

Following is the program arranged for the day:

10:00 o'clock, the family will meet for business of the reunion, etc.

11:00—Sermon by the Rev. J. D. Hughes.

12:00—Lunch and social hour.

1:30—Song service in charge of Mr. O. L. Devaughn.

3:00—Sermon by the local pastor or someeone close to the family.

All good singers and quartettes are especially invited to be present, and all members of the Poplar Springs Church are urged to be present.

of ten. No charge is made by the Health Department for this service."

Announcement was also made that persons suffering with gonorrhea who lack the money with which to obtain treatment may now be referred by private physicians to the County Health Department in Clanton on Monday afternoons for free treatment. Admission to this Clinic, according to the Health Officer, will be limted strictly to individuals who are referred by their family physicians.

J. ARTHUR GORE NOW SELLING SHELL GAS

Mr. J. Arthur Gore, who a few weeks ago purchased the business of B. Lawrence on the Maplesville Road, announces that he is now selling Shell gasoline and oils. Mr. Gore wants his friends to come and try some of that good gasoline and oil.

Elsewhere in this issue of the paper will be found an advertisement of Mr. Gore, in which he offers a number of grocery specials. Turn to the adv. and see what is offered.

MRS. BURBLE PRICE

Mrs. Mildred Price, age 24, passed away at the home of her parents on Monday evening, July 24.

Burial was Tuesday at Cedar Grove with Rev. T. Junkins officiating.

Surviving are her husband and a small daughter, Shirley; her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Hayes; one brother, Earl Hayes; two sisters, Mrs. Rena Maddox and Marie Hayes.

The many friends and loved ones were made sad over the death of this young mother.

Mrs. Bill Landers is spending several days with her mother, Mrs. Dan Hogan.

MR. AND MRS. GEORGE TIPPETT AND SON ARE VISITING HERE

Mr. and Mrs. George T. Tippett and son, Ross, of Gladewater, Texas, are visiting relatives and friends here this week. Mr. Tippett is a native of Chilton County, and before leaving here to make his home in Texas, was a barber in Clanton. Mrs. Tippett taught in the County Elementary Schools for several years. Both are well known and have many friends here who are glad to see them pay their home county a visit.

Mr. Tippett and his family will leave one week from Saturday for Tallahassee, Florida, where they will visit relatives, and from there they will return to their home in Gladewater. Mr. Tippett asked the News to announce that the Tippett family and Culver family will gather at Log Cabin Beach for an all day picnic next Saturday. Those attending are requested to bring well filled baskets.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Johnson, and daughter, Ann Randeau, are spending a few days with his mother, Mrs. Arthur Johnson.

We Observe

By BONNIE HAND

Miss———?—

We haven't learned her name yet. By the time you read this we'll probably know. All we've been able to wrest from R. M. (Cock-of-the-Walk) Tucker is that it's a seven and one-half pound member of the fair sex, who made her arrival at the Central Alabama Hospital here last Monday morning. Since that time R. M. has been "high-brow"—he hardly sees us ordinary people around the News office. We even have to dish out the cigars, and the next thing we expect is for this Business Manager of the Chilton County News to extract a portion of our pay from the envelope next pay-day, to finance an extra box for the extra good job he's done. Our hearty congratulations, Mrs. Tucker, and best wishes for you and the little one. And as for you, R. M.—go peddle ur advertising.

Just Careful—

The Tuscaloosa News carried the "cutest" editorial one day last week. It compared Chilton County with the little boy who wouldn't eat his spinach but wanted to have all ice cream. The . News says if Junior had his way he'd eat only ice cream and no spinach, and that wouldn't be good for Junior. And so Mama insists that Junior eat spinach and then partake of the more delectable ice cream—and Junior will grow up to be strong. This parable, of course, refers to Chilton County and proposed Tuscaloosa-Montgomery highway. Paving of the seventeen miles will cross southwestern Chilton the spinach the T. News says we'll ave to eat before we can have the Highway Department's aid in surfac- the Chilton stretch of the old ghway through Marbury, which is on- short distance. That's the ice cream. Well, we say to the T. News: We don't mind eating our share of the spinach, but we detest having it rammed down our throats. Chilton County can show a substantial bank balance by being careful. No, Mama, Junior just will not gag himself on the big order of spinach so that he will be too sick to eat the extra short order of ice cream. Rolling stones gather no moss, dear Mama; floating bonds don't make prosperous counties—ankrupts them.

Did You Know?—

Alabama State Highway De- ent doesn't even acknowledge a road from Clanton to Maples- and on to Selma? Is this a means Department to influence tourists in this route, or has the De- it other reasons for this mis- nation?.

Roads That Serve Chilton—

g a gathering of citizens in the ssioners Court room at the t house Monday morning, we in- uired of a group of these citizens what as all about. We were informed they had appeared before the Court to ask for improvement of a ery important road in the county—he Jemison-Randolph road. It appeared at some of them wanted a few bad eliminated from the road and mprovements made. We are sure request will be duly considered y the Court. It is their privilege to uggest improvements to important oads. It is this type of road that Chil- on County is interested in—lateral oads that serve the farmers of the ounty. We also have as much paved oad, comparatively, as other counties.

The New School—

As plans go forward on the new pro- osed Chilton County High School uilding, we have been thinking what wise move it woud be on the part the Board of Education to erect this ew plant on a more favorable site than hat of the old school. Wouldn't it be profitable advertisement for Clanton nd the county to have this modern lant out where it could be easily seen y all who pass through Clanton? The ld site is, in our opinion, too far down oward the lower section of the City. ooking into the future, it can be seen hat Clanton's growth will not be to- ard this section of the City, In fact he City trash pile is just below the old ite, and a big swamp just below that. This monument to Chilton County edu- ation should be in plain view—on high round. Just out the Maplesville High- ay would be an ideal location. The oard owns several acres where the ld building stood, we are told. Could ot this be traded for a more favorable ite, or are we wrong? This is just our ewpoint, you know.

PERMANENT COUNTY COTTON UNIT ORGANIZED

LOCAL COMMITTEE NAMED AT CITY HALL MEETING LAST MONDAY

A permanent Chilton County Unit of the National Cotton Council was organized at the City Hall in Clanton Monday afternoon under direction of Cliff Walton, State Director, R. H. Allgood, field representative and John B. Deramus, who was named chairman of the Chilton County Committee.

The National Cotton Council gives equal representation on an equal basis to the five groups most interested in the growing and marketing of cotton. They are: producers, ginners, merchants, crushers and warehousemen.

The first duty of the Chilton County Committee will be the harmonizing of these groups within the county and merging them into an active, practical, working organization through a simple plan of financing which will be explained by the officers of the committee as the work progresses.

The following men compose the Chilton County Committee of the National Cotton Council and will represent the county in all affairs of the State Unit. They are:

John B. Deramus, Chairman; J. N.

If Speaker William B. Bankhead is a candidate for president, "I favor instructing Alabama's delegation for Bankhead," said Hill, arriving from Washington.

The statement put fire under the state's political boiler, in view of Gov. Dixon's stand for an uninstructed delegation. The governor has insisted Southern states should send free dele-

Wreck Victim Found Dead Below Verbena

Arch D. Campbell, 27, tentatively identified last night as a salesman in the employ of J. L. White Roofing Company of Montgomery, was found dead several miles south of Verbena Tuesday afternoon.

Highway Patrolman C. T. Donaldson, who went with Sergt. T. J. Carlisle about 2 P.M. Tuesday to investigate convicts' reports that they had seen a wrecked automobile lying in a deep ravine as their truck passed the site an hour earlier, said they found a demolished Ford sedan and its dead driver lying a wooded gulley. Broken tops of pine trees, said Donaldson, indicated that the car after running off a curve, had somersaulted down the 50-foot ravine to come to its final right-side-up position about 150 feet from the highway. Campbell, with severe lacerations and a fractured skull, was found dead near the car. The condition of his body and the fact that his wrist watch had stopped at 11:25 indicated the accident had occurred at that hour Monday night.

Frank Drizendime, another employee of the White Roofing Company, is said to have visited Campbell at a Clanton hotel Monday night and learned he had already left Clanton for Montgomery. Drizendime said he wondered at not finding the other salesman on his return to the city.

Campbell is said to have left Clanton about 7 P.M. for Montgomery. Highway patrolmen said the nature of the accident led them to believe he had gone to sleep before running off the embankment.

The body was taken to Camden Wednesday by Spigener. Funeral services will be held today.

Says Mayor Fenn Jones

It has been called to my attention that at many homes suitable cans are not provided to hold the garbage. At some places no cans are furnished at all, and the garbage is scattered over the ground, while at other homes large barrels or drums are used which do not have handles, for this reason, also the size of these drums makes it very difficult to load the garbage from them.

The street men are agreeable fellows and they are anxious to give satisfactory service, but I do not think we treat them with due consideration and respect when we fail to place the garbage in cans that meet in all respects the requirements. It is not fair, it is not the proper spirit, it does not carry the least trace of religion for us by our own fault, or deficiency, to place extra and unnecessary work on these men. Under the rule and law, a resident is required to place the garbage in containers and they to be located on an alley or street easily approached by the city trucks.

The men are not expected to carry the garbage an unreasonable distance, neither are they required to gather up the garbage from the ground when no containers are furnished, but should a container not be large enough to hold the garbage, of course the men would excuse us and get the garbage until we purchased a can of right capacity, provided we do not delay too long. Our duty with reference to garbage is well defined and we should perform it without being legally made to do so.

Lard cans and paper boxes are not suitable containers. I suggest a heavy weight galvanized can with cover, the body strong enough so it will not bend when placed against the truck bed to be emptied. Failure in future of a resident to furnish suitable containers, placed convenient to get, will justify the men in not getting the garbage. It is my opinion the garbage can be taken twice every week, in almost the same time it requires now to get it once a week, if we do our duty. Before making complaint against the street men, let us be sure we have performed our part of the service.

KIWANIS CLUB ENJOYED INTERESTING MEET THURSDAY

The Clanton iKwanis Club held a most interesting meeting at the Clanton CCC Camp last Thursday night, which servas the regular meeting of the Club.

Kiwanian Horton Walker, Educational Advisor of the Camp, was host to the gathering, along with officers and members of the Camp staff. Before a delicious dinner was served in the mess hall, members of the Club were carired through the various departments and the routine of the Camp enrollees was explained by Kiwanian Walker. This camp is considered one of the best all-round camps in the United States, and every advantage is offered enrollees to better fit themselves for life on being discharged. Clanton has reasons to be proud of this unit of the CCC.

During the luncheon, members of the staff of officers were called upon to talk about the individual departments. These gentlemen received a big hand from the Kiwanians on the splendid and most hospitable manner they had been entertained. Mr. Walker expressed his appreciation for the support the Club has accorded the Camp in the past, stating that although at one time Clanton as a whole did not support the unit as it should, the past two or three years had seen a keener interest displayed by the people of this section in this unit of the CCC.

The Meeting of the Club tonight, which will be at the usual place and hour, will be a general discussion of the County Fair, which the Club is sponsoring again this year. Every member is urged to attend.

"We continue to prepare our boys and girls for school after school and degree after degree, but do we prepare them for life? There have been too many smart carpenters and electricians stumped with subjects which would not help them with their livelihood."—Dr. John E. Bryan, in Birmingham News-Age-Herald.

BIGGER AND HEAVIER TRUCKS

Considerable propaganda reaches us from sources designating themselves as the Alabama Petroleum Industries and the Alabama Automotive Association, both of which seem to have the common aim of reducing the tax on gasoline and increasing the gross weight of trucks permitted on the highways to 40,000 pounds. As we see it there is no general public need for either. In some counties which have already had their main highways paved there may be a sentiment for reducing the gasoline tax, but over in this section of the state, which has been so badly neglected heretofore, we feel like those counties which got their paved roads while we were just paying tax should realize that turn-about is fair play and that they should continue to pay tax until we get paved roads.

The demand for doubling the gross weight permitted to trucks comes evidently from a very small percentage of truck owners. In fact the present weight limit is much above the limit wanted by any except a few long-haul carriers. Of a total of over 13 million dollars collected by the state in 1937 in gasoline taxes, a quarter of a million was paid by common carrier and contract trucks and buses—less than 2 per cent. The question naturally arises whether it is fair to the other 98 per cent of the taxpayers to permit an increase in gross weight which will materially increase the cost of construction and maintenance of trunk highways used by these trucks and leave so much less to be used in the construction and maintenance of our local county roads. Another proposition that must be considered is whether the load limit and size at present is not much larger than is permissible if the factor is not to be ignored. Every week check over the list of highway accidents and note the large number that were caused by small cars being forced off the road or side-swiped by trucks or buses. Anyone who has traveled over the highways used by the big trucking concerns knows just how much consideration the small car or truck gets from one of these juggernauts and can easily imagine how nice it will be if the Legislature permits the limit on load and size to be doubled.—Linden Democrat-Reporter.

WHEN AN EDITOR ERRS . . .

If you've read this before, stop us, but the truth contained therein prompts us to reprint it again:

"When a carpenter makes a mistake he knocks it apart and rebuilds it. When a business man makes a mistake he charges it to profit and loss. When a lawyer makes a mistake he appeals it. When a judge makes a mistake he sticks to it. When a doctor makes a mistake the undertaker buried it. When a preacher makes a mistake, the Lord forgives him. But when an editor makes a mistake

Newspapers in other cities and towns in Alabama may rave about what they have, the advantages they enjoy, but only Clanton can say that it is the population and geographical center of Alabama, located in the center of Chilton County, most progressive county in the State of Alabama; practically half-way between the State's two largest cities, on the State's most important Bee-Line Highway and Alabama Highway 22.

BAPTIST WORLD CONGRESS ENDS

We have been very greatly interested in reading the newspaper reports of the proceedings of the Baptist World Congress, recently held at Atlanta. We regret we were denied the privilege of hearing many of the memorable discourses delivered during that session.

We would not undertake a discussion of the subjects dealt with there, but suffice to say that the principal speakers on that program demonstrated a very broad conception and understanding of prevailing world conditions and world problems, an dealt with them frankly and forcefully.

The burden of their warning was that nothing less than a moral awakening in the world will be able to save our democratic governments.—Monroe Journal.

$8,000,000 DEPOT

One day last week Alabama's Senator Lister Hill walked out of the office of War Secretary Harry Woodring, told the Associated Press he was "highly pleased" over an announcement the War Department would shortly make. Next day it came: to Mobile was awarded an $8,000,000 air depot, a project for which competition had been stiff, as part of the Army's most-important Caribbean portion of new national defense developments. Some location on the Bay south of Arlington Pier, a municipal playspot, will be selected soon, possibly will include municipal Bates Field in which case the city will have to get another airport. A personnell of around 1,000, mostly civilians, will service and rebuild all types of Army aircraft. Expected annual payroll: $1,500,000. Thus another big boost was given to fast-growing Mobile.—"Alabama" Magazine.

MARK REMARKS

The recent "scenic map of Alabama" published by the State Highway Department again leaves out the paved highway between Clanton and Selma. Incidentally the same map shows a paved road from Montgomery, through Prattville and on to up about Maplesville. Wonder if those graduate engineers and architects down there really believe there is no paved highway between Clanton and Selma, or that there is one through Prattville to Maplesville.

MORAL ECHOES

D. W. Haskew

One of the most prevalent diseases in the world today is the "jitters." Everything and everybody have the jitters. Business has the jitters. Society has the jitters. Politics has the jitters. Whole races and nations have the jitter. You may be a bit curious to know what is the "jitters." I may not be able to clear your mind on the question, but I know when a boy or girl, man or woman, has the jitters. In other words, a person has the jitters when he twiddles his thumbs, scratches his nose, pats his feet, rock the chair, walks the floor, chews gum, screams at noises, drives at top-speed, snaps and snarls at interruption and plays the fool generally. It is not medicine that folks need so much as it is quietude and calmness of soul. Better treat yourself for the jitters. You have that disease.

"What is your hurry?" was asked of the man on the run. He was going downtown to wonder why he had come. Hurry is an expensive and as dangerous as worry. A young woman hurried her courtship to find herself with a husband she did not want. A student hurried through the examination and made a mistake that cost him a passing mark. A thoughtless driver hurries down the road for no reason and is not able to make the curve. The train blew and one of those fellows who must lead the procession, grabbed his suit case and ran down the aisle to the front of the coach. Two dozen others who believed in hurrying followed him and all huddled up, they stood for twenty minutes waiting for the train to run into the terminal station. When the train stopped it was the other end of the coach where the door was opened. Never get into a hurry unless you are going to swat a mosquito or kill a hornet in a speeding car.

The whale says the world is made of water. The frog's viewpoint is that it is mostly mud. The camel thinks that the world is trackless sand. The jack rabbit says the world is a rolling prarie. The eagle says that it is blue sky and rocky peaks. What is the world from your viewpoint? How foolish it is for us to set up our viewpoint as absolute truth. I view the world from the vision of a preacher. You view it from that of a banker, merchant, lawyer, doctor, farmer, miller. Your truth is not my truth, and my truth is not all of your truth. In our small sphere we may be right but remember that there is truth beyond our narrow walls.

The doctor came into my room after three weeks of confinement, and after he had looked me over he said that I was making rapid recovery. My reply was, "Yes, Doctor, I have been a mighty good patient." Then, with a smile he said: "My, my! how you do hate yourself." I know that I had carried out his instructions. My feeling is this way: Since I try hard to live up to what God and man requires of me, that I have no just cause to despise myself. And since I do not dislike myself, there is nobody else whom I have a right to dislike. If we will first live right, we will have no difficulty in loving other people.

I saw and heard a baby tell a lie the other day and it was not to be accused in its falsehood. He was too young to talk, but was learning to walk. He stumbled in his uncertain attempt to walk and struck his curly head on the chair. He set up a howl and instantly turned on the chair and began to beat it with his little clenched fist. He could not say so but said by his action that the chair was to blame. Parents foolishly teach their children the wrong way of thinking. Have you not seen the chair struck and accused: "The bad chair that hurts baby," by parents, sisters and nurses? We all know that the child was to blame and not the chair. In like manner, we blame a thousand things for our hurts and failures, when we are to blame. Truth, thou art a gem!

1206 Women Say "Yes" to Query
If 93 out of 100 users picked at random declare they were helped by a medicine, would you believe in its merit? Record of the famous Query among women of leading cities in 12 Southern States shows 1206 out of 1297 users queried say CARDUI helped them. That figures 93 out of 100! What a record!
Women all over the South are eager to tell of their experiences with CARDUI. They were weak, rundown, nervous. Those are symptoms of functional dysmenorrhea due to malnutrition, which CARDUI helps to relieve by stimulating appetite and digestion and building physical resistance. Try CARDUI!

Keep Cotton Clean

—o—

As you start your cotton pickers into the field this year give them a little "pep" talk about the importance of keeping the cotton free of leaves and trash, says J. C. Lowery, extension agronomist.

Tell the pickers what the U. S. Department of Agriculture and the state agricultural colleges have found about the effect of trash on the quality of cotton. Tell them, for example, that extra care in picking has raised the quality of cotton an average of a full grade over cotton picked in the usual way. Between the extremes of good and poorly picked cotton, the specialists have found an average difference of as much as two full grades.

Remind the pickers what these differences in grade mean in the value of a bale. Explain to them that clean picking may increase the value anywhere from one dollar to six dollars a bale, depending on the particular type of cotton. Point out, too, that even if you take your cotton to a gin having good cleaning equipment, the cleaner can't undo all the damage caused by the trash.

Here is a point about the trash problem to keep in mind yourself. Remember that the chance of getting trash in the cotton increases as the plants get older and drier. Early in the season, the bracts of the bolls are all that give much trouble. But later on, the leaves dry out and shatter much more readily. The bolls that open late are often damaged and immature, and the burs are more apt to break and get mixed up with the fiber. As the season advances, diseases, insects, and frost also add to the trash problem.

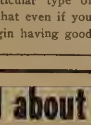
TRUTH about ADVERTISING

By CHARLES B. ROTH

A MAN NAMED CAXTON

YOU may not remember ever hearing the name of William Caxton, but it was his life which makes your life today comfortable. He it was who introduced printing into England. This was in 1476. The introduction of printing has made all progress possible.

It wasn't until 1638 that America had a printing press, this at Harvard university, but after that printing grew, and newspapers sprang up, and modern American life began.



Charles Roth

The printing press is the forerunner of knowledge wherever it is introduced. The printed word, even to this day, has no rival as a quick means of disseminating vital facts and ideas.

The newspaper of today is one of the modern wonders of the world. It is the broadest, quickest, most flexible and most economical way of getting a message into the minds of the people.

Early in our national history, manufacturers and merchants sensed this power of the press. They began using it to carry their advertising facts and ideas into the homes.

These early advertisers were careful business men. The fact that the newspaper would complete the educational process for their goods wasn't enough. It also had to do the job at less cost than any other medium.

And they found, after many trials in different fields, that it did. It got their message to prospective buyers in a manner which was economical as well as effective.

Today this same condition is unchanged. Advertisers, using newspapers year in and year out, find it the most profitable way in which to tell their story to buyers.

The reason is simple. The newspaper is the great common denominator of modern life. It reaches practically every family. It has the confidence of its readers. It stands for everything which is right and good and modern.

The advertisements in your newspaper are as much a part of its vital importance as the editorial and the news columns.

As a matter of fact, most readers find it hard to tell what interests them most—the commercial news, which is called advertising and which touches their lives every day, or the general news, in news story, editorial and cartoon.

They're both valuable.

This man named Caxton was one of the great benefactors of mankind. He lighted the lamp—and it is still burning bright, though centuries have fled since he lived.

LETTERS to the EDITOR

VERBENA SPEAKS

Editor, Chilton County News:

We see in last week's Chilton County papers, under the headline "From The City Hall" that our beloved Mayor Fenn Jones has discovered that Clanton is no longer a small "hick" or country town and has blossomed into a big city, therefore we will have no more displays of wares cluttering up our Clanton sidewalks and no more groups of men and women on the sidewalks "Discussing Matters of interest to themselves."

Now you, of Chilton County, who are of one mind, or different minds, who want to get in the same place and talk over matters of interest to yourselves, just take your foot in your hand and trek out to the ball field or the flying field and go into all the huddles you like but watch out for planes at the flying field or you might get scattered and have to continue your huddle in heaven.

We suggest that the City of Clanton, which "Gets more like New York every day," furnish a huddling field for visitors to this metropolis, especially on Saturdays when huddling is at its height. Also furnish ice water for the argumenters.

While the writer was reading the edict from the City Hall in Clanton recently, Mr. Burl McCreary, a fine Irishman from Mitchell Dam remarked that it would please him and other visitors to our county seat, if the City Fathers would make an effort to find parking space for out-of-town cars in the shopping district of this fast-growing city.

Mr. McCreary said he came to Clanton often with his family, all the way from Mitchell Dam to do shopping and almost every time he had to put his family out at the best stores and drive far beyond or far behind the court house to park his car. He said this worry is created by many Clanton residents or business men who keep their cars parked in front of their places of business in the shopping district all day every day.

Mr. McCreary further said that it would help Clanton if every other parking space from the railroad to the court house should be marked for shopping visitors only" and that no cars at all should be allowed to park at any time on either side of the paved highway which runs directly through Clanton, and which now has a parking limit of forty-five minutes, and is dangerous for even one minute.

Mr. Macy Jones, who was discussing the matter with the writer and Mr. McCreary said that he knew of a truck for sale by a Clanton dealer, which was parked on a main street in this city for days and days at a time.

Now, if Clanton is no longer a "hick" town and cares to have shoppers from Mitchell Dam, Lay Dam, Verbena and other distant points, we earnestly pray the City Fathers to mark off a few parking places in the shopping district for visitors only, so that we will not have to carry our bundles a mile or more to our cars. Clanton might set a pleasing precedent for other large cities. It would indeed be a pleasure to drive into Montgomery or Birmingham or even little New York and find a parking place marked "for visitors only."

We are proud of Clanton and its progressiveness and delighted to find out that the once small trading post has now emerged from seedy hickdom, but please try to persuade Clanton residents to park their cars out toward the cemetery or far behind the court-house and give visiting shoppers a chance to park in the shopping center and buy what your merchants offer. We visitors will not park in one spot all day.

Keep on going up, Clanton, we out-of-towners are pushing and pulling for you and trying to trade with you but we do not like to walk so far to our cars while in your city and "tote" the truck we have bought from your merchants.

Just a word to visiting shoppers and other visitors: Whatever you do, when you start toward Clanton, be sure to put on some shies that will not hurt your feet or come bare-footed, especially on Saturdays, so that when your day's visit is done you will not have fallen arches or flat-foot getting back to your cars from the shopping district. Before leaving home, pep up your legs with Mustang liniment and step lively so as not to obstruct traffic on the sidewalks. Selah.

S. L. GIBSON.

State Employees To Stand Merit Tests

o

Personnel Director I. J. Browder has announced that examinations for approximately 4,500 state employees slated to come under Alabama's new merit system will begin in November, and will continue through March. Clerical and general empolyes will come first. The merit system is expected to be competely installed by March, 1940.

CRIMSON TIDE MINUS ELEVEN LETTER MEN THIS SEASON

o

The 1939 Crimson Tide eleven will be minus eleven lettermen, seven of whom were regulars, from the 1938 team. The regulars who will be missing are Lou Bostick and Grover Harkins, guards; Tut Warren and Perron Shoemaker, ends; Vic Bradford, quarterback; George Zivich, right halfback; and Charlie Holm, fullback. The other lettermen who have graduated are Jess Foshee, guard; Jake Redden, tackle; Hal Hughes, quarterback; and Pig Davis, fullback.

The Youth in Business

By C. E. Johnston

Dean, Schools of Business International Correspondence Schools

IN planning a future youth must remember that the times are typified by great industrial change. New industries spring up and expand, while old industries fade out of the picture. The young man now entering business should endeavor to align himself with a growing industry and to avoid industries that are standing still or declining.

How can the young man determine the industries that are likely to go forward, not backward in future years? One thing he can do is to note how the public spends its income. Business ideas become effective when they are translated into what the average family buys. Keep in mind that many products, experimental a decade or even a few years ago, are now part of our daily existence—radios, quick frozen foods, electric mixers, electric toasters, electric sweepers, automatic heating, air conditioned buildings, and innumerable other things.

He should also note the new interests of the public as indicated by the type of films shown in moving picture houses, the contents of popular books, and the subjects propounded in radio forums and local discussion groups. He should pay attention to the universal urge for more pleasure, the greater interest in the outdoors, in camps and trailers, and in suburban homes.

The young man, however, must not get the idea that every new business project will result in a great industry or that the future of every old business is dark. The character of the management of a particular business as well as the type of industry in which the business is engaged should be considered by the youth who is seeking a position that will offer an assured future.

Use AAA To Help Improve Your Farm

o

A call to Alabama farmers to use AAA payments to the best advantage in improving Alabama farm land was sounded this week by A. W. Jones, AAA Administrative officer.

"I sincerely hope that every farmer of the state this year will get the maximum good from this assistance by using it for bearing part of the cash cost of the soil-building needed on his farm," Jones said. "The assistance is not, in itself, a reward for the conservation accomplished. It simply provides a means by which farmers get soil-building done that they could not otherwise do. The real reward to the farmer is in the form of improved land and more efficient production."

In an effort to assist farmers in planting more winter legumes during September and October this year, arrangements have been made for the AAA to furnish vetch, Austrian winter pea seed, phosphate and lime to Alabama farmers under a grant-of-aid plan, enabling farmers to obtain fertilizer and legume seed without any cash outlay. The cost of the materials will be deducted from the soil-building payments. Farmers in Alabama, Arkansas, and Georgia, have used the grant-of-aid plan in obtaining triple superphosphate since 1937, while Georgia farmers found it popular in obtaining 1,000,000 pounds of winter legume seed last fall. South Carolina farmers used the grant-of-aid plan in obtaining about 35,000 tons of limestone during 1939.

Many Alabama farmers assign their payments for obtaining winter legume seed and fertilizers for the legumes and for pastures. This plan also enables them to obtain their needed materials without a cash outlay just before planting the legumes and fertilizing the pastures.

PICK COTTON AS OPENS

o

Pick cotton as soon as it is open if you want to raise the grade. Clean picking may increase the value anywhere from one dollar to six dollars a bale—depending on the particular type of cotton. The chance of getting trash in cotton increases as the plants get older and drier, and as the season advances diseases, insect, and frost also add to the trash problems. Shake off or pick off clingingf leaves from the mature locke before putting them in the sack. Avoid gathering parts of the burs along with the cotton.

Giving Permanent Pastures A Rest

o

Many farmers who are following soil conserving recommendations of the CCC Camp area staff, near Clanton, Alabama, are now giving their permanent pastures a rest during the dry, summer months and thus improving their erosion control program, according to Mr. James H. Wood, Camp Superintendent.

Pastures need a rest, just like human beings, especially during mid-summer dry months. From July until early fall rains. Mr. Wood points out, summer pasture production usually falls off. If overgrazed at such times pasture plants become so weakened that erosion follows.

Many farmers during this period use kudzu for supplementary pasture, taking care that the kudzu is not overgrazed. By early September these farmers can return their stock to the permanent pastures which usually will again be in production due to fall rains

Use of kudzu for supplementary pasture cuts down on expensive summer grain and hay feeding and keeps up milk and beef production as well. The grain and hay thus saved will proved valuable this winter.

The Cheapest Hired Help

"I LEARNED many years ago that wired help was by far the cheapest hired help."

Mrs. J. Burke Land, our good customer on Route 3, Montgomery, Ala., wrote us that, and it is her way of saying that Alabama Power Company electric rates are low. Mrs. Land is not alone in thinking so---almost every one of the nearly 4,000 customers who recently wrote us expressed a similar conclusion. They came to that conclusion after comparing the modest amounts of their bills with the many services received from the electricity they used. Many who use numerous electrical appliances wrote that the pleasure of dependable electric light alone was worth the entire amount of their bills.

If you are not making full use of electric service in your home, inquire about the rates the next time you pay your bill, and learn how the rate goes down with increased use of electricity.

4-H Club Boys Will Camp At State Fair

—o—

Birmingham, Ala:—One of the real features of the Alabama State Fair, October 2-7, which will appeal to visitors from all over the State will be the encampment of 4-H Club boys on the grounds for the entire week. F. W. Burns, of the Auburn Extension Service, estimated this week that at least 300 boys will be encamped on the grounds for the week, this calling for a regular tented city on the acreage just east of the Flower Show Building.

Mr. Burns also estimated that 150 to 200 calves would be exhibited by these lads. The calves will be housed in the old poultry show building on the northwestern end of the grounds, and a judging arena is being arranged so that the judgings will be held out doors. Circus seats will furnish plenty capacity for those interested in the judgings which will be held Monday, the initial day of the Fair.

"Following the judging of the calves," said Mr. Burns, "will come the judging of the dairy cattle. This will be held on Tuesday, and then on Wednesday when His Honor, Governor Frank M. Dixon, will be in the reviewing stand, all cattle exhibited will be shown in parade in front of the grandstand. Fifteen herds of Jerseys will be shown in the adult division, while Kilby Farms will have on display a herd of Guernseys and W. B. Baker and Sons of Birmingham will have both Guernseys and Jerseys exhibited."

R. S. Suggs, of Auburn, will be in charge of the beef cattle show this year. Luther Fuller, of the T.C.I. Company, will take over the superintendency of the swine show, and T. A. (Dad) Sims will have complete supervision of all 4-H Club work and activities.

An auction is to be held during the week from the swine show exhibits, and from the beef cattle entries as well. Animals sold at this auction, however, will remain on display at the Fair grounds for the entire week.

RECORD CROWD AT LYCEUM

—o—

All previous records in attendance were broken at the Bible Lyceum tent Sunday night as near 1300 people listened attentively to Evangelist M. R. Garrett speak on the subject of "God's Last Message To The World." Mr. Garret stated in part that "God has a message for all the world, and that message will go to every nation. kindred tongue and people to prepare a people for the second coming of the Lord. That message found in Rev. 14:6-12, is being preached today in some 750 languages, in 385 countries of the world. When this last message will have been given, then the Lord will come. At present it has gone to about 95 per cent of the people of the world."

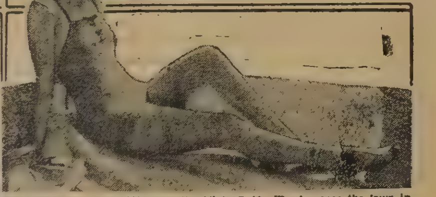
A very fine musical program under the direction of Evangelist C. F. Graves was an added feature of the service. The Birmingham choir gave several numbers, and also the Clanton Four gave some very fine quartettes.

Mr. Garrett has annnounced that these subjects will be covered this week at the Bible Lyceum tent. Tonight, "Are The Ordinances Of The First Church Binding Today." Friday night, "Santification. Can I Live A Sinless Life In A Sinful World?" Saturday, Sabbath School at 3:00 P.M., followed by a Baptismal service. Sunday night, "A Round Trip To Heaven—Then Where?" No meeting Monday night. Tuesday night, "Modern Spiritualism—Can The Living Talk With The Dead?" Wednesday night, "One-Half Hour's Silence In Heaven—Why?"

CAMERAGRAPHS

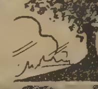
"WHAT MAKES ITS TICK?" is question asked by these three indomitable experts, Franklin P. Adams, Clifton Fadiman and John Kieran, whom the nation's radio dialers attempt to "stump" every Tuesday evening on the "Information Please" program. Looking somewhat "stumped," they attempt to assemble the 7,857 parts of the new National Cash Register that made its debut on the program recently.

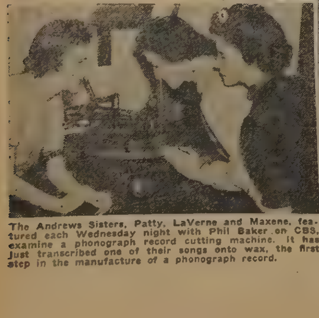
18th CENTURY COUNT EATS HIS OWN 1939 BIRTHDAY CAKE—Mrs. William H. Vanderbilt, wife of Rhode Island's Governor, had an unusual experience in cutting one of 80 birthday cakes at the 80th anniversary celebration of baking powder at Rumford, R. I., recently. Beside her stands Count Rumford, star guest of the occasion, the great scientist whose name came down to community and company. Left to right: A. E. Marshall, President Rumford Chemical Works; Suzanne Silvercruys, sculptress whose bust of Count Rumford was unveiled; Mrs. Vanderbilt; Count Rumford; Governor W H. Vanderbilt.



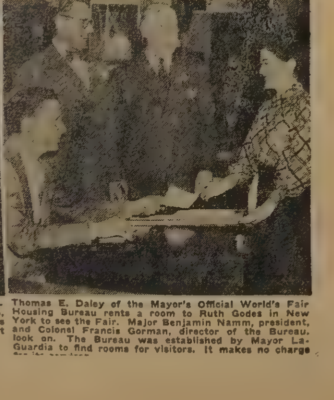
SUN SHINES ON A STAR—Pretty Olivia DeHavilland graces the lawn in front of her Hollywood home as she bathes in the sun during idle hours.

Ezra Stone, youthful Broadway star, has added another job to his collection which includes being star of a Broadway play, a dramatic instructor, an understudy to the leading comic in a musical comedy and a play producer. His "Aldrich Family" now occupies Jack Benny's spot on NBC Sunday nights.





The Andrews Sisters, Patty, LaVerne and Maxene, featured each Wednesday night with Phil Baker on CBS, examine a phonograph record cutting machine. It has just transcribed one of their songs onto wax, the first step in the manufacture of a phonograph record.



Thomas E. Daley of the Mayor's Official World's Fair Housing Bureau rents a room to Ruth Godes in New York to see the Fair. Major Benjamin Namm, president, and Colonel Francis Gorman, director of the Bureau, look on. The Bureau was established by Mayor LaGuardia to find rooms for visitors. It makes no charge

Little Miss Gussie Rainer Higgins of Jackson, Miss., daughter of Berton Higgins, is visiting Mayor C. Fenn Jones.

Maple Springs

Last Friday night brought our revival to a close. We had another great revival this year. Everyone greatly enjoyed those wonderful messages of Brother Jones. We received nineteen members, eighteen of which were baptized Saturday morning. The other one was by letter.

Every member of the Church is urged to be present next Sunday morning. We have set that date to call our pastor for next year, and also to elect the various other officers. Next Sunday is also our regular preaching day, so come out to preaching and to attend to the business of the day.

Prayer service will begin about seven o'clock Sunday night.

Remember the services and be present.

NEW SALEM

The New Salem Social Club met at the Church July 13 with only a few members in attendance. We were delighted to have as our vistors for the afternoon Mrs. W. J. Billingsley, from Clanton and the Rev. Thomas from Birmingham.

The Rev. Chandler conducted devotional. He also gave a very interesting talk on "Mission."

Mrs. Cora Smith took charge of the business in absence of the President and the Vice President.

Each member is urged to be present at the meeting August 7, which is the 20th anniversary of the Club.

The Youth in Business

By C. E. Johnston

Dean, School of Business International Correspondence Schools

SOMEONE has said "that it is good to be able to take orders, but that it is better to be able to give orders." This statement means that the men who occupy important positions in business and in society today are those who give orders to others and do this in such a way that their commands are carried out promptly and cheerfully and without friction and ill-feeling being aroused. The ability to give orders, important as it is, is not as important to the young man in his first years in business as the ability to take orders.

The way a young man reacts to the orders and suggestions of superiors tells much about his temperament and his ability to deal with people. It also indicates the keenness of his intelligence and his powers of self-control. In general, the ability to take orders and to carry them out promptly, efficiently and cheerfully is what first draws the attention of senior executives to a junior employe and causes them to regard him as a possibility for promotion.

So much emphasis is placed on new ideas in business today, that the young employe is apt to think that his advancement will depend on his ability to make startling suggestions for improvements in operations. It should be borne in mind that while original conceptions are of importance to the success of a business, new ideas that are worth while are only likely to occur to those who have studied business principles and have become thoroughly familiar with the details of the operation of the departments in which they are employed. Young men and young women who think that their original ideas will assure them promotion are merely wishful thinkers. There is no easy road to success in business.

NOTICE OF LOCAL BILL

Notice is hereby given that at the present session of the Legislature of Alabama, there will be introduced the following local bill, which shall be substantially as follows:

An Act

For the relief of M. A. Gore, N. S. Johnson, the Estate of John W. Foshee, deceased, W. R. Clements, V. J. Gragg, H. M. Nix, present and former members of Jury Board of Chilton County present and former Judges of Probate and County Commissioners of Chilton County, Alabama, and to releive said parties from any and all liability for and on account of certain charges set up by the State Examiners of Accounts for alleged compensation or payments made to said members of Jury Board in excess of compensation alleged to be allowed by law.

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF ALABAMA:

Section 1: Whereas, under the provisions of the General Acts of 1931, page 56, M. A. Gore, N. S. Johnson, and John W. Foshee, were appointed members of the Jury Board of Chilton County, Alabama, and Whereas, said Act provided that the compensation of said members of said Board should be paid the sum of $5.00 per day for the time acutally engaged in the discharge of their duties as such members, however, the total compensation of each member for any one year not to exceed $100.00 in counties of less than 25,000 population, according to the last preceding Federal census, and Whereas, Chilton County, according to said last preceding Federal Census, had a population of 24,579, and Whereas, said members were paid compensation in accordance with said general law, and Whereas, Acts of 1933, page 136, reduced the compensation of Members of the Jury Board in counties of less than 25,000 population, to not exceeding $50.00 each year, and whereas said Acts of 1933 were again amended by Acts 1939 at the present session of the Legislature, Senate Bill by Harris No. 55, approved by Governor, March 2, 1939, placing said compensation again at $100.00 per year in Chilton County, and Whereas, W. R. Clements was appoinnted Member of the Jury Board to succeed John W. Foshee, in 1935 and H. M. Nix was appointed member of the Jury Board to succeed N. S. Johnson in 1936 and V. J. Gragg was apponted Member of Jury Board to succeed M. A. Gore in 1937 and Whereas, after the amendment of said General Act of 1931 by said Acts of 1933, through inadvertence or oversight, said Members of the Jury Board continued to draw compensation in excess of said Acts of 1933 and Whereas, the State Examiners of Accounts have charged in their examination of the public accounts of Chilton County that said Members of the Jury Board have drawn the following amounts in excess of the compensation allowed by law as follows: M. A. Gore, $250.00, N. S. Johnson, $150.00, John W. Foshee, $100.00, W. R. Clements, $300.00, V. J. Gragg, $150.00, H. M. Nix, $165.00 and Whereas, the State Examiners of Accounts in their official examination of public accounts of Chilton County have set up said charges against said officials and against the judges of probate and the members of the Commissioners Court in office during the respective time that said jury commissioners are alleged to have drawn said overpayments Therefore,

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF ALABAMA:

Section 2: That M. A. Gore, N. S. Johnson, Estate of John W. Foshee, W. R. Clements, V. J. Gragg and H. M. Nix, Judge of Probate and Members of the Commissioners Court in office during the respective times that said Members of the Jury Board are alleged to have drawn said overpayments as herein stated be and they each are hereby separately and severally relieved from any and all liablity for and on account of said compensation received by them or eitehr of them.

Secton 3: That all laws or parts of laws in conflict with the provisions of this Act be and the same are hereby repealed.

MIZE-HOLLIMAN

The marriage of Miss Ruth Mize of Maplesville, to Mr. M. T. Holliman also of Maplesville and manager of the Yellow Front Store there, will be an event of August 20, it was announced this week.

"WUTHERING HEIGHTS" WILL BE SHOWN AT WADESONIAN

"Wuthering Heights," a motion picture that has been termed one of the year's best, has been billed to show at the New Wadesonian Theatre here next Tuesday, August 15.

This picture features Merle Oberon and Lawrence Oliver. Also on the bill for that night is the latest issue of the "March Of Time."

Other pictures listed in the program for the coming week are: "The Jones Family In Hollywood," Friday and Saturday midnight of this week; "Nancy Drew, Trouble Shooter," Saturday matinee and night; "Susannah Of The Mounties," starring Shirley Temple, for Sunday and Monday; "Son Of Frankenstein," Wednesday and Thursday of next week.

Enrico Caruso had an after dinner trick which he used to delight in doing. Holding a fragile glass aloft, its narrow stem between his thumb and forefinger, he would sing the ascending scale until he would reach a high note. Sounding this high note repeatedly for a few moments, it would cause the glass to shatter into bits.

Annual Reunion Of Hand Family Set For Next Sunday At Poplar Springs Church

Sunday, August 13th—next Sunday—is the day set for the annual Reunion and Homecoming of the Hand Family, which will be held again this year at the Poplar Springs Baptist Church, three miles south of Clanton.

For approximately fifteen years this family and their friends have gathered each year for an old-time reunion and Homecoming at the Church dear to them all—Poplar Springs. Several years ago the family voted to make this church the permanent meeting place for the affair.

The program for the Reunion this year includes a sermon by the Rev. J. D. Hughes, beloved friend of the Hand family for many years. No Hand family reunion would be complete without this elderly minister of the Gospel, and so on it is that he has become looked upon as almost a member of the family itself.

The morning part of the day is always set aside for the members of the family. This is climaxed by a bountiful lunch spread under the large trees on the Church grounds. But in the afternoon, all friends of the family are cordially invited to join in, with singing taking prominent place on the program. Several well known quartettes are always on hand and members of the Poplar Sprngs Church are especially invited to attend:

Following is the program arranged for the day:

10:00 o'clock, the family will meet for business of the reunion, etc.

11:00—Sermon by the Rev. J. D. Hughes.

12:00—Lunch and social hour.

1:30—Song service in charge of Mr. O. L. Devaughn.

3:00—Sermon by the local pastor or someone close to the family.

All good singers and quartettes are especially invited to be present, and all members of the Poplar Springs Church are urged to be present.

Those spending are invited to bring lunch and spread with the crowd.

MRS. FRANKLIN HONORED

Mrs. J. T. Franklin, a bride of two weeks ago, was honored with a kitchen shower Thursday afternoon, August 3. This affair was given by Mrs. Johnnie Franklin.

As the guests arrived Miss Louise Franklin received the gifts. Presents were given by the following and refreshments were served:

Mrs. O. L. Rawlinson, Mrs. Ernest Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Milford, Mr. and Mrs. C. N. Baker, Mrs. Myrtle Baker, Misses Louise, Lera Mae, Allie Lue Franklin, Myrtice Milford, Vonzell Hayes Mattie Ratliff, Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Wright, Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Hogan, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Coe.

A M. (BILL) MIZE NOW AT PAN-AM SERVICE STATION

A. M. (Bill) Mize, who has been identified in the gasoline business in this section for several years, is now manager of the Pan-Am Service Station in Clanton. Mr. Mize, who comes from Maplesville, is on the job when it comes to servicing the motor cars of today, and the announcement that he is now manager of the Pan-Am Station here will come as good news to local motorists.

He is extending a cordial invitation to his friends to visit him in his new location, promising them the same prompt and friendly service that has made him one of the leading service station men in the country.

GARDEN CHATS

By Edward Bialas

Dear Readers of Chilton County News:

Here are a few suggestions for your garden at this time of the year, as to what can be done to improve your garden for this time of year, and getting your garden ready for next spring, to have masses of blooms, of different species from the varieties of seed or bulbs that you care to plan this Fall, that are most suited for this section of the country.

So plan and get your favorable spot worked into planting shape, that you can plant your bulbs as soon as you receive them into these selected spots.

Chrysanthemums should be fed heavily now and staked; water the roses now to urge them on to their brilliant autumn flowers in time to be in their glory before frost, if your plants show mildew which sometimes appears due to crowded conditions and too much water on the foilage, use powder sulphur or Bordeaux mixture. Pansy seed should be sown now. Planting of Iris may continue so plan to reset and separate for next Spring. Blooms, all varieties are included. but do not fail to add a few of the Siberian and Japanese varieties into your collection.

Iris like sun and perfect drainage with plenty of feed and water but do not add lime for top dressing, as it does not like lime.

There is a dwarf variety Iris for rock gardens. It's only suited for such as it only grows 6 to 8 inches tall and the blooms are larger than its height, so plan to add them to your rock garden.

Prepare your beds for your peonies that you are planning to plant, several weeks in advance, by digging a depth to twenty inches, so that your beds will be well settled before planting in September or October. Planting in freshly prepared beds usually results in the plants settling to a point where they are too far below the surface. In the South the crowns should not be more than half an inch under the surface. Not all varieties of peonies do well in this section of the country, but the following varieties do well here: Mons, Jules Elie, a very good pink; Felix Crousse, a good Red; Festiva Maxima an early double type white; Edulis Superba, extra early Old Rose Pink.

The Creole lily is fast taking place of the Madonna lily in the South, so it is not too early to order a few of them, also do not forget to add a few tulips, daffodils and narcissus, and jonquils, hyacinths and crocus for spring blooms.

Zinnias can be planted at this time of season but they must be forced to get them in bloom if you are planning to get blooms before Jack Frost.

Start to prune your dahlias very severely for specimen blooms for this Fall, as it takes 55 to 60 days for the new shoots to develop into giant blooms.

Plan to exhibit your flowers at your County Fair this Fall as flowers are coming to the front and always will be first and last regardless of where they are exhibited.

If any suggestion regarding flowers or plants, shrubs, are wanted just write your troubles to the writer care your local paper, and he will write you or cal lon you in person and try to remedy your troubles.

If you are planning to add shrubbery to your home, better plan as to what you want to add, get a picture set in your mind and work towards that project.

PART OF A DAY'S HAUL

BALDWIN COUNTY FISHING RODEO

Part of an afternoon's catch at the Baldwin County Rodeo. Fourteen different kinds of game fish are represented in the lineup.

Plans Going Forward For Baldwin Rodeo

—o—

Tarpon, Ling, King Mackerel and other game fish are striking now in Perido Bay and in the Gulf off-shore along Gulf State Park on the Alabama Coast, Baldwin County Rodeo officials reported today.

A "Fiesta" is planned as additional entertainment for the event which has arranged for a screened shelter of ample size to further insure the comfort of those attending but not fishing, and music will be furnished for their enjoyment.

F. E. Nells, Rodeo President, said that ladies will get their definite share of the eleven hundred dollars worth of prizes given away this year, as more ladies classes have been established, and the ladies will also compete for the general prizes.

A "fish-hunting" seaplane will again guide the contestants as it cruises over the Gulf, signalling the location of schools of fish and dropping buoys to mark their location, announced Mr. Nellis.

Safe boats with experienced pilots are being secured for the Rodeo from Alabama, Florida and Mississippi waters along the Gulf Coast, so that all entrants may be supplied with suitable water-craft, according to the chairman of the boat committee.

UNCLE STEELEY JONES

—o—

On June 30, the death angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Reedie Jones and took away our father and grandfather. He was sick only two weeks. Grandfather would have been 93 years old had he lived just a few days longer.

He leaves to mourn his going three sons and three daughters; 27 grandchildren.

Funeral services were held from the Chestnut Creek Baptist Church with Rev. Hughes conducting with J. Mell Martin & Sons in charge of burial.

Mineral Springs

We wish to announce through this paper that our revival begins here next Saturday night, August 13. Everybody has a cordial invitation to attend. Rev. Wiley Davis, our pastor and Rev. Brasher, will do the preaching.

—o—

We had Sunday School here Sunday. The crowd was small but we hope there will be more present next Sunday.

—o—

There is no reason for our not having a good Sunday School here. Let us encourage the old folks as well as the young, to come and help out in Sunday School. We're sure if the parents would carry our children to Sunday School on Sundays we would receive a blessing and have a better Sunday School. Let's try it and see.

—o—

Miss Birtie Lou Gore underwent an operation at the Woodlawn Hospital last Wednesday morning and is doing very well at this time. We hope for her a speedy recovery.

—o—

Don't forget our revival begins Saturday night. Come and be with us.

NOTICE TO NON-RESIDENT

The State of Alabama, Chilton County.
Circuit Court, in Equity. July 31, 1939.
No. 1637.

Velt Burnette, Complainant, vs. Mattie Burnette, Defendant.

In this cause it is made to appear to the Register by the affidavit of Velt Burnette that the Defendant is a non-resident, and that his place of residence and post-office address is unknown, and that such address cannot be ascertained after reasonable effort; and, further, that, in the belief of said affiant, the Defendant is of the age of twenty-one years:

It is, therefore, ordered by the Register that publication be made in the Chilton County News, a newspaper published in the County of Chilton, once a week for four consecutive weeks, requiring her, the said Mattie Burnette, to plead, answer, or demur to the bill of complaint in this cause by the 4th day of September, 1939, or, in thirty days thereafter, a decree pro confesso may be taken against her.

Done at office in Clanton, Alabama, this 31st day of July, 1939.

SALLY JOHNSON ROBERTS,
42-4 Register.

NOTICE OF LOCAL BILL

Notice is hereby given that at the adjourned session of the Legislature of Alabama, which will re-convene on Tuesday, July 18, 1939, there will be introduced the following bill for the relief of J. C. Pattillo, Circuit Clerk of Chilton County, Alabama, for passage and approval.

J. C. PATTILLO,
Clerk.

Said bill will be as follows:

For the relief of J. C. Patillo, Clerk of the Circuit Court of Chilton County, Alabama, and to relieve said Clerk from any and all liability for and on account of fees or compensation received by him under the provisions of General Acts of Alabama, 1931, page 668, for issuing subpoenas before the Grand Jury of Chilton County in cases where no indictments were found, said fees or compensation being in the amount of $81.10.

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF ALABAMA:

Section 1: Whereas, under the provisions of General Acts of Alabama, 1931, page 668, subpoenas were issued for necessary witnesses to be and appear before the Grand Jury of Chilton County, and Whereas, said Act did provide for the payment to the Clerk the same fees as for issuing other subpoenas and Whereas, said Clerk did collect the same fees, being 25c for issuing each of said subpoenas out of the Fine & Forfeiture Fund of Chilton County, the total amount of said fees collected being $81.10, and Whereas, the Attorney General of Alabama, has held in his official opinion that said fees could not legally be paid out of the Fine & Forfeiture Fund of the County, and Whereas, the State Examiner of Accounts has charged the said J. C. Pattillo, Clerk of the Circuit Court with said sum of $81.10. And Whereas, the said J. C. Pattillo, Clerk has performed the duties and services as provided in said general laws, Acts 1931, page 668, THEREFORE,

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISI LATURE OF ALABAMA:

Sertion 2: That J. C. Pattillo, Clerk of the Circuit Court of Chilton County, Alabama, be and he is hereby relieved from any and all liability for and on account of said fees received by said J. C. Pattillo, Clerk, out of the Fine & Forfeiture Fund of the county, in performance of his duties in issuing subpoenas for necessary witnesses before the Grand Jury, as provided by General Act of Alabama, 1931, page 668.

Section 3: That all laws and parts of laws in conflict with the provisions of this Act be and the same are hereby repealed. 40-4

CHILD OF EVIL

SYNOPSIS

Beautiful, young Kay Forrest has been employed by Christine Maynard, photographer, to pose for a series of pictures, the background of which will be exquisite Cathedral Gardens, famous Southern resort. Unknown to them, one Jeff Eutler, mean, unscrupulous "swamp angel," has had a friend to spy on the two women. Kay, of necessity, is scantily clad while posing for the camera studies. Kay frequently stays with Mrs Ruth Hamilton, her son Barney, of whom Kay is very fond, and her daughter Margaret. Mrs. Hamilton, a remarkable woman, conceived the idea of the Gardens following the death of her husband.

"Do you realize, young lady," said Barney to Kay, "that you are now enjoying the distinction of riding through nice, smelly, pine woods with a person who has been invited—politely, mind you, but firmly—to depart from more good schools than any other young man of similar age and lack of discretion?"

"And you're boasting about it!"

"Why not? I'm All-American scholastic resigner. Prep schools. Colleges."

"But, Barney . . . why? I know you're dumb, but surely—"

"Don't ask questions that have no answers. Solution to this problem eludes me. Always has and always will. I suppose I'm just naturally kind-hearted and lazy. I might have learned Latin and Greek, but somehow I never found a polo pony who could understand a word of either of those languages. Therefore, it all seemed useless. I made straight A's on things which I did like and used to argue violently and valiantly that since there were enough courses which I enjoyed, I shouldn't be afflicted with those which bored me. And that was the constant debate between myself and many faculties. They always managed to win, and thus I—Barney Hamilton—became the world's champion matriculator."

"A very charming young man with a definitely lopsided education."

"But cheerful and smiling . . . and always at your service, my darling." He chuckled. "And so, here I am. Mother had two ideas coming down here: first there was the thought that she could make a commercial go of these Gardens—"

"—Which she has certainly done. Beverly has been standing on its ear ever since they opened."

"And secondly," he continued, "though she never was so crude as to put it into these words, she saw me—in New York—becoming a society bum. A chap raised in luxury and accustomed to something he could no longer afford. She had a lovely vision of the town of her girlhood . . . of plain, honest people who would—by precept and example—instill into me a consuming ambition to get down to earth."

"And it hasn't worked?"

"Maybe. I don't know. I like it . . . but how much of that is Beauregard County and how much a very pretty girl named Kay Forrest, deponent sayeth not. The point is, I'm here. So what? I can't paddle those sea-going bateaus as well as the average ten-year-old Negro or sleepy swamp angel. As a gardener I am two hundred per cent lousy—with a capital Z. All I know about flowers is that they grow in corsages. And I haven't observed that Beverly is filled with positions of importance which are seeking me out. To be frank and honest—which is a very terrible thing to be—I cannot see where Mother has gotten anywhere except that Cathedral Gardens are destined to be a financial, as well as an artistic, success."

"And you're not ashamed?"

"Of what?"

"Yourself."

"Why? I haven't a bad habit. Not a major vice, anyway. I never kick. I enjoy what the moment offers. I like good weather and pretty flowers and some of the folks in Beverly and all of the ones who live in Chicora. I enjoy hunting quail and deer, and I love fishing. The horseback-riding around here is pretty good . . . and I very definitely have fallen in love."

"Another pleasure of the moment?"

He smiled down at her. "If you were younger, I'd spank you for that." Then, after a pause, "It might be fun anyway."

Kay said, "You're utterly lazy and worthless, Barney Hamilton. But I'm fond of you, just the same."

He grinned. "And I'm not to be lectured any more today?"

"Not a time."

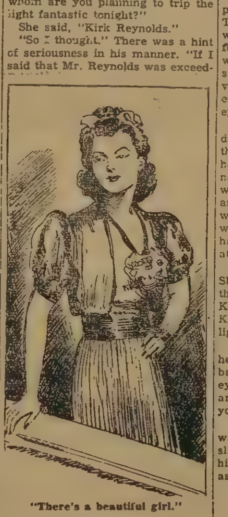
"Well then," he announced sternly, "You are."

"How come?"

"Reasons." He gestured. "With whom are you planning to trip the light fantastic tonight?"

She said, "Kirk Reynolds."

"So I thought." There was a hint of seriousness in his manner. "If I said that Mr. Reynolds was exceedingly bad medicine for a young gal, would you think I was jealous?"



"There's a beautiful girl."

"Perhaps."

"And maybe you'd be right. But, Sugarfoots — this lad is poison. Plumb naughty, I might say."

"Because he gambles?"

"Nix. Because of lots of things. You can't tie him down to specific offenses. He's just naturally a bad citizen . . . and so you choose him as your dancing partner."

"He invited me."

"So what? You could have gone with me if you were just naturally set on edifying the tourists at the White Star Hotel."

"You didn't ask me." She hesitated for a moment. "Listen, Barney—I don't care three hoots about Kirk Reynolds. But he is a Beverly boy, and I looked up to him when I was a kid. Also, I think he's picturesque."

Barney said, "You win. But watch your step, honey. Kirk's been places and seen things. The town's going to talk about your going to the hotel dance with him."

"The town talks anyway. I'm used to it."

"Check. So have a good time and tomorrow afternoon when I come for you, you can tell me all about it."

The nightly dances at the White Star Hotel had been inaugurated for the purpose of relieving the nocturnal boredom of Cathedral Garden tourists. They had startled Beverly at first, and continued to startle the little town, even though—as social functions—they left much to be desired. Visitors declared that the dances were good fun, or cute, or just simply amusing.

The music was furnished by a local organization which styled itself Bud Carter's Jazz Hounds. It was heavy on traps and trumpet, and somewhat short on melody; but the shirt-sleeved members played with an enthusiasm which more than atoned for an obvious lack of genius.

The dancers were recruited from hotel guests, visitors who were scattered about town in the numerous private homes which had placarded their front lawns with signs announcing that tourists would be accommodated . . . with always a tiny handful of natives, plus an occasional couple from the aristocratic town of Chicora, six miles away.

Tonight Kay Forrest put her wrap in the tiny room on the mezzanine which was marked Ladies. She left that room, walked out on the balcony and gazed down upon the vivid scene below. The music of the Jazz Hounds rose to smite her, and a lady tourist, dancing indifferently, looked up and saw the girl on the balcony and said, "There's a beautiful girl."

As a matter of cold fact, the compliment was not entirely deserved. True, there were things about Kay which were lovely—and which you forgot. There were other things which you remembered—as for instance the immediate impression of vital youth, of a great capacity for enjoyment as shown by dancing eyes and a wide, generous mouth.

You could not fail to notice the deep brown tones of her hair and the way it was brushed back from her high, white forehead, and the natural wave, and the little curls which clung to the back of her neck and caressed the two tiny ears. You would notice that her hazel eyes were set wide apart and that they had a delightful habit of crinkling at the corners when she smiled.

She was not blase, not critical. She asked no more of the moment than the moment offered. She met Kirk Reynolds on the stairway and Kirk's customarily impassive face lighted. He said, "You look good."

He walked back downstairs with her, through the lobby, past the battery of approving masculine eyes, and into the ball-room. His arms went about her responsive young body and they danced.

Kirk smiled down at the girl. His was not a bright smile. It was a slight expansion of thin lips. But his voice was gentle enough. He asked, "Having a good time?"

"Wonderful."

"You're easily pleased."

"I can't help it. I'm enjoying myself."

He said, "You're a queer kid."

"Because I like this so much?"

"Yes. And because you had the nerve to come with me."

Her eyes laughed into his. "You're pretty nice, Kirk Reynolds."

"Maybe. But this town don't think so."

Kirk did not exaggerate. He was held in low esteem in Beverly, save by a certain masculine group which made its headquarters at Red Williams' Bon Ton Pool Room. Careful mothers shielded their daughters from contact with Kirk—much to the disgust of several such daughters; fathers warned young sons that Kirk was a disgrace to the town and to his worthy parents—now happily deceased. And as for Mr. Reynolds himself, that young gentleman went his way unconcernedly, caring not one whit for the opinion of his fellow-townsmen.

He was of medium height and slender. His cheeks were pallid; his eyes arctic. He was sparing of speech and gesture. Born in Beverly, reared in Beverly—Kirk Reynolds was known to every citizen of the town and most of those who lived in rural parts of the county. As a youngster he had shown a superb indifference to such education as Beverly afforded. Other lads had looked up to him as reckless and daring because of the flagrant manner with which he played hookey. He was the despair of his parents; accepting such chastisement as they inflicted upon him without whimper, protest or effect.

[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] bargain at the convention [illegible] [illegible] delegates, "to remove discrimination against the South."

Only [illegible] week, an effort in the Alabama Senate to [illegible] that body [illegible] Bankhead failed to get an [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] Senator [illegible] Dixon [illegible] leader, was [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] committee where it [illegible] [illegible] Senator W. W. Malone author [illegible] the committee had agreed [illegible] [illegible] the resolution [illegible] in some form [illegible] [illegible] requested it.

"[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] Will Bankhead [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] candidate," Hill said.

"But when I [illegible] we should know what the delegates stand for, I'm thinking more in terms of the program than of any particular candidate. The important thing right now is the program. And when I say program, I mean the New Deal program. It is the only program brought forth since the Civil War that would remove economic injustices against the South and permit the South to enjoy the development and progress which our natural resources and the ability and character of her people so richly entitles her to."

Asked about the "revolt" in Congress against the president's program, the senator said:

"That"s easily explained. There are forces in this country still trying to take us back to those old days before we had this program."

BILL TO REPEAL ABSENTEE LAW INTRODUCED

SENATOR KARL HARRISON IS CO-AUTHOR OF JOINT MEASURE

By Fred Taylor in Birmingham News

Montgomery, Ala.—Outright repeal of Alabama's absentee ballot law to wipe out reported widespread election abuses was sought today in bills introduced jointly in the House and Senate.

The lower chamber measure was offered by Representatives Rutledge Thomas, Morgan and Handy Ellis, Shelby, with a like bill being introduced in the upper chamber by Senators Karl Harrison, Columbiana, and Finis St. John, Cullman.

"I'm against any kind of absentee ballow law," said Senator Harrison, "because it provides such a broad field for fraud that a whole county electorate can be virtually disfranchsed by the spending of a sufficent amount of money in a close race. The people of my district are very much against the present absentee law.

"At the same time I realize that to repeal the law will work a slight hardship on a few persons, who, by reason of their employment, naver have a chance to vote other than by absentee ballot."

Simultaneously with introduction of these bills, Senator Verdo W. Elmore Gordo, chairman of the recess judiciary committee, which prepared and introduced in both houses what Elmore termed an "air tight absentee voting" bill, expressed fear that the measures calling for outrght repeal of the persent law would result only in the present system being retained.

The judiciary committee's bills, which would do away with mail ballots altogether, are pending before the House and Senate and would permit absentee voting only by the marking of ballots in the presence of register in chancery prior to an election. In event a register in chancery (Circuit Court officer) were disqualified then provision is made for the county board of registrars to name someone to serve in his place.

The Elmore bill repeals the present law and substitutes the above provisions. The Gordo senator contends that when the mail ballot features of the present law are eliminated that virtually all possibity for fraud is done away with.

"I think it the very best possibe absentee voting law that could be drafted," said Senator Elmore. "If we're going to have an absentee law at all, I don't believe we can improve on the bill recommended by our committee."

HEALTH OFFICER URGES PARENTS TO CORRECT DEFECTS

With the opening of Chilton County Schools scheduled for September 4, and October 3, Dr. S. D. Sturkie, Chilton County Health Officer, urged parents of school children to take steps now to provide each child "with a clean bill of health" before entering school. A visit to the family physician and to the family dentist for a preliminary checkup and for the correction of any physical defects found was described as "absolutely indispensable" in the preparation of the child for school Attention give now to such defects as diseased tonsils, decayed teeth, defective vision and hearing, malnutrition (underweight) will pay a liberal dividend in improved health and better work at school during the coming school year for each child, the Health Officer pointed out.

"The intelligent parent," he said, "will be willing to sacrifice in order that Johnny may have his tonsils removed or that Mary may be fitted with the glasses which she so badly needs. To such a parent a visit to the dentist to see about those rotten baby teeth will seem not a luxury but a real necessity."

In planning for the entrance to school thought by parents should be given also to the protection of the child against communicable disease. Each child regardless of age, advises Dr Sturkie, should be given the smallpox vaccination which is quite harmless, beginners should be protected also against diphtheria with a single injection of diphtheria toxoid. These immunizations should be given before the child enters school. Both may be obtained free of charge at the office of the Health Department in Clanton or the branch offices in Verbena or Maplesville.

Parents were also advised by the Health Officer of the necessity for providing a nutritious school lunch as a safeguard for the health of the child. "We parents too often forget," he stated, "that the school lunch must furnish a third of the child's nourishment for the day. As far as possible, then, the lunch should be well balanced and include the essential elements of a good meal. Milk and fruit should never be omitted. Sandwiches with a meat and chopped vegetable filling are excellent. Such meat substitutes as eggs, cheese, kidney bean salad usually find favor with children. Where one hot dish has been served daily, it has been found that school attendance and morale has been improved. The best inducement to the improvement of school lunches is a school lunch room; we hope to see at least one or two started this year in the schools of Chilton County."

The primary purpose of the National Cotton Council is to regain lost markets for cotton the world over, and to find new markets. The increasing of consumption of this product is being and will be in the future, stressed by this growing organization. With the organization of the handlers of cotton—those who are interested in the growing and marketing—is the one way to place King Cotton on the throne which is rightfully his.

and carrying advertisements from local firms, will be ready within the next few days. Mr. Martin asked the News to express his appreciation for the splendid cooperation he had received from the business men in this undertaking.

Citizens wishing to have displays are asked to contact those in charge, and make preparations for their part in the Fair. The Association is composed of the following: Dr. V. J. Gragg, President; J. Mell Martin, Secretary; L. E. Diefenderfer, J. Hollis Jackson, J.L. Hollis, H. R. Oden and Dr. W. L. Parrish. Dr. Parirsh will again this year have charge of the livestock exhibits and J. Hollis Jackson, Vocational Agriculture teacher at the Chilton County High School, will have charge of the poultry exhibits as of last year. Those in charge of the other departments will be announced later.

KILLINGSWORTH REUNION

The Killingsworth annual reunion was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Blankenship on the second Sunday in July, which was attended by a large crowd of relatives and friends and was greatly enjoyed by all.

A delicious dinner was served in the grove after which speaking and singing was enjoyed.

The next reunion will be the second Sunday in July, 1940, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jess Killingsworth at Calera, Alabama.

REGULATIONS

Jones announced that there would be a split season this year for North Alabama and South Alabama, with U. S. Highway 80 being the dividing line. The open season in North Alabama will be October 1 through January 1, and for South Alabama, October 15 through January 15.

Open season on ducks, doves and other migratory birds under the jurisdiction of the federal government, are expected to be announced soon.

The new state hunting regulations provide that federal firearms regulations apply to all hunting in Alabama. In other words, hunters taking any game bird or animal in Alabama this year must use a plugged shotgun not larger than 10 guage and which will not hold more than three shells at one loading.

Bag limits and open season on deer remain the same, November 20 to December 31, with the expection that several additional counties were closed to deer hunting this year. The counties in which deer hunting is closed this year. The counties in which deer hunting is closed this year are as follows; Butler, Jefferson, Walker, Tuscaloosa, Morgan, Winston, Lawrence, Franklin, Cullman, Talladega, Calhoun, Clay, Cleburne, Bibb, Chilton, Perry and that part of Dallas County north of Highway 80.

The wild turkey season was also unchanged. The split season, November 20 through December 31 and March 15 through April 15 will be in effect again this year. The quail season, November 20 through February 20, also remains the same.

A closed season on the otter was decreed. The beaver and muskrat, two other valuable fur-bearers, were already on the closed season list.

All size and creel limits on game fish remain unchanged for the next twelve months. The only new regulation concerning fish applies to the mullet. Hereafter, it will be illegal to possess, sell or offer for sale, mullet under 10 inches ong. Another regulation passed several months ago, providing that catfish taken for commercal purposes must be 15 inches long, remains in effect.

Complete game and fish regulations and laws may be secured free of charge by writing the Editor of Publication, Conservation Department, Montgomery, Alabama.

inda Damp—
As our share of the Gulf coast storm e Chiltonians had to don raincoats nd overshoes as defense against what ed call a September gale here in ugust. However, we cannot forget that ly last week we were silently praying r relief from Ole Sol, who seemed be trying to outdo himself.

e Rodeo And Economy—
And we were sorry to learn that the uall that arose down Foley way drove e participants in the Fishing rodeo a little early. From what we can arn, however, a nice catch was made, d the Legislators returned to Goat ill considerably refreshed after their cation. Remember the days when ewspapers over the State deplored the ct that Legislators voted themselves y during the Christmas holidays. ems to be alright for the Dixon boys vote themselves a fishing trip with y, however. Is it that a man is more serving of pay while fishing than hen observing Christmas?

esting This Week—
We remain silent this week on the niversity Highway question, and re- r you to "Mark Remarks," on the itorial page of this edition, who also ices our sentiments to perfection.

elieve It Or Not—
Another oddity, ranking second ly to the Union-Banner's Republi- n-Can't-Miss-Prosperity story, is the se of Carl Foss, likable young soda ker down at Alred Drug Co. In case u lose your car tag, or just natural- want Carl to repeat the numerals ereon, he'll be glad to do so. He's walking record of tag numbers. If u live in Clanton, own a car, your mber is recorded in his mind. Now don't mean to have Carl repeating e number of every automobile in n, but ask him the number of any o you like that is seen on the eets of Clanton occasionally, and he'll you—Believe It Or Not. We heard t Carl could do this, so we treks n and pops the question about our n bus. He told us and we said "right." en we went to see if he was. He was. rl knew the number of the tag—we d forgotten it.

esn't The Banner Know?—
The Union-Banner is shocked (August 3rd issue) to learn that several of State officials recently received pay es. Doesn't the Banner know that Dixon has changed the definition economy. It means more for the shots, and less for the little shots present. And they try to tell us t's fitting and proper.

ving—
Many have been the Clanton young ple who have received the benefit he knowledge Mrs. Barney Roberts of music. We can well remember k when we attended the old Clan- Grammar School during which . Roberts taught piano lessons, and on up through the years, Clanton been made a more cheerful place which to live through her teach- . Many of her students have travel- ar in the musical world, and now we n that she is leaving for Gadsden make her home. Clanton loses one its most esteemed and charming men.

Mize's Dog—
ill Mize, up at the Pan-Am Service tion, believes in adequate protec- , if the size of his constant com- ion, a large Great Dane spotted dog, be any indication. Bill tells us he d the log from puppyhood, and we t say he did a gool job of it. That's oubtedly the largest dog we's ever . Well mannered, too.

y'll Probably Be Bigger—
w that the Governor had advocated sing the truck load limit on Ala- a Highways, we'll probably get Highway Director surmises that y pounds to a wheel is the way ould be regulated. A weight limit he wheel is about the most brazen hod of hoodwinking the people of bama that we have ever heard of. idea that the wheel has anything to with a load other than support it, othing short of hookum. A load is ad. The more wheels the greater destruction; the larger the truck, greater the hazard it becomes to motoring public. If we are going to trucks to become greater mon- sities, then cattle have a right to the highways. One is just as bad e other. No doubt raising the load will allow more hauling, mean- more business to the big long dis- e haulers, but what about the roads he safety of the motoring public. must be a stopping point some- e. Tear them up and build them seems to be the State's attitude—and prey upon the counties to float interest-bearing bonds to help do it.

Lions Change Meeting Date

Henceforth the Clanton Lions Club, which has been meeting on the second and fourth Friday nights, will meet the first and third Friday nights in the future.

The meeting place and time will remain as before. In order not to miss a business meeting, Friday (tomorrow) evening at 7:30, they will again meet at the regular meeting place.

All members are requested to be present for this meeting if possible. Important business will be discussed.

ANNOUNCEMENT FROM CLANTON BERRY GROWERS ASS'N

All those interested in buying peach trees in a cooperative way will meet at the warehouse next Saturday, August 19th, at 2:00 P.M., at which time we will show the prices on trees, that have been offered our association on large quantity orders. These trees will be inspected by our State Department of Agriculture before buying.—R. M. Roper, President Clanton Berry Growers Association.

J.D. Armstrong Suffers Paralytic Stroke

John D. Armstrong, well known Clanton rural mail carrier, suffered a stroke of paralysis at his home in Clanton Monday night of this week. The stroke affected the entire left side of his body, it was learned.

Mr. Armstrong returned from his route Monday and made the statement to Mrs. Armstrong that he had been suffering from dizzy spells. He stated that he had had considerable car trouble during the day, which had worried him quite a bit.

After he retired for the night Mrs. Armstrong stated that he arose about ten o'clock and went to the bath room evidently to smoke, but not returning, for some time she went to see what was wrong and found him in a delirious condition.

At the time of this writing his condition is serious, according to physicians attending. He is at his home here.

W. Z. HODGES BRINGS IN FIRST BOLL OF COTTON OF '39 CROP

Mr. W. Z. Hodges brought an open boll of cotton to the News office on August 9. This is the first boll brought to the News office. Mr. Hodges stated that it was plucked from his farm near Clanton on that date. It was a well-formed specimen.

OFFICERS CAPTURE STILL ON ISLAND IN COOSA RIVER

An "old timer" as Deputy Sheriff Ed Littlejohn put it, was nabbed with a still on an island in the Coosa River near Mims Camp one day last week. This old timer has been manufacturing illicit beverages for the past fifteen years or more, Mr. Littlejohn stated, and only recent caught with the goods.

Two persons were placed under arrest in connection with the still and eight barrels of beer were confiscated.

Close on the heels of this raid the Sheriff and his men destroyed a one-hundred gallon copper outfit across the river near Rock Fall Branch. Eight barrels of beer and eight gallons of whiskey were taken into custody, but no arrests were made in connection with operation of the still.

In all nearly one thousand gallons of beer was confiscated in the two raids, and eight gallons of whiskey.

MISS HELEN NIX HEADS NEW UNIVERSITY ORGANIZATION

Early this week the picture of Miss Helen Nix, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. H. M. Nix of Maplesville, and a student at the University of Alabama, appearel in one of the daily newspapers of the State, along with Miss Edith Edmondson, another student. These two young ladies are officials in Triangle, newly organized group at the University to aid in orientation of first year students.

Miss Nix is also president of the Women's Student Government Association. She is one of the most popular and brilliant students at the University and her record is one of which Chilton County may well be proud.

CULVER FAMILY HELD REUNION AT LOG CABIN BEACH LAST SAT.

Members of the Culver family, relatives and friends held a reunion at Log Cabin Beach on Saturday last. 109 registered during the day. A bountiful dinner was served.

The body was called to order immediately after dinner and it was voted to make this an annual affair. A committee was chosen to work up a program for the next gathering. Arthur Tippett from Chilton County and Effie Culver from Coosa were elected to get up the program.

COUNTY FAIR TO FEATURE BIG ATTRACTIONS

MANY NEW ACTS TO BE SEEN ON MIDWAY THIS YEAR; INTEREST GROWING

J. Mell Martin, secretary of the Chilton County Fair Association, stated this week that the fair catalogues are nearing completion, in which is listed rules and regulations and the various prizes to be awardtd exhibitors. These attractive catalogues are expected to be off the press some time this week, and will be mailed out immediately, Mr. Martin stated.

In the meaintime "Bigger and Better" is the theme of this year's fair. Never before has there been a brighter outlook for a Chilton County Fair, officials state. Arrangements are being made daily by persons and organizations for exhibits. With donations of money by the County and City governments, bigger and more prizes are to be awarded

Thos. P. Littlejohn of Troy is again this year in charge of the midway, and in a letter to Fair officials he states that never before has he gathered together a more glamorous array of shows, rides, etc., for the enjoyment of those attending. Mr. Littlejohn's letter states in part:

". . . I am enclosing you a list of the free acts for our Fair this year, September 26-30. I don't think any County Fair in the South ever had such an array of talent as we have booked, and would be a creditable offering for a State Fair, and the citizenry of Chilton County can look forward to seeing a 'Bigger and Better' Fair, and that will be our theme—'Bigger and Better' . . ."

Heading the various departments of the exhibits this year are the following, whom those wishing to have displays are asked to contact for information regarding the exhibits, etc:

Howard Oden—Agriculture.

Dr. W. L. Parrish, and C. L. Breedlove—Livestock.

J. Hollis Jackson—Poultry.

Mrs. Annie Thacker will be in charge of the women's department, including canning displays, handicraft, etc.

J. L. Hollis will be in charge of tickets.

L. E. Diefenderfer will be in charge of policing of the fair grounds for the purpose of maintaining order.

Two Local Men Charged With Burglary

Dewey (Catfish' Eubanks, local barber, and Argnus Robinson, who resides near Clanton, were arrested by Chilton County officers August 8 and charged with Burglary and grand larceny in connection with the robbing of a grocery store in Marbury on August 7.

Sheriff W. G. Culp stated that the pair are alleged to have entered the Johnson Store in Marbury on the night of August 7, and taken several dollars worth of merchandise. The two men were lodged in the Chilton County jail here, but later transferred to the Autauga County jail at Prattville.

BILLINGSLEY REVIVAL ANNOUNCED FOR SUNDAY

The revival meeting will begin at the Billingsley Methodist Church on Sunday night, August 20th. The visiting Evangelist for this revival will be Rev. Fritz Folsom, Pastor of the First Methodist Church at Camp Verde, Arizona. Brother Folsom is a native of Alabama and his father was one time pastor of the Billingsley Church. Young Folsom isn't only a gifted preacher but a talented singer. Brother Folsom has had experience in preaching the Gospel in many of the Southern States and we are indeed fortunate in having him with us in this revival, announced the Pastor of the Church, Rev. Charles H. Hildreth Services will be held at 11:00 o'clock in the morning and at 7:45 o'clock in the evening. Special services will be held for the Young people. The public is cordially invited to attend this revival.

MISS MARY COURTNEY JONES TO TOUR NORTHERN STATES

Miss Mary Courtney Jones left last week for the Worlds Fair in New York City. She will be joined by friends en-route and will visit her uncle, John Courtney and her aunt, Mrs. C. McGinnis in Washington, D. C. From Washington they will visit points in the New England States.

While in Atlantic City they will attend opera at the Garden Pier Theatre.

Miss Irene Jones has returned from a delightful visit to friends and relatives in Birmingham and Bessemer.

Miss Marguerite Johnston of Verbena is spending this week as the guest of Mrs. Bonnie Hand

After Three Years ---

Manager J. T. King of the V. J. Elmore 5c, 10c and $1 Store here says that his firm is fifteen cents to the good as a result of a young woman paying for merchandise she took from the counters of the store three years ago.

Mr. King stated that last Saturday a young woman approached him in the store and proferred fifteen cents, and stated that she wanted to pay for an article valued at that sum which she took in 1936. A lady accompanying the young woman made the statement: "That's what religion will do for you."

G.W. BAVAR BECOMES MANAGER MAPLESVILLE YELLOW FRONT

M. T. Holliman. former manager of that store, was transferred to Camden, Alabama, where he will continue in the services of the Yellow Front Stores. Mr. Holliman and Miss Ruth Mize of Maplesville will be married Sunday, August 20.

G. W. Bavar was transferred to Maplesville Monday of this week and will assume the duties of manager of the Yellow Front Store there, it was announced by D. L. Blackketer, manager of the Clanton Yellow Front, this week.

Sunday School Rally At Thorsby Baptist

According to Prof. J. N. Griffin, Association superintendent, there will be a Sunday School rally at the Thorsby Baptist Church next Sunday, August 20. A cordial invitation is extended to everyone to attend. The meeting will begin at 2:30 P.M. The program for the rally is as follows:

Song by the Congregation.
Devotional—Rev. W. P. Lowery.
Roll call.
Reports.
Announcements.
Business.
Recognition of teachers.
Recognition of special achievements.
Quartet by Mrs. R. R. Flanklin, Mrs. Addie Porter, Mary Sue Porter and Rubye Raybon.
Inspirational address by Rev. Oscar Davis.

This meeting is the climax of the teacher-training campaign this week and should be of interest to every Baptist in the Association, Mr. Griffin pointed out.

REV. AND MRS. DAVIS REPORT MOST ENJOYABLE VACATION

Rev. and Mrs. Oscar Davis returned Wednesday, August 9, from a vacation to several points of interest, including the Worlds Fair in New York City. The Davises attended the Baptist World Alliance meeting in Atlanta prior to their journey north.

Leaving Clanton July 22 they attended the Alliance meeting, which has been termed the greatest protestant meeting ever held, and represented by 60 nations of the world. This was thoroughly interesting and was enjoyed by Rev. and Mrs. Davis immensely. Leaving Atlanta they motored up through North Carolina, where they visited Ridgecrest in the Blue Ridge Mountains. From there they went through Virginia, along the Skyline Drive, one of, if not the most beautiful drives in the United States.

They visited in Washington for some time, and from there they went to New York City. A visit to the World's Fair was included in their rounds of this great City. They returned to Clanton on Wednesday, tired from the drive but after a most interesting and restful vacation.

Members of Troop 57, Clanton Boy Scouts, headed by Scoutmaster Joe Earl Gowan, returned last week from a three-day camp at Camp Arrowhead at the mouth of Byrd Creek on the Coosa River.

HELENE CURTIS BEAUTY SHOP IS MAKING IMPROVEMENTS

Mrs. Essie Mims of the Helene Curtis Beauty Shop is this week adding another room to her shop and a new parmanent wave machine. This also will give her another place to shampoo, so with the Fall rush coming on patrons may still get quick service.

Mrs. Mims also states that with this new machine she received enough free supply for 100 permanent waves, so while these supplies last she will give the permanents for half price. Turn to her advertisement and look over these prices and then go get your permanent wave before school begins.

Mrs. Earl Melton, who is well known in Clanton and surrounding communities, has accepted a place with this establishment, it was also announced. Mrs. Melton has had considerable experience in beauty culture, having operated a shop in Thomaston for some time and was at one time connected with another beauty shop in Clanton. She and her husband will occupy the apartment connecting the Shoppe.

Thanksgiving Day This Year November 23 Says Roosevelt

President Roosevelt's announcement that he would break a 75-year-old tradition by moving hanksgiving Day up a week—to help out business—stirred both protest and praise today from governors, turkey growers and football coaches.

The president said at Campobello Islanl he had decided the traditional last Thursday in November was too late for Thanksgiving, so he was advancing the date from November 30 to November 23 this year.

Many different dates have been used since the Pilgrim fathers celebrated the first Thanksgiving in 1621, the president pointed out. He said business people had complained the "last Thursday" date established by President Lincoln usually threw the holiday too close to Christmas and cut down on Christmas shopping.

This sounds sily, President Roosevelt said, but added he was willing to go along with merchants on the matter.

Up To Governors

A State Department official at Washington said Tuesday the president's proclamation on Thanksgiving Day had effect only in the District of Columbia and the territories belonging to the United States.

In the past, governors of states generally have issued their own proclamations, he said, conforming their individual states to the proclamation of the president.

Of itself, he added, the president's proclamation does not have effect in the various states.

The State Department is the certifying and issuing agency for presidential proclamations.

DR. H. M. NIX TO BE OUT OF OFFICE FOR SEVERAL DAYS

Dr. H. M. Nix of Maplesville announced this week that he will be out of his office from August 25-September 8. Dr. Nix stated that he and his two daughters, Margaret and Helen, and son, H. M., Jr., plan to visit the World's Fair in New York City during this time.

NOTICE TO ALL SUBSCRIBERS ON THE NEW R. E. A. LINE

All homes wired for the Rural Electrification Association will have to comply with the rigid specifications of REA and must be approved by inspector.

You are warned against trading with anyone not licensed and qualified for this wiring. Not only is improper wiring dangerous but absolutely will not be accepted for service. Your home should be already wired when line is completed.

Cotton Council Head To Speak To Kiwanians

C. L. (Cliff) Walton, State Director of the National Cotton Council, will be the guest speaker at the meeting of the Clanton Kiwanis Club tonight at 7:30 at the Thomason Hotel.

As a permanent unit of this important organization has just recently organized in this County, Mr. Walton's talk will be of more than usual interest. He is expected to discuss the aims and purpose of the National Cotton Council, one of the nation's fastest growing organizations pledged to assist in aiding in the cotton situation through organization of the five groups that handle cotton.

Ginners and warehousemen of the county have been extended an invitation to attend the meeting and hear Mr. Walton speak.

Mr. Walton is a past president of the Alabama Press Association, having owned two of the State's leading weeklies in the past. While serving as president of this group, he rendered a valuable service to the press of Alabama. His appointment as head of the National Cotton Council in Alabama came following his retirement from the newspaper business.

The Publicity Committee of the Club has charge of the program for the evening and Mr. Walton will be presented by Bonnie Hand, chairman.

THIRTEEN PERSONS JAILED BY SHERIFF AND FORCE

Public drunkenness, 2; Petit larceny, 2; Manufacturing whiskey, 1; Burglary and grand larceny, 2; V.P.L., 2; Burglary, 1; Reckless driving, 1; Possession of still, 2.

Mrs. Jack Hayes who has been visiting in Andalusia, Fort Walton, Clanton and Birmingham, has returned to Chicago.

RAINS CAUSE AUTO WRECKS NEAR HERE

SLIPPERY ROADS CONTRIBUTING CAUSE TO ACCIDENTS DURING PAST WEEK

The heavy rains for the past several days have contributed in no small degree to several automobile accidents, caused by slippery pavement and obstructed vision.

Patrolmen stationed in Clanton have been kept busy investigating accidents, some serious and some minor in consequences. Two person were carried to hospitals suffering from cuts and bruises of a serious nature.

Last Friday afternoon a packard auto occupied by three men, George W. Barber, Birmingham, J. W. Dunlap and V. J. Troutman of Gadsden, and a negro chauffeur, landed in a ditch just over the hill from the Ellis Tourist Camp as it attempted to pass another auto The car skidded into the ditch and rammed an embankment seriously injuring Dunlap and causing minor injuries to the other occupants. The party was en-route to Florida. They were given treatment at the Central Alabama Hospital.

A Clanton youth, Alex Arnold, was arrested on a charge of reckless driving as a result of an accident recently near South Clanton. Highway Patrolmen stated that Arnold's car collided with a model T Ford occupied by Paul Pressley, Virgie Pressley, Merle Pressley, Leola Cleckler, Ralph Pressley and Hilda Mae Pressley. The car, which was driven by Paul Pressley, overturned, injuring the occupants. Merle Pressley received serious head injuries, Patrolmen stated.

A truck driven by C. F. Whittichen attempted to pass an auto driven by E. L. Smiley, negro, below Clanton last Friday, but resulted in an accident in which one person was slightly injured. The negro's car collided with the truck when it (the truck) became crossways of the road, after passing the car.

Adophus Moats, operator of the meat market at the local A&P Grocery here, stated that he was the victim of a hit-run driver last Sunday night near South Clanton, who sideswiped his car after forcing him off the pavement. Moats was uninjured, but his car was considerably damaged.

Several other minor accidents occurred over the week end, none of serious consequences. Patrolmen are issuing warning to motorists to drive carefully during the rainy weather, which renders the pavement slick and makes a car hard to control once it starts skidding.

HILYER FAMILY REUNION IS SET FOR NEXT SUNDAY

The News has been requested to announce that the Hilyer Family Reunion will be held at the home of S. Hilyer, four miles northeast of Clanton, next Sunday, August 20.

All relatives and close friends of the family are being extended an invitation to attend. Entertainment will be furnished during the day with dinner being served at the noon hour.

TWO IN MAYOR'S COURT

Two persons appeared in Mayor C. Fenn Jones' City Court last Monday morning to answer to charges of violating the City's laws.

One of these offenders was charged with public drunkenness. He was fined $8.25 including costs. The other, answering to a charge of parking an automobile in front of the fire engine storage house at the City Hall, was fined one dollar.

RANGERS QUARTETTE IN CONCERT HERE TONIGHT, AUG. 17

The famous radio singers, known as the Rangers, will appear in concert at the courthouse in Clanton tonight, August 17, at 8:00 o'clock. This bunch of harmonizers, who have recently signed up with the Columbia Broadcasting system to sing over station WBT, Charlotte, N.C., have been singing over Station WAPI every morning at 6:15 o'clock for the past several weeks. They have made a few conventions in this section of Alabama.

The Rangers are not just an ordinary male quartet, but they possess real talent and musical attainment. It is not often that Clanton has the opportunity of hearing a concert put on by a male quartet of such distinction as this one possesses.

Their appearance at the courthouse is sponsored by the Chilton County Singing Convention, the proceeds from which will go toward keeping the piano at the courthouse in playing condition. All are invited to attend this concert.

The personnel consists of Vernon Hyles, Arnold Hyles, Denver Crumpler and Walter Leverett.

Miss Margaret Tyus of Miami, Fla., and Mr. Vernon Farnum of Birmingham are spending this week with Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Tyus.

"If we nominate conservative candidates, or lip-service candidates, on a straddle bug platform, I personally, for my own self respect and because of my long service to, and belief in, liberal democracy, will find it impossible to have any active part in such an unfortunate suicide of the old Democratic party."—President Roosevelt.

MARK REMARKS

If a University-Capitol highway is ever built it will pass through both Maplesville and Clanton. There is a perfectly good paved highway (Alabama 22) between Clanton, Maplesville and Selma, connecting Bee-Line (U.S. 31) with Dixie Overland (U.S. 80), built and paid for so far as Chilton County is concerned. And if the fast talkers and slow-doers ever get a highway built to the Chilton County line on the Western border, Chilton County officials may be depended upon to do whatever sound business judgment will justify. Maplesville and Clanton now have THREE perfectly good paved highways leading to the State Capitol, with the exception of a short space at Mountain Creek in which the State Highway Department refuses to cooperate. Just about everybody in Chilton County wants to see the University-Capitol highway built—but not at the expense of our farm-to-market roads.

* * * *

Chilton County people want every mile of paved highway they can get—anywhere in the County. And what's more, they are going to get every mile they possibly can pay for without having to give up two dollars of their gasoline money in order to get one dollar's worth of paving. Some other Alabama counties could well profit by following the safe and sound business methods of Chilton's Probate Judge and County Commissioners, who refuse to be "taken in" by every political "trap-setter" who comes along dangling a glittering proposition—presumably in the interest of the people—but in reality who is trying to catch county gasoline warrants for foreign money-lenders.

Alabama's Pitt Tyson Maner, retiring president of the Young Democrats, in his speech before that body at the recent Pittsburg convention, did credit to himself and his State in handling the Hatch bill as he did, and all the yappings of the anti-New Dealers cannot change the fact that the Young Democrats of America are squarely back of President Roosevelt and his program of opportunity and equal rights for all Americans.

Just to show you how ignorant some men who get elected to the Legislature are: One of 'em introduced a bill the other day to reduce automobile tags to a straight $3 per tag. He was so ignorant he didn't know the difference between the $3, and what we now pay for tags is what the bondholders get for holding the bonds.

INCREASED EARNING of "BIG BUSINESS" DISPROVES BUSINESS RECESSION CLAIM

Constantly during the 1939 session of Congress Republican orators warned that business "simply cannot improve until sane Republican measures for recovery are substituted for the New Deal." Mr. Hoover averred that under the political auspices he advocates "there will be a shortage of labor within 12 months." On August 3, the day after the Republicans had barred the President's lending measure from the floor of the House, the orthodox G O P New York Herald Tribune screamed in a headline: "Stocks Climb as New Deal Gets Setback" and declared that "now we can expect business improvement."

The following reports of net earnings of the outstanding American corporations, including every key industry, cover the first six months of 1939, compared with the first half of 1938. They show conclusively that business had been steadily improving throughout the year and all are taken from the Herald Tribune and the Wall Street Journal.

(NOTE.—Most utilities report on yearly basis)

As of August 3 the Associated Press reported that second quarter net earning of the first 275 large corporations to report totaled 88 per cent greater than in the June quarter of 1938. This offsets the assertion of Chairman John D. M. Hamilton of the Republican National Committee that "for the past year business has been in an easily explainable tailspin."

MORAL ECHOES

D. W. Haskew

A nice old gentleman of seventy-five summers consulted his family physician on the state of his health. After looking him over the doctor said: "My friend, you are in correct order. Never saw a finer patient, but pray tell me how you have managed to keep yourself in such a healthy condition?" The old man replied: "Doctor, it is this way. When I was married some fifty years ago, I entered an agreement with my wife to the effect that whenever I lost my temper and began to blow off steam, she was to remain silent. When she, on the other hand, lost her temper and started popping off steam I was to leave the house. Well, Doctor, for nigh unto fifty years I have enjoyed a fine outdoor life, which no doubt accounts for my good health." If every man who faces blowing steam at home should take to the tall timbers, the woods would be full of men.

We read in an Army book the other day of the methods of officers in the Navy as they dealt with men who had quarreled. In order to make them friends again they were put to washing windows, one on the outside and the other on the inside. As they looked at each other through the window, they would laugh at the monkey on the other side of the glass and their differences would be forgotten. If you have a quarrel with anyone, invite that one to wash a window with you. Take either place—inside or outside—and if you two will wash and watch each other and the glass can last, you will come to the end of the job as good friends again. Any man who watches a monkey on the other side of a glass must laugh, or he has no sense of humor.

One day I saw a blue-eyed girl as she stood by an elderly lady. This little child held one hand against the face of the lady, while the other hand rested against her silver hair. I knew that thoughts were playing through the mind of the child and I was not surprised when she asked: "Are you a young lady, or are you an old lady? I was wondering the same thing myself. There she sat before us with a face all aglow with smiles and sunshine: She laughted and rejoiced with the enthusiasm of a girl of sixteen, and yet her hair was as white as the driven snow. I wondered how she would answer the blue-eyed lassie. She told the truth and nothing but the truth when she replied, as she placed her hand upon the head of the little girl: "My dear, I have been young a very long time." Why should we ever grow old in this world? Why not be young a very long time?

Out in Oklahoma City a man dared to ask a policeman why he was driving without lights. The policeman became indignant and arrested the man for insulting an officer. He was tried and a six dollar fine assessed against him. The next day a wag put this statement in the local paper: "Anyone who has ever sassed a policeman, wanted to sass a policeman, or who has ever been sassed by a policeman, please carry a penny to J. Haskell Betherum at the jail, room number one." In two hours Mr. Bertherum paid to the court six hundred pennies, and one of the pennies was donated by the judge who sat on the bench during the trial. If everybody who has sassed a preacher, wanted to sass a preacher, or been sassed by a preacher, would send this scribe a pennny, he could publish a book of his "Moral Echoes." It would only take one thousand dollars.

The radio is wonderful. Recently Lowell Thomas was informed of a fourteen-year-old boy at Point Pleasant, N. J., who was suffering from a kidney trouble. The doctors prescribed watermelon juice as the only remedy. It being December there were no watermelons ripening in New Jersey. Lowel Thomas was notified and in his characteristic way he made the call and in exactly four minutes the hospital was a thousand miles away. Then some His life was saved. By the use of the radio many a patient has been treated in mid-ocean and that by a doctor who was a thousand mlies away. Then some folks are so foolish as to say that there is nothing to paryer. God has a much better machine than the radio by which He keeps in touch with His people and with the world.

There's a friend for you, little brother,
Above the bright blue sky.
A friend who never changes, whose love will never die.
And more than that He's told you, too,
The things He would have you to do.
Otto we know he was so gentle and so mild,
He would have listened to a child.
Son, we to love and trust Jesus,
However sad our fear, since He, Himself, can wipe away our tears.
Now, dear brother, you have done your best,
That's all a child can do.
You left behind your home here and done what you must do.

Breath Bad, Logy?
You May Need This
Just as the lighthouse flashes a friendly warning to sailors, so Nature sends out headaches, bad breath, biliousness, which often warn of constipation.
Too many misunderstand or neglect those symptoms and thereby may invite a host of constipation's other discomforts: sour stomach, belching, loss of appetite or energy.
Be wise. Take spicy, all vegetable BLACK-DRAUGHT tonight by simple directions and clear your bowels gently, promptly, thoroughly. This intestinal tonic-laxative helps give tone to lazy bowels.
Its long life and popularity testify to BLACK-DRAUGHT'S merit.

TRUTH about ADVERTISING

By CHARLES B. ROTH

WHAT IS ADVERTISING GENIUS?

IN THE early days of advertising there were men who posed in the role of genius. They shrouded advertising with mystery. To portray their part they let their hair grow, wore flowing bow ties, affected a far-away look and muttered mysterious formulae.

Some persons still believe that the ability to advertise a business successfully is like the ability to write poetry—an inborn gift.

It isn't at all. The closer advertising comes to answering some of the needs in the lives of common, ordinary people the more nearly it comes to success.

The only genius needed in advertising is the everyday genius of telling the truth in a simple and an understandable way.

Charles Roth

A few months ago some of the leaders in the advertising profession were boasting about the results of their work. One of the advertising publications published what they said about themselves.

Writers of some of the largest corporations in the country took part in the discussion. But a little druggist in Florida, spending just a few dollars in his loca newspaper, was able to top all th results of these high-salaried adver tising men.

All he did was to know the de sires of his customers, and sit dow and tell them what he had in a sin ple, an understandable, a convin ing, conversational way. Here is hi advertisement:

This is a perfect advertisement. I offers a wanted service. It offe value. It inspires confidence. It something people in his neighbo hood wanted to read.

It didn't take a genius to write i but the whole genius of advertisin is behind it.

Every day advertisers are pu lishing similar announcements in th newspapers. These announcemen are as much in what is called t public interest as the results of s entific research or study—becau they bring the public something wants to make life better or mo interesting or, in the case of Pa View Drug, a little more enjoyab

Heart Disease Is Health Topic Of The Week

Heart disease as a major public health roblem was discussed at length in this eek's bulletin released by the County Iealth Department. Pointing to Chilon's experience during 1938, the Couny Health Officer said that heart diease is the leading cause of death for Alabama and the nation at large. One ut of every four deaths occurring in he County last year resulted from heart isease.

Many of these often untimely deaths an be prevented, according to the County Health Officer, if an effort is nade to protect the heart. "Most of s," he declared, "are born with nornal hearts. To keep this most vital organ in good shape, parents must begin arly in life by protecting the children rom such diseases as diphtheria, scaret fevers, the toxins of which are dangerous to heart muscle. A child sick vith either of these diseases should receive treatment with antitoxin or serum nd not be allowed to get up too early. Care must be taken to ward off rheunatic fever which is the greatest cause f 'leaking heart valves.' A focus of nfection such as tonsils or teeth may ive rise to the disease seen most frequently in childhood.

"During adult life, one should avoid nervous strain or being overweight. These factors predispose to high blood ressure and associated heart disease. The individual infected with syphillis hould take an adequate amount of reatment (at least 70 shots), bearing n mind the alarming frequency of heart isease appearing as a late complicaion of syphillis.

"Once heart disease has been diagosed it is not necessary for its victim o consider himself doomed to an early emise. By carefully regulating the mount of daily activity under the supervision of a physician, it is possible or a cardiac patient to live out his ormal span. A maximum amount of est in bed and avoidance of being overeight are highly essential for the vicim of heart disease."

These statistics are obtained from the records of the County Health Department and are published for the purpose of promoting better registration of births and deaths. Filing of a certificate for births and deaths with local registrars is made compulsory by the State Vital Statistics law. Responsibility for filing a birth certificate within five days after the birth rests on the physician or midwife in attendance; undertakers or persons in charge of burials are required by law to obtain a burial permit before the body is interred. Such permits are obtainable only on the presentation of a completed death certificate to the registrar in the beat in which the death occurred.

Anyone having knowledge of births or deaths occurring during July and not included in the above list should report this matter to the County Health Office immediately.

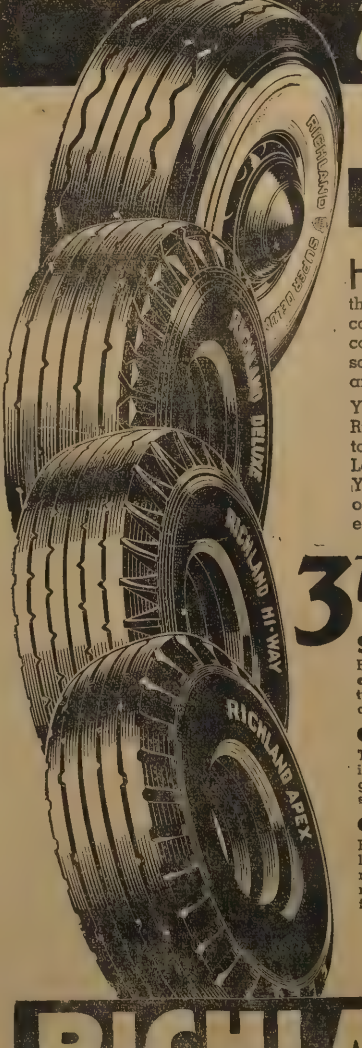
We Now Sell the SAFEST TIRES You can buy

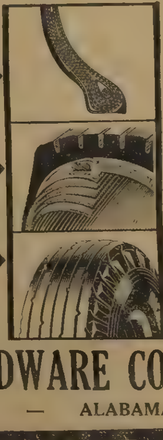


~ the New Advanced RICHLANDS

HERE'S the safest, longest-wearing modern streamlined tires it is possible to build. We are pleased to offer these outstanding Richland Tires to the car owners of this community. We're selling them because their advanced construction features place them far in the lead in the safety performance so necessary for today's higher speeds and harder wear.

You cannot afford to ride on anything but the safest tires. Richlands not only give you greater safety but more miles, too, and that's important from the standpoint of economy. Let us show you the new, cooler running, silent Richlands. You'll like their good looks and their longer, safer miles of extra service. There's a stronger, safer Richland for every motoring need.

3 Ways Safer



SAFETY-LOCK SIDEWALL
For extra strength and safety the lower sidewall of every Richland is reinforced by carrying the two inside cord fabric plies around bead cable and up into lower wall.

● SUPER-FLEX CORD
The Richland carcass is super strong because its dense-twisted Super-Flex Cord concentrates great strength in small bulk. This makes sturdier, cooler running, safer tires.

● DENSITE TREAD
Richland's Densite Tread is tougher, denser, longer-wearing. Its scientific 6-Bar design puts more rubber on the road to deliver greater mileage and protection against sidewise and forward skids.

Budget of $100 Rejuvenates Home

READING, Pa. (Special)—The decorative results that can be accomplished by imagination coupled with ingenuity and a wise investment in plate glass mirrors were interestingiy illustrated here by a homemaker with but $100 to spend on three rooms.

Mrs. Roy Shugart, of Wyomissing, a suburb of Reading, was the homemaker who glorified three rooms on a decorating budget of $100, accumulated by careful housekeeping economy and giving up a few recreational pleasures. But the results in a rejuvenated home more than justified the sacrifices to save the necessary funds.

Fireplace Redeemed

Faced with the problem of a badly proportioned fireplace, and eager to achieve something out of the ordinary in the way of decoration, Mrs. Shugart decided on mirrors as offering the most in charm at the least expense. She first attacked the fireplace.

The mantel was high and narrow. Therefore, if it was to become an asset instead of a liability the proportions must be changed. An eight inch board across the top was removed and a panel of mirrored plate glass reaching to the ceiling was installed at a cost of $42.07. Mrs. Shugart felt justified in spending this amount on the mantel since the mirror gave gaiety and charm to the entire room and made the formerly ugly fireplace a focal point of interest by reflecting other furniture groupings and two excellently proportioned windows at the opposite end of the room.

Next a little-used and antiquated piano was removed and in its place were put a gateleg table previously in another part of the room, a lounge chair and a maple arm chair brought down from a bedroom. In order to catch the vistas from two more windows opposite this grouping, Mrs. Shugart spent $9.85 on another mirror.

Slip Covers for $12

The divan and two upholstered chairs were treated to new slip covers at a cost of $12.00 for materials, the work being done at home. Other expenditures in the living room were for pictures, ornaments, lampshades, a lamp, rug, a radiator cover and an end table, amounting to $14.48.

Furnished in simple maple, which had been a wedding gift, the dining room's particular problem was a pair of necessary but unattractive chests. Again a mirror seemed indicated and for $5.85 the amateur decorator secured a good mirror in a simple frame. Her husband removed the green paint from the old chest and rubbed it down with oil. Above the chest directly opposite, Mrs. Shugart hung a wall shelf bought for $1.25 and stained at home, using bright bits of pottery and vases of field flowers to brighten it. Thus two drab corners were delightfully redeemed at a cost of $7.55.

Mirror in Nursery

The nursery received a "face lifting," with a total investment of $13.68. Paint and gay but inexpensive chintz revivified the nondescript furniture and the man of the house contributed a home-made but attractive bookcase for $1.90. A mirror removed from a chest and framed for $1.75 served to emphasize a charming view of a park and to remind an untidy little daughter of her appearance. Chintz and bedspread materials costs $4.97 and a chest and a child's chair required another $5.06.

The decoration budget added up to $99.63 but, says the woman who accomplished this miracle of room transformation, the results in uplifting the spirits of the family are out of all proportion to the amount she spent.

Chinook Is Name Applied To Various Winds in West

"Chinook" is the popular name of various winds common in the northwestern part of the United States and in British Columbia. It was originally applied by the early traders at Astoria, Ore., to a warm southwest wind blowing from the direction of the Chinook Indian villages on the Columbia river. Under the influence of a chinook wind the snow is melted quickly and the weather becomes balmy and springlike. The name is also applied specifically to a warm wind in winter on the lee side of a mountain. Such chinook winds are common in the Sierras and the Rockies. They are produced as follows: Humid air rising on the windward side of a high mountain cools slowly with ascent, owing to the heat freed by condensation of the water vapor into clouds and rain. This same air descending on the lee side is relatively dry and warms rapidly by compression with descent. Hence, level for level, the air is warmer on the lee than on the windward side. The difference in temperature between the opposite valleys of a high mountain may be 10 to 20 degrees, or even more. In Europe, especially in the Alps, "foehn" is the name applied to winds of this type. Glarus, Switzerland, was almost completely destroyed in 1861 by fire fanned by a foehn rushing down from the mountains. A law now requires every fire in the town to be extinguished as soon as a foehn begins.

Christian Endeavor News

Lucile McCain led the Christian Endeavor in a discussion program entitled "A Christian Tries To Be Completely Honest," last Sunday evening. This topic was very interestingly discussed. After the program a short business session was held. Lucile McCain was elected as delegate to the Association meeting at Seman, Alabama. Plans were discussed for next Sunday evening's church service which the C. E. has charge of. It was decided to hold a community song service to which all persons are invited. This service begins at 7:30 P.M. August 20. It was also decided that the C. E. Executive meeting would be held Monday night at the Parsonage.

Benson-Hayes

Miss Estelle Benson and Mr. Harrison Hayes were quietly married last Tuesday, August 8th, in Clanton at the home of Mrs. Sally Johnson Roberts. The bride was very lovely in a Navy Blue Traveling suit with eggshell accessories. Miss Mildred Gore was their only attendant. Immediately after the ceremony the bride and groom left for Pensacola, Florida and other points of interest.

Mrs. Hayes is widely known in Thorsby and Chilton County, and is operator of the Thorsby Beauty Shop. Their many friends here wish for them much happiness.

They are now at home with the bride's mother, Mrs. W. M. Benson, of Thorsby.

ARE YOU RUNNING AROUND IN CIRCLES AND TALKING TO YOURSELF?

If you think that this rain has you down, and kinda daffy in the head, look what it has done to us. Here we go as 'twould be said 400 years ago---BUT, just as true today as then.

To cut or not to cut---that is the question:---
Whether 'tis nobler in the mind
To let mail order printers who care not for quality,
Have the cheaper trade at cut-throat prices,
Or to take up arms against their competition
And by opposing cut for cut, to end it.
To cut, and by cutting, to put the other cutters
Out of business---'tis a consummation
Devoutly to be wished; to cut, to slash!
Perchance ourselves to get it in the neck---
Aye, there's the rub; for when we start to meet
A price below the cost of honest workmanship
'Tis like as not we're headed for oblivion.
To cut and slash is not to end the worries
And the many ills the trade is heir to:
Nay, nay, Pauline, it but portends
More dire calamities and much unseemly strife.
Who fain would cut his price in two
Must grunt and sweat under the weary task
Of trying to make a measly four bits
Do work a simoleon heretofore hath done.
Failing which, must bear the whips and scorns
Of disappointed patrons; the neat man's contumely.
The delays of ill kept up machinery;
The insolence of creditors too long stood off;
And spurns and kicks and claims galore
That lack of value in his work doth cause.
So Chilton County News still gets the price
Their work is worth, and give full value
In service for the price they get.
And thus their native hue of resolution
Makes them rather fight those ills they have Than fly to others that they know are worse.

FALL FASHIONS ON THE —HORIZON—

—o—

Black with bright sets the gaily sophisticated pace of the early fall fashions.

And in the matter of fabrics, silk jersey and rayon crepe are in a photo-finish race for first place.

It is to be one of the most interesting fashion seasons in years. That much is definitely established. Whether the bustle is merely an early flash in the pan or whether it is here to stay for the fall and winter is still problematical.

Many of the designers whose word is fashion law say that it is. But a good many others whose influence on fashion trends is equally as important predict that it will be all gone with the autumn leaves. However that may be, they all seem agreed that the prevailing silhouette will be small waists, high busts and with skirt fullness thrust to the back.

Hats go to all sorts of lengths as regards crowns but the majority seem content with small brims. Coq feather in clamatic colors cascade from wee litle tricorners that already beckon alluringly from Fifth Avenue windows. The snood is still prominently in the picture and turbans of chiffon velvet in jewel colors will give the necessary "ummph" to early fall outfits.

LETTERS to the EDITOR

FROM A. A. JACKSON

Dear Editor:

Just a few words from the little town of Lomax. Everybody seems to be on the sunny side of life. Maybe that we have had so much singing, preaching and shouting in our community town in the past few weeks is the cause of these bright conditions. Let the good work go on. Maybe our darkest nights will get so bright that we can walk the narrow path at all times. We notice that Clanton, the farmers' city, has passed an ordinance forbidding the people from preaching or discussing religion on the streets of Clanton since it has become a city. I guess the ordinance includes singing and shouting, I don't know. It is suggested that they add to this ordinance "no discussions of politics, farming or love affars" and call this city "The Farmers' Quaker City of Chilton County."

In conclusion let me invite you to come to Lomax. Keep on the sunny side of life, and we will let you preach, discuss religion, sing and shout all you want to. So long.—An Old Observer, A. A. Jackson.

EDITOR'S NOTE:—We believe that if Mr. Jackson will investigate the ordinances recently passed by the City, he will find that preaching and the discussion of religion is not forbidden in Clanton, but merely prohibited when it tends to cause the obstruction of traffic on the streets or congestion on the sidewalks. The ordinance also includes singing and shouting only when it disturbs the business life of the City.

FROM J. C. EDWARDS

Editor, Chilton County News:

Between one A.M. and three A.M. August 6, 1939, two men in this community had over fifty dollars taken from their pants pockets while both men were in bed and others in bed in each house.

We read in Prov. 6:30, "Do not despise a thief if he steal to satisfy his soul when he is hungry." A thief can buy something to eat with money and also beer and whiskey. Many people today are careless and unconcerned about their future welfare. In Eph. 4:28 it says, "Let him that stole steal no more" I sure wish to shake hands with the thief that went in my house and thank him for leaving my specks and knife in the pockets of my old pants. Though I feel satisfied that he is not a lover of righteousness, I sure cannot thank him for disobeying the second Commandment.

A lover of righteousness is one unselfishly devoted to that which is right and just. He is not turned away from the path of rectitude, jutice and right because of fleshly reliationship either by affinty or by consanguinity. Regardless of who the creature is, if one sees another in right and doing the right thing toward fellow creatures, then that lover of righteousness stands by the side of the one who is right. He does not attempt to justify another' action because that other is related to him or because he may feel under obligation to one who seeks his approval.

The Lord Jesus is the great lover of righteousness among all creatures. All who please God must be put to the test and if receiving God's approval, they must show they are lovers of righteousness.—A Retired Farmer, J.C. Edwards.

The Youth in Business

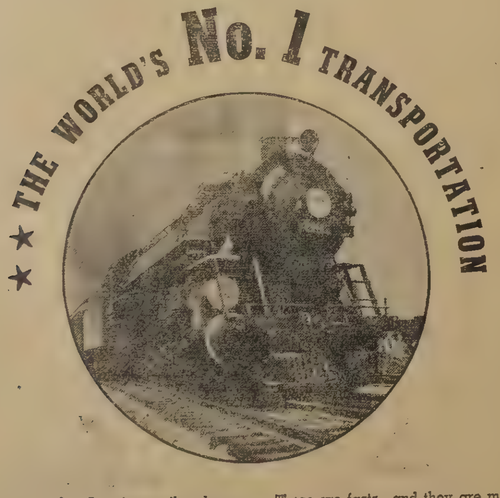
By C. E. Johnston

Dean, School of Business International Correspondence Schools

ROUTINE workers whether in the office or the factory perform functions necessary to the community, but their numbers are so great that their remuneration is small and their social importance seldom recognized. The young man who wishes to be something more than a routine worker must train himself for higher positions. There are many subjects dealing with business which it may be advantageous for him to study. One of the most important of these is Accountancy.

No one course of training gives so wide a knowledge of the major activities of business as Accountancy. In addition, Accountancy affords a training in rigid thinking and in habits of accuracy and thoroughness that are essential to business success.

Moreover, the operation of every department, however small, is based on facts and figures which are supplied by the accounting department. Management judges the success of every department head by facts and figures supplied by accounting. The person who expects sometime to be in charge of other people must become accountancy minded and the best way he can do this is through training in accounting.



DO YOU KNOW that American railroads can haul, speedily and efficiently, more than a billion tons of freight a year—more than 30 tons for every family in the United States?

—that railroads handle more than eight times the tonnage handled by any other common carrier serving the nation?

—the railroads do this job at an average charge of about 1 cent for hauling a ton a mile? And that this is far less than the average charge made by any other carrier providing general transportation service?

—the average capacity of a freight car is more than 48 tons—and that many locomotives are able to pull, in a single train, a load of 5,000 tons?

These are facts—and they are made possible because the railroads have the real super-highways of today and tomorrow, built and maintained by private enterprise.

Railroads have kept pace with the times by constantly improving and modernizing their track and equipment. The billions of dollars invested in improved facilities have been railroad dollars—not tax dollars. For railroads build their own tracks, maintain them, and pay taxes on them.

When you look at the record of the railroads and the job they are doing, you can see why government transportation policy should give all carriers equal treatment and an equal opportunity to earn a living.

NOTICE OF LOCAL BILL

Notice is hereby given that at the present session of the Legislature of Alabama, there will be introduced the following local bill, which shall be substantially as follows:

An Act

For the relief of M. A. Gore, N. S. Johnson, the Estate of John W. Foshee, deceased, W. R. Clements, V. J. Gragg, H. M. Nix, present and former members of Jury Board of Chilton County present and former Judges of Probate and County Commissioners of Chilton County, Alabama, and to relieve said parties from any and all liability for and on account of certain charges set up by the State Examiners of Accounts for alleged compensation or payments made to said members of Jury Board in excess of compensation alleged to be allowed by law.

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF ALABAMA:

Section 1: Whereas, under the provisions of the General Acts of 1931, page 56, M. A. Gore, N. S. Johnson, and John W. Foshee, were appointed members of the Jury Board of Chilton County, Alabama, and Whereas, said Act provided that the compensation of said members of said Board should be paid the sum of $5.00 per day for the time acutally engaged in the discharge of their duties as such members, however, the total compensation of each member for any one year not to exceed $100.00 in counties of less than 25,000 population, according to the last preceding Federal census, and Whereas, Chilton County, according to said last preceding Federal Census, had a population of 24,579, and Whereas, said members were paid compensation in accordance with said general law, and Whereas, Acts of 1933, page 136, reduced the compensation of Members of the Jury Board in counties of less than 25,000 population, to not exceeding $50.00 each year, and whereas said Acts of 1933 were again amended by Acts 1939 at the present session of the Legislature, Senate Bill by Harris No. 55, approved by Governor, March 2, 1939, placing said compensation again at $100.00 per year in Chilton County, and Whereas, W. R. Clements was appoinnted Member of the Jury Board to succeed John W. Foshee, in 1935 and H. M. Nix was appointed member of the Jury Board to succeed N. S. Johnson in 1936 and V. J. Gragg was apponted Member of Jury Board to succeed M. A. Gore in 1937 and Whereas, after the amendment of said General Act of 1931 by said Acts of 1933, through inadvertence or oversight, said Members of the Jury Board continued to draw compensation in excess of said Acts of 1933 and Whereas, the State Examiners of Accounts have charged in their examination of the public accounts of Chilton County that said Members of the Jury Board have drawn the following amounts in excess of the compensation allowed by law as follows: M. A. Gore, $250.00, N. S. Johnson, $150.00, John W. Foshee, $100.00, W. R. Clements, $300.00, V. J. Gragg, $150.00, H. M. Nix, $165.00 and Whereas, the State Examiners of Accounts in their official examination of public accounts of Chilton County have set up said charges against said officials and against the judges of probate and the members of the Commissioners Court in office during the respective time that said jury commissioners are alleged to have drawn said overpayments Therefore,

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF ALABAMA:

Section 2: That M. A. Gore, N. S. Johnson, Estate of John W. Foshee, W. R. Clements, V. J. Gragg and H. M. Nix, Judge of Probate and Members of the Commissioners Court in office during the respective times that said Members of the Jury Board are alleged to have drawn said overpayments as herein stated be and they each are hereby separately and severally relieved from any and all liability for and on account of said compensation received by them or either of them.

Secton 3: That all laws or parts of laws in conflict with the provisions of this Act be and the same are hereby repealed.

GARDEN CHATS

By Edward Bialas

I consider spring planting of perennials, as a rule, lots better, but planting may yet be made of most perennials. The seed beds should be thoroughly prepared and the soil should be loamy. Should the location be sunny, shade the beds by placing strips of laths over the beds, and see that the seedlings get plenty of water.

In October they will be ready to set in place for spring blooms in your garden, as our mild winters in this section with open winter will make them sturdy specimen plants.

How To Have A Beautiful Lawn

Planting new lawns are usually not completely overhauled for years and should therefore be prepared with care. Deep, rich soil free from trash, rocks and other debris to which has been worked in, humus fertilizers (those that decay-organic) like pulverized sheep manure, cotton seed meal, peat moss, leaf mold, also screened ashes, basic slag, pulverized limestone, is preferred. Fork well making smooth, firm seed bed with just enough slope to drain well. Sow dependable seed (free from weed seed) checkerboard fashion, then diagonally for even distribution. Rake the seed lightly into the soil, water lightly, and beat down with tamper or back of the shovel, if no yard roller is available, then soak heavily, continuing about twice weekly until good rain occurs. Next week we will give you a little more about planting old lawns, as the fall of the year is the best time to do general lawn work, weeds are not so troublesome, and cool weather plus lots of moisture which occurs during the winter months induces good heavy root system and growth before hot weather sets in in the spring.

Poinsettia cuttings can be taken off poinsettias during the month of August and rooted, these rooted plants need a rather rich but porous soil and an abundant of water supply. When ordering your tulip bulbs always insist on imported bulbs—never buy domestic bulbs that are grown in this country, as the important bulbs do the best.

Plan on planting a few Oriental poppies, as they are real pretty, and now is the time to plan for your spring flower garden.

Do not fail to spray your rose bushes, as each year more insects and garden pests are visiting your gardens so if they attack your rosebuds, causing the flowers to be malformed, use arsenate of lead or any good prepared spray or dust and that should correct such trouble.

Better start to feeding your pot plants, that they will be in their height and glory for you to exhibit them at your Conty Fair this fall, so plan and look forward to that date—September 26th-30th at the Airport.

SYNOPSIS

Beautiful, young Kay Forrest has been employed by Christine Maynard, photographer, to pose for a series of pictures, the background of which will be exquisite Cathedral Gardens, famous Southern resort. Unknown to them, one Jeff Butler, mean, unscrupulous "swamp angel," has led a friend to spy on the two women. Kay, of necessity, is scantily clad while posing for the camera studies. Kay frequently stays with Mrs. Ruth Hamilton, her son Barney, of whom Kay is very fond, and her daughter Margaret. Mrs. Hamilton, a remarkable woman, conceived the idea of the Gardens following the death of her husband. Kay attends a local dance with Kirk Reynolds, a ne'er-do-well gambler.

At seventeen Kirk Reynolds had disappeared, his farewell being coincidental with the departure of a small, traveling street carnival which had spent six thoroughly unprofitable days in the town. Thereafter Beverly heard little of him. It was understood vaguely that Kirk had remained with the carnival only a short time, and that he then aligned himself with a larger, more prosperous and less scrupulous tent-show. Some one reported meeting him in New York and stated that he seemed to be doing well and had offered hospitality to his former townsman: liquor, feminine companionship, gambling, or what have you.

Then Beverly was shocked to learn that Kirk had returned. In his rooms at the hotel, enterprising persons, tourists or citizens, might roll dice for money. For fairly important money. No, they explained in shocked whispers, it wasn't just a friendly game, but a real gambling layout.

Meetings were held. Protests were uttered by church committees and welfare organizations. Mayor Alex Roberts argued that he did not know officially that gambling was in progress, which resulted in the immediate formation of a Defeat-Roberts-for-Renomination Committee. Sheriff Floyd Griffin denied vehemently that Kirk Reynolds owned and operated a dice-game—but he completed his payments on a new sedan. The owner of the White Star Hotel also protested vigorously that there was nothing happening in that second-floor suite which was illegal, and he denied further that liquor could be bought at the hotel, in defiance of rigid State prohibition laws . . . all of which the good citizens knew to be untrue.

Kirk's dice-dealer remained in seclusion except at night. Kirk himself spent his days riding around in his little car or lounging on the veranda of the hotel which faced Monument Square from the corner of Wilson Street. He vouchsafed no information. And so facts became less factual because of official denial and every night certain tourists more or less enjoyed a few hours at the dice-table, and Beverly raised its hands in holy horror, and the preachers of town and country churches called upon their congregations to condemn this iniquity . . . which they did with commendable but ineffectual fervor. And there the matter dropped, except that it was generally agreed that if Ruth Hamilton hadn't returned to Beverly and caused Cathedral Gardens to be built, Kirk Reynolds and the others engaged in professional vice would not have come to contaminate the community.

Kirk Reynolds was twenty-eight years of age, nine years older than Kay Forrest. She had heard of him, had known him, in the few years of her childhood before he had gone off with the carnival. She remembered him as a handsome young man who had bought candy and ice-cream and pop-corn for her at the carnival so that she almost died of indigestion . . . but she had emerged from the attack with a regard for Kirk which she had never lost. She had introduced herself to him on the occasion of a chance meeting after his return, and he had professed to remember her.

Kirk was attentive and pleasant. Two or three times during the evening, when young men from Chicora with whom she had attended high school asked her to dance—Kirk vanished. She suspected that he had gone upstairs to see how the dice-game was running and there was a guilty thrill in the idea. Kay was young, keen for life: she translated this night and this dance into terms of Newport and Monte Carlo and Palm Beach and Havana. The chicken sandwich on toast which Kirk brought her might have been a gala repast; the tepid orangeade, champagne.

Then Bud Carter and His Jazz Hounds blasted into their final number. Enthusiastic couples gyrated madly, but Kirk danced slowly, cautiously—as always. He continued to enjoy Kay's naive delight, to respond to the brightness of her eyes. She heard the final, blaring measures of the music, and then Kirk's quiet voice. "Tired?"

"No."

"How about a little ride?"

"I'd love it."

"Good." Kirk was never loquacious.

She crossed the veranda with him. Across the street, in the middle of Monument Square, she saw the red-brick bulk of the Beauregard County Court-house. She was vaguely conscious of townsfolk who stared and commented. And then she was in the little coupe beside Kirk and he had swung away from the curb and was circling the Square.

He drove west on Palmetto Avenue to the place where Chicora Avenue angled off to the right. He drove down this tree-lined street, somnolent in midnight moonlight; drove past Kay's home; crossed Ferris Street where Chicora Avenue became the Chicora Turnpike. Then they were in the country, the lights of the town dropping behind them.

To their left was rich farm country: fields of cotton and corn, and on the right crouched Big Moccasin Swamp, dark and sinister. They moved faster and faster and Kay asked no questions. It did not matter that the man beside her was Kirk Reynolds; it only mattered that she was here: that for this one night she had been privileged to discard the soggy mantle of provincialism.

Kirk said, abruptly, "I had a good time."

"You did? Why?"

"Because you enjoyed it."

"Oh! Kirk—it was wonderful. I've always wanted to go to one of those dances . . ."

"They're lousy. But if you don't know it, why that's all right, too."

She said, "You've been mighty nice to me."

"And I got a great kick out of you." He smiled at her, briefly, impersonally. "Where'd you get your nerve from?"

"What nerve?"

"The nerve to go with me . . . and to get the whole town talking about you?"

She explained, "They've always talked about me, and I reckon they always will."

"When I was younger than you are now, I checked out. Couldn't stand the gaff."

"But you came back."

"Good pickings."

Kay wondered why she was not apprehensive. Kirk's reputation was so unsavory. She wondered whether he intended to stop somewhere . . . and then, as though in response to her unasked question . . . he looked down at her. He said, "Don't worry."

"About what?"

"Me. I'm not aiming to park anywhere."

She was silent, and he laughed shortly. "Thought I was, didn't you?"

"Well . . . the boys around here . . ."

"I don't play that way, myself. Not with kids."

She felt absurdly safe. She lost all sense of time and of distance. Her eyes were closed, so that she did not even see the headlights of the car which whirled toward them.

The road they were traveling had been cut through piney woods. It was of broad, smooth concrete and Kirk was driving fast, and on the wrong side. His own head-lamps stabbed into the post-midnight blackness and crossed those of the approaching car.

Kay heard the sudden warning shriek of a horn. She heard a hoarse oath from the young man at her side. She felt his figure lurch against hers and stiffen as he jerked at the wheel.

Then there was a sickening swerve and a breath-taking skid. She opened her eyes to see another car skidding, to find headlights blazing into her face. It was over instantly—yet it seemed to take hours. The approaching car swung off the road in the effort to avoid Kirk. Kirk jerked his to the right . . . and there they were, these two cars, running-board to running-board—the gentleness of their contact a mockery of the tragedy which might have been.

It had been an awful moment, a terrifying moment. Kay experienced some difficulty in breathing. In the glare of their own headlights she recognized Harvey Jackson, a young civil engineer who had lived in Beverly all his life. She saw that his cheeks were pasty. He seemed frightened—and angry. She knew that Kirk was trembling with fury and nervous reaction. She heard his voice, cold as snapping icicles.

"Why the hell don't you look where you're driving?"

Harvey Jackson's face flushed. He said, "It was your fault, Reynolds."

The girl glanced at Kirk, and was frightened. She heard him saying things to the other man: insulting things, profane things. He was bitter and unfair. His words knifed into Harvey Jackson and Kay realized that even so placid a person as the young engineer was losing control of himself. Jackson said, "Lay off that, Kirk. I don't like it."

"I don't give a damn what you like."

Kay put out her hand. "Please, Kirk . . ."

He shook her off. Roughly. Otherwise, he gave no hint that he knew she was there.

"I told you to quit talking like that," said Harvey Jackson.

"And I tell you . . ." Kirk was in the grip of an unreasoning rage. "When you say it was my fault, Jackson, you lie!"

Harvey Jackson climbed out of his car. He said, "I don't take that from any man, Reynolds."

"You'll take it from me."

"Not if you get out of that car."

"I'll get out all right."

OBTAINING SUCCESSFUL STANDS OF DALLIS GRASS

A new method of obtaining successful stands of Dallis grass at a saving of time and labor by eliminating the gathering of seed and planting, is reported by Mr. James H. Wood, Camp Superintendent, of the Soil Conservation Service in the CCC Camp near Clanton, Alabama

This new procedure, according to Mr. Wood, has been tested by Soil Conservation Service workers as part of the program for erosion control, soil building and soil consevation Under actual field conditions, Mr. Wood points out, this method has produced excellent stands of Dallis grass.

The method is simply to mow old stands of Dallis grass after the seed has matured, Mr. Wood advises, and to spread the hay lightly over the pasture area where a stand of Dallis grass is desired.

This procedure, which has been followed by cooperating farmers in several Soil Conservation Service areas, has resulted in better stands of Dallis grass than are usually obtained from clean seed, Mr Wood points out.

LOCAL BASEBALL CLUB TO CLOSE OUT SEASON SOON

The Clanton Baseball team is about to close its schedule for the season. Playing on an average of three games a week and meeting some of the best amateur teams in the state the local boys have compiled a splendid record.

They have won approximately 28 games and have lost only 8. This record is all the more remarkable when one considers that they have met a large number of the better amateur and semi-pro teams from this part of the state.

If the fans wish to see another Sunday game they will best go to the local park next Sunday afternoon. The club is considering disbanding for the season and though they have several games during the week they will not schedule more Sunday games.

Watch for announcements of the game Sunday and for the name of the opposing team. The Buck Creek team was originally scheduled to play here but they will be unable to appear and at the present writing another team has not been contacted.

For what may be their last Sunday games the fans are invited to all come out and make the crowd the largest yet to witness a ball game here this season.

Mr. and Mrs. L. V. Farnum, Mr. Vernon Farnum and Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Shackleford of Birmingham spent last Tuesday as guests of Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Tyus.

SYNOPSIS

Beautiful, young Kay Forrest has been employed by Christine Maynard, photographer, to pose for a series of pictures, the background of which will be exquisite Cathedral Gardens, famous Southern resort. Unknown to them, one Jeff Butler, mean, unscrupulous "swamp angel," has led a friend to spy on the two women. Kay, of necessity, is scantily clad while posing for the camera studies. Kay frequently stays with Mrs. Ruth Hamilton, her son Barney, of whom Kay is very fond, and her daughter Margaret. Mrs. Hamilton, a remarkable woman, conceived the idea of the Gardens following the death of her husband. One night, after a local dance, Kirk Reynolds, a ne'er-do-well gambler of Beverly, a resort town, and Kay go for a ride. Kirk's car collides with that of Harvey Jackson.

Kay's protest was lost in the night. She knew it was all Kirk's fault: the original accident, the bitterness of the unnecessary quarrel, the impending fight.

And it was going to be a fight. Kirk was beyond control. Harvey Jackson was flushed and angry. He stood in the road with fists clenched, waiting. He looked competent—and dangerous. He was larger than Kirk: taller and broader. He said, "I'm warning you, Reynolds—"

Even in that moment Kay knew that Kirk was at fault. She could not blame Harvey Jackson. He had sought to avoid this clash, his patience had been stretched beyond the point of resiliency. Kay was sorry for both men. She knew that this crisis had flared from nerves strained by the shock of imminent disaster. The impending conflict was senseless—and inevitable. She wanted to look away, but she couldn't. The scene fascinated her: the quiet, deserted road; the dreadful accident which had so miraculously been averted; the deadly fury which had metamorphosed Kirk.

And then the awful thing happened. Suddenly. Unbelievably. She had read about such things. She had seen them in pictures. But never—until this moment—had she believed they could be.

Even now when she saw Kirk's hand snap out from under his left armpit; when she heard the sharp, vicious crack of the little automatic; when she saw flame spit into the night . . . even then it was unbelievable. It was only when she saw an expression of startled incredulity appear on the face of Harvey Jackson, that the thing became real—even in the slightest degree.

Never before had she seen a human being die. It was nauseating, the way his body sagged, slowly; then slumped to the ground. She jumped from the car and bent over him, eyes wide with horror and disbelief; brain refusing to credit the evidence of her senses. She was conscious of the horrid thought that Harvey Jackson couldn't be comfortable, lying all sprawled out that way. She reached out to touch the body but strong fingers closed on her arm and an icy voice said, "Let him alone."

She was sobbing when Kirk jerked her back to the car and flung her into the seat. She said, "You're not going to leave him there . . . like that . . .?"

His voice was sharp. It was like no other voice she had ever heard. It said, "Shut up! And get yourself under control."

CHAPTER III

It was difficult for Kay Forrest to realize that she had been witness to a murder, to remember that back yonder at the edge of the road was an empty car and the body of a man. It was even more difficult to make herself believe that the stony-faced person at her side had just taken a human life.

She crouched in the corner of the coupe, shrinking away from this man who had taken human life. She was cold—with a coldness which was not of the April night.

Her nerves were shattered, her eyes clouded with a terror of apprehension. Her thoughts darted off at tangents, but returned always to that sprawling figure by the side of the road back yonder. She found herself thinking, "Harvey is dead . . ." "Kirk will be punished . . ." Then, out of the silence came Kirk's voice. It was detached, impersonal, casual. It frightened her. He said, "Sorry, Kay," and when she tried to answer him, the words would not come.

He said then, "Pull yourself together."

She moistened dry lips. "Oh, Kirk . . ."

"It was rotten. But I couldn't help it. I lost my head."

"Yes . . ."

"It's done." His voice was flat. "There ain't anything we can do to undo it."

She dabbed at dry eyes with a bit of handkerchief.

He asked, "Still scared?"

"Yes."

"Got to get over it. Right now."

He was right. Of course. Then words came from her, words freighted with hysteria. "Oh, Kirk . . . what will they do?"

"A man can only be hanged once."

He said, "Nothing."

"But when they find out . . ."

"They won't. Nobody saw. Except you. And you won't tell."

"I'm afraid . . ."

"Of course you are. I'm afraid, too."

Queer how his calmness was steadying her jagged nerves. She heard him speaking again. "There are certain things you've got to remember. The first one is that we never went near that road tonight. We never saw Jackson."

"But if they ask me . . . ?"

"They won't ask you." His voice was low. Insistent. Beating through her terror with a strange, hypnotic effect. "They'll never think of us in connection with it."

"But if they do . . . ?"

"They won't. Unless you give yourself away." He drove on in silence. Then, "Feeling some better?"

"I—I don't know. I'm sick . . ."

"Sure you are. But there are some things you've got to understand." It was an adult talking to a frightened child. "Try to understand this: right or wrong—Jackson is dead. You are the only person who saw me do it. And you're not going to talk. Understand?"

"No . . ."

"If the truth ever came out, they'd hang me. Harvey Jackson was popular in Beverly. I'm unpopular. I wouldn't have a chance. But remember this: hanging me isn't going to bring him back to life."

He was quiet. Logical. She had a fleeting vision of Kirk on the gallows . . . the same Kirk Reynolds who had danced with her that night, who had been a part of a gay evening.

"They'd hang me," Kirk was saying, "and it wouldn't do Jackson any good."

A simple statement. An unanswerable one. He spoke again, "Can you keep it to yourself?"

"I'll try."

"That's not enough."

"But if they should suspect . . ."

"Get this!" His voice was suddenly sharp. It knifed into her. "And get it straight; you're going to string along with me."

Her hands were clasped in her lap, her figure racked by dry sobs. "Oh, Kirk . . . it was so awful . . ."

"Lay off that. I'm trying to be kind, but you won't let me."

She said, "Will you go away?"

"No. That'd be a dumb play. Then they'd know I did it."

"But if you stay in Beverly . . ."

"I've got to. And you've got to play along with me." His hand fell on her wrist. "You've got to; see?"

His voice frightened her. The kindliness had gone from it. It had become the sort of voice he had used with Harvey Jackson. Cold. Bitter. Inviting no argument.

She said, "I don't understand . . ."

"Murder is murder," he explained flatly. "A man can only be hanged once. Does that tell you anything?"

"No . . ."

"Then listen. You saw something tonight. You know I don't bluff. If you open your mouth to anyone you'll get the same dose Jackson got."

Calmly. Quietly. Just like that. If you say a word to anybody, I'll kill you, too. She was like one hypnotized . . . but the recent tragedy had been too vividly seared on her young brain to admit of doubt. The whole thing was fantastic—just as murder is always fantastic. But it was realistically, personally fantastic.

"I'm scaring you because you need to be scared." His tone was conversational. "I want you to realize just what you're up against."

"But Kirk . . . you couldn't!"

"No?" He laughed mirthlessly. "A man will do a heap of things to save his own hide." The wind murmured in the pines; Kirk's voice cut into her again, "You're just a kid. You're all shot to hell by what you just saw. You're figuring you've got to talk to someone. Right?"

She said nothing; made no gesture. He continued.

"You'd be likely to tell your father. Or this Hamilton guy. I'm warning you . . . don't!"

Still she did not answer.

"Here's why," he went on. "And I don't want to make it any tougher on you than I can help. Only you've got to understand. For your own sake." His hands were tight on the wheel. "It won't be safe for anybody to know what happened tonight. If you tell your old man—or Barney Hamilton—they'll try to do something about it. That won't be healthy for them."

"But they had nothing to do with it."

"They'll be in it the minute you spill a word. And remember what I said before: they can't kill me any deader for killing three men than for killing one."

That damnable logic again. Cold statement of cold fact.

"I'd do it. You saw enough tonight to know I would. So for their sakes . . . you keep 'em out of it." A pause, and then, "And one more thing. Maybe you'll figure that if you squealed I'd be thrown in jail and everybody would be safe. Well, that don't go, either. My dice-dealer, Dan—I've enough on him to hang him twice over. If I wanted to get someone and couldn't—on account of being in jail—he'd do it for me. And be glad of the chance."

Governor Dixon, in advocating in-

OPENING DATES OF CHILTON SCHOOLS GIVEN

CITY SCHOOLS TO OPEN SEPT. 4; CHILTON COUNTY HIGH FACULTY NAMED

According to County Superintendent of Education Rascoe Maddox, all Clanton School will open their doors on September 4, also all County High and Junior Department Schools, and the Lay Dam and Mitchell Schools.

Schools to open September 4 are as follows:

Chilton County High, Isabella High, Jemison High, Maplesville High, Verbena High, Enterprise Jr. Department, Thorsby Jr. Department, Alabama Mills, Clanton Elementary, Clanton Colored, Chilton County Training School (col.), Lay Dam and Mitchell Dam.

Other schools of the County are scheduled to open on October 3.

According to instructions from the County Superintendent's office the local high school will open with practically the same arrangements for housing conditions as were used the last semester of last year. It is hoped that the new building will be far enough along toward completion that the school may be moved into it by January first, 1940.

The principal will be in the office at the Agricultural building from Friday noon, August 25 to Saturday, September 2, for the purpose of assisting any student who wishes to arrange his course of study for this year. It is very

BIDS ON NEW SCHOOL ASKED FOR BY BOARD OF EDUCATION

Advertisement for bids on the new Chilton County High School is being made by the County Board of Education. Plans and specifications have been completed and are now available, according to E. B. VanKeuren, Co., Architects and Engineers of Birmingham, whose services have been employed.

The Board of Education has announced that these bids are being filed and will be opened at the proper time and the contract awarded to the lowest and best bidder. Work will get underway on the new plant as soon as possible, it is understood.

PLENTY OF SOAP AT CLANTON BLDG. SUPPLY

Passing by the Clanton Building Supply Co., one gets the impression that a box of Chipso soap is being hurled toward the street through the window, but that's only a part of Marvin Marcus' clever display of soap in the show-window of this establishment.

About fifty varieties of soap is being displayed, and there's enough soap to wash a lot of dirty articles. This firm is staging a huge sale of soap during the next few days, according to an advertisement in this issue of the News. When a hardware handles soap, then that's catering to the demands of the buying public.

REVIVAL AT BETHSALEM

The revival at Bethsalem Church will begin on Friday night before the third Sunday in August. If we have a revival we must do something that will show we want a revival. I don't believe that the Lord will send one unless we want one.

Earnestly pray that the Lord will send us the greatest revival that we have ever known at Bethsalem.

Each and every one of you who have your name on Bethsalem Church book come to every service and come praying that the Lord's will be done in the heart.

CLANTON METHODIST CHURCH

Church School 9:45 each Sunday morning. L. J. Stewart, general superintendent.

Morning worship service, 11:00. Sermon by the pastor. Topic: "God's Man."

Young Peoples meeting 6:45 P.M. in the basement of the Church.

Evening worship service 7:30 in the sub-auditorium of the Church. Sermon by the Pastor.

The summer has almost gone and most of us have had our vacations. Our Church has felt the slump that comes when the members go away on vacations. Now that this is all over let's with renewed vigor and spiritual vim come to the Church School and Worship services, working with all our hearts, mnds, souls and bodies and next Sunday let's make the attendance at all the services top all former good records.

As shown by the above announcements, our good pastor has returned and will preach at the Worship Services. Let's hear those messages of his.

MT. PLEASANT P.-T. A. TO MEET

The Mt. Pleasant P.-T. A. will meet Friday afternoon at 2:30 at the school. All members are urged to be present.

Fair Catalogs Are Being Mailed Out

The new Chilton County Fair catalogs are off the press and are being mailed out this week, stated J. Mell Martin, secretary of the Fair Association this week.

These attractive catalogs carry a list of the various prizes, rules and regulation of the fair, and advertisements from local firms. More prizes are being awarded this year than in the past, and all indications point to a "Bigger and Better" Fair this year at Gragg Field.

QUARTERLY CONFERENCE OF M. E. CHURCH AT VERBENA

The Third Quarterly Conference of the Verbena Charge will be held at Verbena M. E. Church August 27. The presiding Elder, Dr. H. M. Andrews, will preach at 11 A.M., and dinner will be served at the Church, followed by the business session.

At that time the new pastor will be introduced to his congregation.

All the churches are urged to be represented.

GRAND JURY WILL CONVENE SEPTEMBER 5TH

SEVERAL CASES TO COME BEFORE GROUP WHILE EMPANELED

From the office of Circuit Clerk J.C. Pattillo comes the announcement that the Chilton County Grand Jury will convene for regular session on Tuesday, September 5.

Coming before this Jury will be three murder cases which have occurred within the past few months. Perhaps the most important of these cases is that of Virgil Headley, farmer of the Pleasant Grove community, who is charged with the shotgun killing of Lorenza D. Mims, a neighbor farmer who was living on Headley's farm. Headley is alleged to have shot and killed Mims as he sat in a room of his house on July 7. A hearing before Justice of the Peace J. L. Wilson resulted in his release on $3,000 bond.

Among other cases to come before the twelve men will be that of Coleman Reid, negro. who is alleged to have killed Eddie Jones, another negro man in a fight near Lomax last June 18. Reid, who is rather young, is confined in the Chilton County Jail here.

Another negro killing which occurred some time ago near West End, Clanton, will probably be investigated by the Grand Jury. A negro man was stabbed to death by another negro duran altercation. He escaped and was never apprehended, although efforts to locate him are still being pushed.

Other matters will be considered by the Jury during its empanellment, which will last for several days.

Cotton Problems Discussed By Walton

C. L. Walton, State Director of the National Cotton Council, an organization dedicated to the task of making the whole nation "cotton conscious," spoke interestingly on the subject in which everybody is or should be vitally interested, at the regular weekly meeting of the Clanton Kiwanis Club last Thursday night.

Mr. Walton, who is a past president of the Alabama Press Association, stated that the South was fast losing out in the cotton industry, and might just as well surrender it to foreign countries whom "we taught to grow cotton," unless something is done to increase the consumption of American cotton here and abroad.

"Cotton is the only product grown that does not have a sales agency," he pointed out. "Substitutes for cotton are increasing daily, and yet no advertisements on cotton are found throughout the nation," he continued. It is a fact that although foreign countries have increased production of cotton and are now in competition with America, the people of America are not conscious

SUNDAY SCHOOL MEETING AT COOPER SEPTEMBER THIRD

Our next regular Sunday School meeting will be held at Chestnut Creek Church (Cooper) the first Sunday afternoon in September. beginning at 2:30. Everybody be certain to attend.

Inasmuch as the churches were not able to have their training courses alst week by reason of rain, we want to have them sometime next week or during September. I have books and will try to get you a teacher if you can come to the meeting at Chestnut Creek and make known your wants.—J. D. Griffin, Assistant Supt.

Mayor Urges Cooperation In Sewer Work

Mayor C. Fenn Jones released the following for publication this week:

Notices of a sanitary sewer assessment are being mailed to property owners who own property affected by this improvement.. The government of the United States is paying all labor cost, and also paying the supervisors and a portion of the pipe cost.

Just the amount of cost to be borne by the property owners we do not know at this time, but I wish to say to them there is no need for alarm, the cost will not be very much.

It is our intention to run a sanitary sewer line to all sections of Clanton where one is needed, and if we are able to carry out our program it will require about two years to complete the job. If your city officials were to fail to take advantage of this wonderful assistance from our government, and not install additional sanitary sewer lines where necessary, the entire citizenship of Clanton would have a just cause to condemn us very severely. So far we have paid cash for our portion of the cost, and I hope we can continue to do so, but if necessary to borrow some money to finish the sanitary sewer system, I think it would be wise to do so while the government is giving us liberal assistance. We have extended water mains to the new sections of Clanton, and we are now on our way with the sewer pipe lines. When completed, every one should feel proud of our water and sewerage system.

Interesting Letter From Mrs. Towns In Marked Tree, Arkansas, Tells Of Lowland Flood Control

"Marked Tree, Arkansas,
August 21, 1939.

"Editor, Chilton County News:
Clanton, Alabama:
"Dear Sir:

"It seems that Alabama can be termed a 'wet' State in a geographical way as well as an intemperance way.

"I suppose Alabam will have to build levees like those along the Mississippi River to control those floods which seem to be a common event.

Yesterday, after reading about the high water in Selma and Prattville, which was in the Commercial Appeal, I was fortunate to visit the giant steel siphons down on the levee, which is on the St. Francis River. These siphons being the only ones of that kind in the world made me more anxious to see them, as we had seen another point of interest in the State of Arkansas while in Mammoth Spring, which was the largest spring in the world.

"Marked Tree, which is in Poinsett County, is a bottom within a bottom, which makes the soil a 'gumbo.' Since

COUNTY'S CROPS AND ROADS DAMAGED BY WEEK OF RAIN

Many Bridges Washed Out And Crops Suffer Considerable Damage During Week Of Heavy Rainfall Here

With the advent of fair skies in Chilton County, crews of workmen went forth to begin the task of rebuilding and making passable roads and bridges washed out by the week of continuous rain which brought heavy damage over the entire state and flood waters to several sections.

Although the destruction to the county's roads and bridges was not as widespread as that which the high water in the spring of 1937 caused, damages that will reach into the thousands of dollars was apparent when it was found that many bridges over the county were completely or partially destroyed

No estimate was available this week, as Commissioners of the four districts have been busy repairing the damage and making the roads passable. Probate Judge J. Lee Smith is away on his vacation and no comment regarding the extent of the damage was available from him

In the fourth district, in which Clanton is located, Commissioner J Monroe Parrish stated Tuesday that there were nine bridges washed out, not including water boxes, etc. Some of these bridges were large spans, and several were totally destroyed. Repair will be possible to some, but one 150-foot steel bridge which spans Walnut Creek southeast of Clanton, was a complete loss. This was a comparatively new structure, and will cost quite a sum to replace Reports from other sections of the County were that numerous bridges were partially or completely destroyed. Between Clanton and the Dallas County line on the Clanton-Selma Highway, three concrete bridges were damaged, but can be repaired at no great expense. In one place east of Maplesville the rushing torrents washed away a large portion of the road bed, but not enough to cause a complete cessation of traffic on that road.

Crops Damaged

Crops over the County suffered quite a bit from the downpours. County Agent J. W. Fant stated Tuesday that the cotton crop was damaged considerably. Cotton that had not matured suffered most, Mr. Fant stated.

Peas and beans of all varieties are sprouting in the hulls as a result of the prolonged dampness. A large portion of this crop that was ready for the markets was ruined, it was learned. The corn crop suffered some damage, but it was thought that no great loss was sustained by growers.

The sorghum crop of the County suffered perhaps the most, Mr. Fant stated. Quite a large crop of this is grown each year and the damage caused by the rains is great.

KIWANIS DISTRICT GOVERNOR TO BE GUEST SPEAKER AT CLUB

J. Theodore Jackson of Dothan, Alabama, will speak at the regular meeting of the Clanton Kiwanis Club at the Thomason Hotel tonight. Mr. Jackson is District Governor of Kiwanis International, an able speaker, and members of the local organization are urged to hear him when he appears as guest speaker tonight.

DAIRY CATTLE SHOW AT FAIR BIG FEATURE

EXHIBIT OF CATTLE TO BE DIFFERENT FROM LAST YEAR SAYS ASSISTANT AGENT

A release from the County Agent's office this week regarding the dairy cattle show will be of interest to those who plan to exhibit cattle at the Fair this year. Following is the release.

It is expected that the dairy cattle show at the Chilton County Fair will be larger and will consist of the best dairy cows, heifers, and bulls Chilton County has, according to C. L. Breedlove, Assistant County Agent, who has charge of the dairy cattle show.

There has been a division in the show this year between Jerseys and Guernseys, and these two breeds will not compete with earh other as they have in the past, except in the bull and cow, 2 years or older, classes.

The premiums have been increased in this division this year. Also a second prize in each class has been set up giving each individual showing a dairy animal a greater chance of winning a premium.

Many applications to show dairy cattle at the fair have been received by the assistant county agent. If you have a registered Jersey or Guernsey that you wish to show at the fair get in touch with C. L. Breedlove.

The dairy cattle show is listed as follows:

Jersey—Junior Heifer, first prize, $3; second prize, $2.

Letter From Senator Karl C. Harrison Regarding Bill

"Editor, Chilton County News:
"Clanton, Alabama.
"Dear Sir:

"Tomorrow I am introducing and will pass through the Senate a bill to make the office of the County Solicitor of Chilton County elective as of the end of your present County Solicitor's term, and in order that there may be no misunderstanding as to my position concerning this matter, I wish to make a statement to the people of Chilton County.

"On July 11th, there was submitted to the people of your county the following proposition:

" 'Shall the office of County Solicitor of Chilton County, which is now appointive, be made elective by the voters of Chilton County? If you favor electing the County Solicitor vote YES. If you oppose electing the County Solicitor vote NO.'

It is my information that the people voted more than 3 to 1 in favor of making this office elective, and I have no desire other than to abide by their wishes as expressed at the polls.

"Nothing was mentioned in the above proposition as to when this office should be made elective, and unfortunately there has arisen some difference of opinion as to whether this office should be made elective during your County Solicitor's term or at the end of his term. I have given this matter most careful consideration without bias or prejudice, and I am completely convinced that my stand is fair and sound.

"Yours very truly,
"KARL HARRISON."

JUDGE BENSON'S JUDGING

Judge Jim Benson in County Court last Monday handed down a most unusual sentence. Three boys were brought before him charged with theft. They plead guilty and Judge Benson sentenced all three to attend Sunday School regularly for 6 months! The parties complaining against the boys accepted the sentence as being fair, if unusual, and the boys must have a report on their attendance made regularly for six months—also on their behavior.

This sort of probation should be most helpful. If the Judge should sentence some grown-ups to attend Church for a year it would probably be good for all except the preacher—who would likely faint at the sight of the enlarged congregation, and the new variety offered up for his sermonizing—Scottsboro Progressive Age.

IS THERE A BETTER TIME AHEAD?

Graft, dirty and machine politics, federal and municipal, have received some big setbacks during the past year and some of the "higher ups" are now in jail. It might be well for the country at large to realize that the general public is getting tired of our politics being run almost entirely by office holders for their own personal gain. Civil service methods are slowly but surely gaining ground and the Hatch bill is now the law of the land and will become the law of many of the states for their employees.

Will our better citizenship step in to take the places in politics made vacant by the weeding out of office holders and will we in time have a higher and more effcient class of permanent public servants in government employment.

We fear that this is too good to be true.—Haleyville Advertiser.

FALL DUTIES ON THE FARM LISTED

(By Donald Robertson)

Have you caught up with the crops? If so, here are some duties that can be done soon to make better farming next year.

Prepare land for small grain crops to be used for both winter grazing and grain production. This should be prepared at once so that a firm, moist seedbed will be ready by the middle of September.

Prepare land on which crimson clover and other winter legumes are to be grown unless they are to follow cotton or other crops that are still on the land.

Prepare permanent pasture land now for seeding later.

Turn grazed soybean stubble if the grazing is finished, and prepare soil for the crop which is to follow—oats, winter legumes, etc.

Make preparation for beginning cotton picking. The market demands a high-quality product.

Purchase your supply of winter legume and small grain seed. Buy early and demand a superior quality of seed.

Clip that pasture again, cutting just a little lower than the preceding time, and cutting late enough to get all the weeds, yet early enough to keep the weed seeds from developing.

Start grazing early Spanish peanuts at once, if not already being done.

Make plans for planting winter legumes in cotton fields, bearing in mind inoculation and the application of phosphate.

Remove all dodder from lespedeza fields where the see are to be saved for planting. A pile of dry straw may be put on the dodder and burned. The price of the seed infested with dodder is greatly penalized on the market.

WORSE THAN RAZORBACK

The "roadhog" is one animal that is for a state wide stock law.—Chilton County News.

The roadhog is really a worse menace to public travel than the razor back.—Eutaw Democrat.

FICTION AND STOCKINGS

Virginia Black, The Saturday Evening Post author, says her first attempt at fiction was inking her skin to camouflage the ragged holes in her long black school stockings. Clever! Not the idea, but calling it "fiction". The idea is probably older than this author. Both boys and girls used to wear long black stockngs to school, and the inking of legs under the holes in the stockings was as common a practice as carving initials on desks.—Greenville Advocate.

EVERYTHING'S WET

This is our weather editorial:

A truck driver in a neighboring county had been battling for hours to free his vehicle from the tenacious mud, where it was hopelessly stuck. Several farmers from the countryside had assembled to give their assistance.

The skies wept, and then dripped—but finally the moisture ceased. The clouds broke off a bit for the first time in three days, and the sun made a feeble effort to pierce the gloom. An old mud-covered countryman squinted up at the faint orb, stroked his chin, an observed:

"Well, Ill be . . . ., the thing's mildewed!"—Tuscaloosa News.

MARK REMARKS

John D. Petree, director of Industrial Relations, tells us that the "state jobless got $389.785 in July." How much did the ones who worked get? They were the ones who did the paying.

* * * *

Why doesn's Alabama wrap the cotton it grows, through working convicts, in cotton bagging?

* * * *

If all the postage used in sending propaganda to newspapers was diverted to relief of the destitute, it would serve to benefit humanity instead of going into the trash wagon.

* * * *

Propagating and protecting wild life for the purpose of slaughtering it for fun later on is not "conservation."

* * * *

I am asking you: Is there any difference in the principle involved here?: Industrialists "closing down" oil wells, in order to force the publc to pay a higher price for gasoline; working men "sitting down" in order to force industrialists to pay higher wages.

* * * *

Among my first recollections is "high water" at Old Cahaba, and later the 1886 "flood" at Selma. Then, along came Yellow Fever in the "nineties" when my wife and baby were stricken with fever along with others. Selma has had many floods and "pestilences." but its citizens have always been able to meet and conquer every emergency.

* * * *

The present perpetual increase in taxes of every kind is a far greater menace to the peace and happiness of we Americans than either Hitler, Mussolini, Stalin, or the three of them combined.

* * * *

If you are a presidential candidate like John Nance Garner, and catch a two-pound bass, the papers play you up in the headlines as a fisherman. If you are just a rag-weed variety of genus homo and catch a six-pound bass, they put you in the headlines as a liar.

* * * *

Wiseacres, see what you can make out of this: We (the State) nurse a dying felon back to robust health by giving him every care and consideration possible, in order that we may later place him in the electric chair and burn him to death.

* * * *

The Legislature has been having a hard time trying to decide whether to work or go fishing. Fishing won, and the taxpayer will foot the bill, fish bait, snake medicine 'n everything.

* * * *

They say that Senator Hayse Tucker has been so worried over the way the "loan sharks" have been robbing the poor people that he hasn't been able to sleep of nights lately. So he ups and introduces a bill to stop the "robbery" by allowing them to charge only 3 1-2 per cent per month—which is only 42 per cent a year. We "po-folks" should start a fund to erect a monument to this great human benefactor.

MORAL ECHOES

D. W. Haskew

We have often heard it said that the way to move a balking horse or mule is to build a fire beneath his stomach and he will move up. In California the other day a young man was driving his car along near Los Angeles and it balked. He coaxed and urged it along but it refused to go. Then remembering this old method of moving a balking horse, he started a fire under his car and crawled back into the driver's seat. Other cars arrived and he shouted to them: "I am having a hot ride." The man was dragged from his burning car almost burned to death. In the courts he was tried for public drunkenness. His drunkenness, like all other drunkenness, produced a hot ride for him. Any time you see a person on fire with intoxicating liquors you can just put it down that he is havng a hot ride.

In riding along the highway in northwest Florida we came to a pine forest. Our road stretched ahead like a canyon in Colorado. The tall straight timber lifted their top needles high into the air. The pine trees were very thick on the ground and I never saw more beautiful pine shafts anywhere. It was a forest of beautiful pines on each side of the road. We passed out into the open and there were shattered pine trees on the rolling land, but they were knotty and crooked and ugly. They were of no value. Foresters have found that pine trees planted and grown thickly on the land will grow up to be tall, straight-grained and useful timber, while an occasional tree grows crooked, cross-grained, gnarled and knotted. The same thing is true with mankind. When we grow together and profit by our mutual help we become unselfish and fine, but when we seclude ourselves from the human contact we grow up to be crooked and snarling and selfish.

The other day I saw a cartoon that was rather suggestive of the value of learning to know things. A big gorilla was madly tearing at the bars of his iron cage, while there was resting on the floor within easy reach, a steel saw. The old gorilla saw nothing in the saw that would give him liberty. If he had been a man he would have quickly grabbed the saw and cut the bars and set himself free. Under the cartoon was written these words: "Knowing How." One of the Dante's great sayings was: "Give the people light and they will find their own way." As a race we have only learned what to do with a few things.

One morning in May I was out in the woods with one of the finest spirits I have ever known. Nature was on tip-toe to make the time a happy one, but the one who really made that a happy day was the climate that radiated from the heart of the one who was with me. There are some few people in the world who make a beautiful climate where they are. A winsome soul creates sunshine. A servant was trying to describe a certain lady to a stranger. She could not recall her name, how she was dressed or anything like that, but she said: "O, I mean that sweet, sunnny face that always beams with happiness when she speaks." Like the sun, there are people who carry light and happiness wherever they go. You are making climate for your companions. Is it stormy, or is it calm and peaceful?

A young man was conscripted into the Southern army during the Civil War. He was a watch-maker and to earn a little ready cash he carried his watch repairing tools along with him. In camp he did quite a bit of business. One day he received orders to strike tent and prepare for battle. On entering his tent he looked about him in dismay. There were twelve watches awaiting his repair and as he looked over them this is what he said: "Why, I cannot possibly pull down this tent and march. I have twelve watches to repair and I have promised to deliver them by Saturday night." That man had forgotten the purpose of his enlistment in the army. That is the trouble in our churches today. We joined the church to be soldiers of the Lord eJsus Christ, but we have carried our business along with us and we have too much to do when the command is to march and fight for the King. There is too much watch mending in the Christian army. Our chief aim in life should be to fight for the King and not repair watches.

To Query Women All Over South

Touring Reporters have now asked over 1,200 women and girls of leading Southern Cities the now famous question: "Were you helped by CARDUI?"
Averaging all replies so far shows that 93 out of every 100 users questioned declared CARDUI benefitted them!
Users by thousands are eager to tell how CARDUI has given them appetite; helped them gain strength; has thus relieved them of the symptoms of functional dysmenorrhea due to malnutrition. Many also say that, when symptoms indicate the need, CARDUI in larger doses helps "at the time" to soothe pain.

TRUTH about ADVERTISING

By CHARLES B. ROTH

CAN YOU READ LATIN?

Charles Roth

THE law used to recognize the doctrine of Caveat emptor.

That is Latin. It means "let the buyer beware." The doctrine for which it stood was simply this: Whenever you bought from another it was your responsibility to see that you got your money's worth, not his.

If he were a dishonest man and wanted to cheat you, you had to protect yourself. The law wouldn't help. "Let the buyer beware," it said. Caveat emptor.

That doctrine, as unsound doctrines always must, has given way to a better one. The modern business man, if he expects to remain in business and warrant your patronage year after year, doesn't expect you to protect yourself.

He assumes the obligation of protecting you. He makes sure that his quality is high. He religiously subjects his product to tests. He introduces improvements. And he establishes a price which is the minimum on which he can remain in business.

For this change, which is one of the most important improvements in business, advertising has been largely responsible. Advertising has given a permanent quality to business. A man who advertises mus be scrupulous in his integrity. H cannot write lies. He has to live u to all claims. This means that yo as a customer, can buy from such man with absolute confidence.

Not long ago Owen D. Young one of America's clearest thinke and a great business executive, d clared that:

"Dishonesty in various forms becoming rarer in business. Whe ever it occurs it is exploited newspapers, because it is the u usual, not the common, thing.

"A store keeper may short-mea ure or short-weight his custome and make a little. He may even i duce a clerk to short-measure short-weight. But he cannot build big business on that basis. Honest and uprightness must exist in gre business organizations."

And it must also exist in small business organizations, which expe to grow large.

Whenever a business man adve tises, it is a sign that he wants operate an honest business, o from which you can buy with co fidence and trust.

Advertising is thus the guidin light which you can follow in getti more for your money.

Daily it leads millions of Ame can customers to better values, greater satisfaction, to the sereni which comes from dealing with m and organizations they know th can trust.

Jemison F.F.A. News

Fourteen members of the Jemison Chapter of F.F.. went on an educational tour August 8 through 13th. This tour carried the boys through South Alabama, Florida and a small part of Georgia.

They visited Auburn Experiment Station, Fort Benning, Ga., Panama City Beach, Sanders Beach at Pensacola, St. Andrews Bay and went on a deep sea fishing trip in the Gulf of Mexico.

Those members making the trip were: Leslie Glass, president; Charles Littlejohn, treasurer; S. Y. Dorminey, vice president; Willie Smith, past vice president; Austin McCarty, 2nd vice president; James N. Smith, J. C. Anderson, William Watts, Byron Cox, Alred Lenoir, Curtis Satterwhite, Howard Maddox, Fred Collum, Warren Benson and Mr. H. H. Denson, local advisor.

Those non-members making the trip were: Hyman Franklin, Robert Merrill, Claiborne Merrill, James Watts, Bill Cobb, Lewis Hewitt, Wiford Horton and Mydle Horton. Mr. J. F. Horton carried the party in his school bus.

Each boy brought a frying size chicken, eggs, meat, butter and vegetables and their meals were prepared in camp. Newt Sales and Chuck Robinson, both colored men, went and did a fine job of preparing the meals for the party.

The party spent two days and nights in Mr. J. G. W. Sorrell's Tourist Camp at St. Andrew's Florida and were treated very hospitable by Mr. Sorrell and family.

Eight members of the Jemison Chapter F.F.A. are attending the F.F.A. convention August 21-23 at Auburn.

Two members are designated as official delegates and four are candidates for State Farmer degrees.

Those who are delegates are Arnold White and S. Y. Dorminey. Arnold is past president of the Chapter and S. Y. is vice president for the ensuing year.

Candidates for State Farmer Degrees are Floyd Atkinson, Willie Smith, James Conway and Leslie Glass.

The officers for this year are Leslie Glass, president; S. Y. Dorminey, vice president; Austin McCarty, 2nd vice president, Floyd Atkinson, reported; J. W. Collum, secretary and Richard Perkins, librarian.

The members will go to Auburn in a school bus with other chapters of the Chilton-Shelby District, made up of Columbiana, Jemison, Isabella and Clanton.

GRASS AND HAY CROPS FOR SOIL CONSERVATION

Increased use of grass and hay crops for soil conservation on cooperating farms in the CCC Camp area near Clanton, Alabama, is shown by complete figures for the fiscal year ended June 30, according to Mr. James H. Wood, Superintendent of the Soil Conservation Service.

Tabulations show a total of 440 acres of pasture improved by such treatment as seeding fertilizing, liming, and contour furrowing were developed, according to Mr. Wood.

A total of 1033 acres in approved rotatons and a reduction of 875 acres in clean-tilled crops is revealed by the figures, Mr. Wood points out.

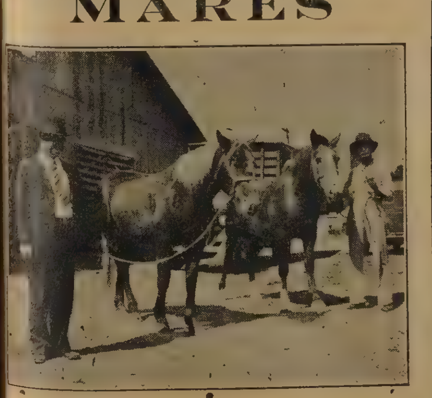
In addition there were 182,000 trees and 150,000 kudzu seedlings planted, 71.1 miles of terracing constructed, and 310 acres of strip cropping completed during the period, according to Mr. Wood.

It was further pointed out that a relatively new type of hay was harvested by many farmers in this section when the first cuttings of Lespedeza sericea were made from plantings now in their second or later growing season. The fact that this new hay is being grown largely upon land that was too severely eroded for other crops enhances its value, Mr. Wood points out.

ROCKFORD WANTS WATER

Rockford, capital of Coosa County, has voted for waterworks bonds to assist in financing the town with water supply. The vote was 62 for and 25 against the bond issue. Freestone water abounds in all sections of Coosa and particularly in and around Rockford, which has a high elevation. Rockford is the county seat and has been for 100 years.

MARES



I have a load of North Dakota Percheron Mares, weighing from 1,000 to 1,200 pounds each. These Mares are from the same section of the country from which I have shipped in previous years. Come in early and get first chance at them.

A. A. JACKSON WRITES

"Clanton, Ala.
August 21, 1939.

"Dear Editor:

"Will you be so kind as to give me space in your paper to say a few words in regard to what a writer said in last week's Banner in regard to 'Wine, women, and song.'

"This writer seems to put wine and women as the two leading evils all along down through the past ages. My contentions are that man has caused more evil than wine, women and everything else combined, because the Bible teaches that man has dominion over everything on earth, in the seas, and all that fly in the air. In Genesis third chapter, and 16th verse says: 'The man shall rule over the woman.' So we see man is supreme over everything on earth, in the seas, and in the air.

"Could one of Soloman's seven hundred wives, and three hundred concubines walk off and leave him? No, they had to do just what he said do. How can any sane man hold these thousand women responsible for the misuse old Solomon used them for. But that is just an example of man.

"Until about one hundred years ago the woman had to do just about what the man said do. Why make the woman responsible for her misconduct when man forced her to commit the most of them. As to wine, it can't hurt anyone who cares to conduct themselves right. The Bible tells us that the love of money is the root of all evil. I think man comes next.. I have been in contact with the general public fifty-seven years and have found a lot of good women, and a few good men. What man won't do can't be done. But that is just an example of man.

"We find by reading the scriptures that when man was in the garden alone without a woman he was no good. We find that after God gave him a woman, the first wrong he committed he poked the blame on the woman, and has learned no better yet. It seems that what little good there is in man came by the woman's influence. If man could learn not to try to place the blame of his wrongs on wine, women and strong drink, we would have a better world to live in. God will surely not hold the wine, women and strong drink responsible for the wrong that man commits. but man alone will answer for the sins he commits.

"OH, MAN WHAT ART THOU?.

"A. A. JACKSON.

Food Establishments Must Renew Permits

—o—

Proprietors of food handling establishments including restaurants, soda fountains, hamburger stands, sandwich shops, candy manufacturer, etc., were reminded today by County Health official that with the date drawing near for obtaining 1940 privilege licenses, all health permits will have to be renewed prior to October 1st. Whether or not these permits will be reissued to the various operators of eating establishments will depend not only on the satisfactoriness of the equipment and physical condition of the establishment, but also on the method of operation, according to a statement by the Health Office.

"This means,' 'he stated, "that the results of inspections made by Mr. Fred H. Buckelew, County Sanitation Officer, between now and October 1st may have an important bearing on the renewal of health permits." According to Section 1146, Code of Alabama, 1923, it is unlawful for the city or county to issue privilege licenses for the operation of food establishments unless the applicant presents a permit issued by the county health officer.

A total of 64 permits were issued in the county during 1938-39. Five of these have either gone out of business or moved. Establishments located outside of Chilton County which sell foods products within the County are required to have what is known as an inter-county permit, the Health Officer explained. A list of such establishments holding permits is sent to the local county health department by the State Department, and the names of companies selling in this territory are checked against the list. Any dealer found without a permit is therewith reported to the State Health Department.

Two cases of diphtheria and one of scarlet fever were reported to the Health Department last week. One case of diphtheria occurred in Jemison and one on the Montevallo short-cut; the scarlet fever was reported about four miles north of Clanton.

GARDEN CHATS

Planting Old Lawns

Be sure the old lawn has a smooth surface by filling up all low places with good loamy soil. If any bare or hard spots have appeared, rework with loamy soil. Rake the entire lawn lightly to loosen up any old grass so the seed will settle but don't molest the roots. Sow good dependable seed (free from weed seed) checkerboard fashion, then diagonally for even distribution. If the lawn needs mowing do so at this time as the action of the mower over the grass shakes the seed off the grass blades to the roots, and the clippings tend to cover and mulch the new seed. Where possible cover lightly with loamy soil to protect from birds and aid germination. Apply humus fertilizer (those that decay) either by mixing with the soil covering, or direct if no soil is available. Water lightly and beat down with tamper or back of shovel if no yard roller is available, then soak heavily, continuing about twice weekly until good rains occur. Lawn soil should be kept loose at all times for best results so the tiny grass tendrils may come through. Occasionally apply leaf mold, screened compost, peat moss, humus fertilizers that are free from weed seed, screened ashes, sand, basic slag and pulverized limetone. Commercial or manufactured fertilizers are stimulants, and should be applied after the grass begins to show green.

Plan on seeding your lawn with Italian Rye Grass seed to have a green lawn all winter, sow on top of your present lawn, soak well and it will be no time until you will have a pretty lawn for this winter.

A pretty lawn requires almost constant attention, and do not sow grass seed on a windy day. Sow just before a rain if possible. It's best to plant at the right time than too late, to get best results from any kind of seed or plant you want to plant. Also do not be afraid to ask for advice, as it will be offered to you if you ask for it, by writing your troubles to the writer and mailing or bringing them to the News office.

News Of The Jr. G. A.

—o—

"Rain, rain. go away; come again some other day."

Doubtless this little rhyme was in the hearts of every Junior G. A. who attended the meeting held at Betty Joyce Smith's home on Thursday afternoon.

What matters if it was raining, just so you could enjoy a meeting as splendid as the one held last week.

The topic for the program was: "Into the Looking Glass Country," which is China.

The G. A. hymn, which is "We've a story To Tell To The Nations," was sung by those present to open the meeting.

At the close of the hymn we had sentence prayers, followed by the G A. watchword.

Billy Ruth Fant conducted the devotional, "The World As Jesus Sees It." Others taking part on the program were Dorothy Bossinger, Dean Easterling, Doris Bossinger, Gwendolyn Atkinson, Ruth Kate Easterling, Warren and Martha Janet Wingard, Sallie Gowan, and Mrs. J. W. Fant, our Junior G. A. Counselor, gave two very interesting articles concerning southern Baptists at work in China and season of prayer.

We were delighted to have Mrs. Oscar Davis as guest speaker.

After the meeting was adjourned, refreshments were served to eleven members and three visitors.

Plans have been made for the Junior G. A. to have Oak Park in Montgomery as their meeting place for their next program. We will have one of our mission study books taught at this meeting.

Maynards Chapel

Everyone has almost had enough rain around this place for a while, although we have to take what God sends.

Sunday was the set date for calling our pastor for the coming year. Rev. Robert Cost was called back. He is a good servant to have in God's work.

Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Barrett were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Maynard.

Miss Marie Barrett is staying a few days this week with her grandmother Blankenship near Clanton.

Mr. and Mrs. Monroe Boles spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Maynard.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Baldwin visited relatives in Mountain Creek Friday.

Mrs. Ruby Maynard and children are visiting in Birmingham this week.

We are having a Sunday school training union at church this week. Everyone is invited to attend.

We had several visitors and old members present Sunday and Sunday night whom we were glad to see. We invite you back again.

We extend our hearty congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Dewey Robinson on their recent marriage. May happiness and achievement be theirs in the future.

THE COLLEGE GIRL OF 193

SHE has changed from the girl you knew a few years back. definitely feels the fashion urge. She is neater, more individu and wears better looking and better fitting clothes. She goes in new-hair-dos, she loves well-cut, well-made tweeds, she prefers one two really good date-dresses to a lot of variety in cheaper ones. believes in the simple basic dress of wool or of crepe.

She spreads her individuality in the way she wears her hair, in what she puts on her feet, in her belts, her jackets and her mittens. This year in the East she went in for dirndls day and night, for wooden Dutch shoes, pigtails, cummerbunds, sou'-westers, hair-bows, rolled-up slacks, cowboy hats and knee-boots in the rain. In the West they rushed crew hats, huaraches, coolies (loose shirts worn over skirts) and shell necklaces. By this fall there will be a flock of new fads—a new dress to replace the dirndl, new jackets, new socks, new shoes, new coats with bigger pockets and hoods.

As to the basic things for campus wear, every college girl agrees upon a good practical working wardrobe. The emphasis on dressier clothes varies with each college. For classes and on campus she needs plenty of cotton dresses in the early fall and late spring, at least four or five simple wool dresses, and an equal number of crepe dresses which she can wear when she dresses for dinner or goes away on a week-end. She likes knitted elastic waists in her dresses. She wants plenty of sweaters—"more than your mother thinks you need," to quote a college girl. She likes tailored silk blouses to wear under them or alone and a number of tweed skirts in solid colors, in checks, and in plaids. She prefers them gored wide or pleated full. She likes loads of jackets for variety. Good tweed ones, suedes, suedes with knitted sleeves, Parkas in the winter, flannel blazers in the spring and corduroy beer jackets with big pockets. Slacks are the coming thing. You can count the campuses on one hand where they are still forbidden. Gray flannel slacks and flannels in pastel pin-stripes are both very good. Ski clothes are w all winter long. Ski boots and jacket are worn to classes on wet days for protection and warm

In the East about eighty per of the girls wear fur coats. Leopa skunk, beaver and dyed musk lead the list. They also like cam hair coats, wool gabardine, coats of Byrd cloth, tweeds li with bright colors and waterproo Also plaids and checks. They ask plenty of pockets, slip backs, ho for winter and driving in open c They are unanimous on the subj of reversibles and plain tweed co reefer or swagger style. For dr they like coats trimmed with and suits with fitted coats of t own.

When they dress for a big we end they like a more formal dres velvet or in crepe for tea danc and for dinner. They need two three of these. For evening they dresses with jackets, and dre with little sleeves. Velvet is a fa ite and so is taffeta cut very bo fant. They also like crepe, jersey satin. At most colleges four to are enough, at the universities eral more formal dresses are ne and also two or three dinner dres

In the East blue jeans and sl are worn for hiking, shorts for nis and sometime for bicycling. lottes are more popular in the W Bandannas tied in new ways are widespread, and so are bright gora socks and angora mittens. the dormitory they specify f skirted housecoats to lounge breakfast in on Sunday. Also, b robes with full skirts, broadc pajamas with legs rolled up under-panties with elastic tops fitted legs.

Floyd Church News

On account of rain and muddy roads we closed our meeting Wednesday night August 16. We had a splendid revival for our Lord and Master. Brother Lockhard, our pastor, announced that it was the best he had seen, as the weather conditions were so unfavorable. Brother Allen Ruff, our helper, said the same. We are grateful to Brother Ruff for his splendid sermons so faithfully delivered during the small series of meetings. We have received many wonderful blessings. We are thankful for the soulds that were saved.

We are sorry that so many of, our friends and members were sick and did not get to attend. We are praying that if it is the Lord's will that they may become strong again.

We had a large crowd out to Sunday family spent the week end in Clay County.

ALL AVAILABLE JOBS ON WPA PROJECTS IN STATE ARE FILLED

Number Of Certified Applicants For WPA Jobs More Than Five Times Number Of Jobs Now Available In Alabama

Under existing unemployment conditions in Alabama there is small hope, if any, for the Works Project Administration to provide additional jobs to take care of any persons, whether newly certified by the Departments of Public Welfare or recertified after the 30 day-lay-off prescribed by law, according to a statement made this week by Colonel W. G. Henderson, Alabama administrator of the WPA.

This statement came following information reaching the Alabama office of the Works Projects Administration that county offices of the Department of Public Welfare were being flooded with applications from persons seeking aid or jobs through the WPA.

The Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1939 makes it mandatory that all persons who have held jobs on WPA projects continuously for eighteen months MUST be removed from these jobs. here were 16,000 person caught in this lay-off order in Alabama and this does NOT mean there are 16,000 jobs open on WPA.

The appropriation for expenditures by WPA set out by the new Act made it necessary for each state to cut off thousands of other WPA employees. In Alabama there will be 10,460 persons removed from WPA jobs in order for this state to come within the figure allowed for September 1st.

Along with the statement from the Alabama administrator came the fact that already there are about 23,000 persons who have been certified and are waiting to take vacancies that occur. The difference in the number of persons being removed due to eighteen months continuous WPA employment and the number to be dropped to come within the quota given Alabama was 5,712 which means there were only that many job openings which were filled from the 23,000 persons already in the files of the WPA office awaiting orders to report to work; consequently the hope for others to secure WPA employment at any time in the near future is very small.

Unless Alabama is given a larger quota. all places on WPA projects in the state have been filled and there are several thousands of persons already certified to take any vacancies that occur.

Giant Alabama Power Plant For Mobile

Thomas W. Martin, president of the Alabama Power Co., has announced that a 40,000-kilowatt steam generating plant will be erected at Mobile. The plant, said to cost $4,000,000, will be the most efficient of its type in the South and one of the most efficient in the country, officials declared. Among other modern improvements will be a hydrogen-cooled generator unit.

The plant will be the first of three units to be built in Mobile, according to Martin, who said consumption of Birmingham coal in operation of the plant would be a big aid to the coal industry here.

Power company officials declared that work would get underway on the plant some time during the next three or four months, but added that it was a little too early to know exact details of the plant as no working plans had been drawn up yet, and many technical details had to be ironed out.

In making the announcement, Martin declared:

"Construction of this plant in Mobile is but one step in the large program of construction which we hope to get under way in the near future. It was made possible by action of the Alabama Legislature last week in passing the Booth bill and the recent action of Congress in curtailing competitive activities of the Tennessee Valley Authority and unfair loan grants to municipalities."

The Booth bill requires municipalities to attempt to purchase existing private distribution systems before municipal utility plants can be operated.

In hailing passage of the Booth bill, Martin asserted that "again business men are expressing renewed faith in individual initiative and that economic freedom so necessary to permit the nation to progress along the lines which in years past have brought it to its position of eminence in world affairs."

Power company officials declined to give any hint as to what the "large program of construction" included besides the Mobile projects, declaring that "it is still too early for anything definite."

Hunting Causes One-Third Gun Deaths

Nearly one out of every three accidental deaths from firearms reported in this State in 1937 occurred while the victims were hunting, according to a special study of firearms deaths conducted by the Bureau of Vital Statistics of the State Department of Health.

Of the total of 73 accidental deaths from firearms, 23 were attributed to the discharge of guns on hunting expeditions. Those fatally shot while playing with guns totaled 18, those fatally shot while carrying and handling guns numbered 14, and those who lost their lives as a result of cleaning guns totaled seven. Other types of accidents involving firearms claimed a total of 11 lives during the year.

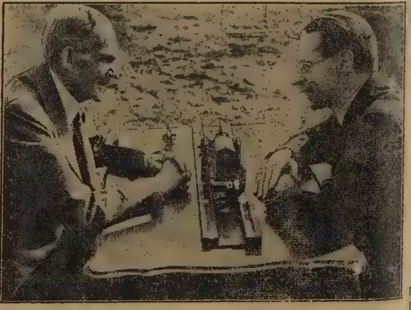
Must Increase Farm Income, Says Ford



WITH Edsel Ford in the driver's seat to turn the first furrow, the new and vastly-discussed Ford-Ferguson tractor made its world's-first public appearance at the New York World's Fair in late July. Shown above are Henry Ford and Harry Ferguson, Irish inventor who developed the principles embodied in the new tractor and its unit implements, with a small model of the tractor between them.

Said Henry Ford: "I look for this tractor to accomplish two things—turn the farm deficit into a profit and reduce the expense of going on the land!" Enthusiastically seconding his father, Edsel Ford added: "The farm is one of the most vital problems now before the country. No political solution yet offered has been able to solve it. To increase farm income by increasing the cost of food in the cities is a policy no one, not even the farmer, approves. And yet every one agrees the farmer's income must be increased.

"My father and I believe that if the farmer can do what industry has done—make his profit out of economy of production and distribution—he will increase his real income without curtailing his market. We built this tractor primarily to cut the farmer's first cost and his operating cost.

"This tractor is the only one we ever made that completely takes the place of horses and mules, thus eliminating draught animals which constitute one of the farmer's heaviest costs. Four cows or six young cattle, which mean income, can be raised on the same land required to feed two farm horses that only mean expense."

Harry Ferguson said that among outstanding new features of the Ford tractor are light weight, simplicity of operation, maneuverability, fuel and oil economy, absolute safety on hillsides or difficult ground, and ability to strike any sort of obstruction without damage to implements. The new machine will do the work of eight horses and four men, he said.

The Ford-Ferguson tractor is now in production, and will be available to the public through Ford and other dealers about September 1. It is being demonstrated daily at the Ford Exposition, New York World's Fair.

NOTICE TO NON-RESIDENT

The State of Alabama, Chilton County. Circuit Court, in Equity. July 31, 1939. No. 1637.

Velt Burnette, Complainant, vs. Mattie Burnette, Defendant.

In this cause it is made to appear to the Register by the affidavit of Velt Burnette that the Defendant is a non-resident, and that his place of residence and post-office address is unknown, and that such address cannot be ascertained after reasonable effort; and, further, that, in the belief of said affiant, the Defendant is of the age of twenty-one years:

It is, therefore, ordered by the Register that publication be made in the Chilton County News, a newspaper published in the County of Chilton, once a week for four consecutive weeks, requiring her, the said Mattie Burnette, to plead, answer, or demur to the bill of complaint in this cause by the 4th day of September, 1939, or, in thirty days thereafter, a decree pro confesso may be taken against her.

Done at office in Clanton, Alabama, this 31st day of July, 1939.

SALLY JOHNSON ROBERTS,
42-4 Register.

NOTICE OF LOCAL BILL

Notice is hereby given that at the present session of the Legislature of Alabama, there will be introduced the following local bill, which shall be substantially as follows:

An Act

For the relief of M. A. Gore, N. S. Johnson, the Estate of John W. Foshee, deceased, W. R. Clements, V. J. Gragg, H. M. Nix, present and former members of Jury Board of Chilton County present and former Judges of Probate and County Commissioners of Chilton County, Alabama, and to relieve said parties from any and all liability for and on account of certain charges set up by the State Examiners of Accounts for alleged compensation or payments made to said members of Jury Board in excess of compensation alleged to be allowed by law.

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF ALABAMA:

Section 1: Whereas, under the provisions of the General Acts of 1931, page 56, M. A. Gore, N. S. Johnson, and John W. Foshee, were appointed members of the Jury Board of Chilton County, Alabama, and Whereas, said Act provided that the compensation of said members of said Board should be paid the sum of $5.00 per day for the time acutally engaged in the discharge of their duties as such members, however, the total compensation of each member for any one year not to exceed $100.00 in counties of less than 25,000 population, according to the last preceding Federal census, and Whereas, Chilton County, according to said last preceding Federal Census, had a population of 24,579, and Whereas, said members were paid compensation in accordance with said general law, and Whereas, Acts of 1933, page 136, reduced the compensation of Members of the Jury Board in counties of less than 25,000 population, to not exceeding $50.00 each year, and whereas said Acts of 1933 were again amended by Acts 1939 at the present session of the Legislature, Senate Bill by Harris No. 55, approved by Governor, March 2, 1939, placing said compensation again at $100.00 per year in Chilton County, and Whereas, W. R. Clements was appoinnted Member of the Jury Board to succeed John W. Foshee, in 1935 and H. M. Nix was appointed member of the Jury Board to succeed N. S. Johnson in 1936 and V. J. Gragg was apponted Member of Jury Board to succeed M. A. Gore in 1937 and Whereas, after the amendment of said General Act of 1931 by said Acts of 1933, through inadvertence or oversight, said Members of the Jury Board continued to draw compensation in excess of said Acts of 1933 and Whereas, the State Examiners of Accounts have charged in their examination of the public accounts of Chilton County that said Members of the Jury Board have drawn the following amounts in excess of the compensation allowed by law as follows: M. A. Gore, $250.00, N. S. Johnson, $150.00, John W. Foshee, $100.00, W. R. Clements, $300.00, V. J. Gragg, $150.00, H. M. Nix, $165.00 and Whereas, the State Examiners of Accounts in their official examination of public accounts of Chilton County have set up said charges against said officials and against the judges of probate and the members of the Commissioners Court in office during the respective time that said jury commissioners are alleged to have drawn said overpayments Therefore,

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF ALABAMA:

Section 2: That M. A. Gore, N. S. Johnson, Estate of John W. Foshee, W. R. Clements, V. J. Gragg and H. M. Nix, Judge of Probate and Members of the Commissioners Court in office during the respective times that said Members of the Jury Board are alleged to have drawn said overpayments as herein stated be and they each are hereby separately and severally relieved from any and all liability for and on account of said compensation received by them or either of them.

Secton 3: That all laws or parts of laws in conflict with the provisions of this Act be and the same are hereby repealed.

A REPORTER'S NOTES

"– Action against bad spots..15 revs, 3 suspends.. 78 warnings ..Dunn says 100% improvement..hand in hand ABC..Public opinion, once aroused, can and will operate to bring about the orderly conditions we all desire. – Bm Luncheon Club..quote unsolicited letter"

Scribbled across a folded sheet of white paper, those would be a reporter's notes on the campaign of the Brewers and Alabama Beer Distributors Committee for improved conditions in the retail beer outlets.

From those notes would come this story:

SELF-REGULATION MEANS BETTER BEER OUTLETS

The Brewers and Alabama Beer Distributors Committee—voice of Alabama's $5,000,000 beer industry—reported today that it had obtained 15 revocations and three suspensions of retail beer licenses, and had warned 78 outlets in its drive against the bad spots among the state's 1,600 retail establishments.

David E. Dunn, State Director, said that conditions showed 100 percent improvement as a result of the beer industry's campaign that was drafted to go hand-in-hand with the aggressive enforcement work of the Alabama Alcoholic Beverage Control Board.

"The A B C Board," Mr. Dunn said, "is cooperating in every way to drive from Alabama the undesirable honky tonk."

Speaking before a Birmingham luncheon club, Mr. Dunn sought the aid of public minded citizens by declaring that "public opinion, once aroused, can and will operate to bring about the orderly conditions we all desire."

Three days after his address, Mr. Dunn received the following unsolicited letter from a leading citizen:

"I want to express my appreciation of the work you and your Committee have done in relieving Alabama from 'joints'. I believe I like beer as well as anyone, but I do not like to drink it in a 'joint', which I feel is a public nuisance. I feel sure that the work you are doing is a progressive step and is doing much to establish the brewing industry on the reputable basis which it deserves."

That's our story. Will you, the public, help by patronizing only reputable, law-abiding retail beer dealers who keep their establishments as wholesome as beer itself?

SYNOPSIS

Beautiful, young Kay Forrest has been employed by Christine Maynard, photographer, to pose for a series of pictures, the background of which will be exquisite Cathedral Gardens, famous Southern resort. Unknown to them, one Jeff Butler, mean, unscrupulous "swamp angel," has hired a friend to spy on the two women. Kay, of necessity, is scantily clad while posing for the camera studies. Kay frequently stays with Mrs. Ruth Hamilton, her son Barney, of whom Kay is very fond, and her daughter Margaret. Mrs. Hamilton, a remarkable woman, conceived the idea of the Gardens following the death of her husband. One night, after a local dance, Kirk Reynolds, a ne'er-do-well gambler of Beverly, a resort town, and Kay go for a ride. Kirk's car collides with that of Harvey Jackson, and during the ensuing argument Kirk whips out a gun and kills the young, popular engineer. Kay is completely stunned by the tragedy. Kirk threatens to drag her into the thing if she tells even her father.

They passed a big white house set far back from the road. A plantation. Kay saw people on the broad, high veranda; heard snatches of laughter and the syncopation of a jazz orchestra playing in some gay New York night spot . . . and intruding into this southern tragedy through the loud speaker of a radio.

"Put yourself in my place," said Kirk. "Then you'll know I'm not bluffing."

She could put herself in his place; that was the staggering thing. She knew that he was telling no less than the truth. She, of all persons in the world, had reason to know that he was deadly and cold-blooded. She felt terribly young and alone.

"This," Kirk said, "is between you and me. There are liable to be questions. And you're not to know the answers. Is that perfectly clear?"

She said, "I can't think . . ."

"You'll have time enough for that." His words were close-clipped. "But whatever you think—always remember this, anyone else who knows about this is going to find himself in a lot of trouble."

Beverly is bisected by State Highway No. 11 which runs due east and west and digresses only briefly at Monument Square to circle the venerable two-story brick courthouse which stands solidly and solemnly under benevolent old oak trees.

At either end of the town on this highway are new and impressive archways, designed by leading carpenters and flaunting to the tourist world sentiments collaborated on by prominent members of the local Chamber of Commerce who daily view the fruit of their literary activities with pride.

Entering the town from east or west, you are confronted by this:

WELCOME TO BEVERLY
Pop. 6,500

Departing, the tourist glimpses the reverse side of the same archway and is edified by another literary confection:

PLEASED TO HAVE MET YOU COME AGAIN TO BEVERLY
Pop. 6,500

Artistically and perhaps esthetically the signs are intriguing, however little they might seem to blend with the sleepy tranquillity of the little southern town. They are wrong, however, in one important respect, the optimistic Chamber of Commerce being inclined to ignore cold facts.

Some few persons resent an exaggeration which defies the Federal census of 1930. Government figures proclaim to the world that the municipality of Beverly has 4,376 residents. Members of the Chamber of Commerce declare frequently, officially and vehemently that this count is untrue and that there has been deliberate and unforgivable discrimination. They appear to believe that such an undercount is a cataclysmic thing, affecting the well-being of the entire world, and their assertion that sixty-five hundred persons reside in the little town is merely a method of answering this libel. "All right," is the effect of their statement, "we'll tell the world how many people we think we have."

These sign-boards are a direct and proximate result of the successful launching of Cathedral Gardens. With the Gardens completed, the gravel road leading to them freshly scraped, the White Star Hotel newly papered—in spots—leading citizens and business men conceived the idea that tourists might come to visit awhile. The signs were therefore erected and casual arrangements made to entertain a few strangers.

But for some reason which Beverly never could quite understand, the fame of the Gardens spread overnight. There were other beautiful Gardens in the South, many of them, whose fame had been broadcast for decades, but there was something about this new place of Mrs. Hamilton's which intrigued the fancy of tourists. They came not singly, but in battalions. They descended upon the somnolent little town and swarmed about its streets. And since Beverly was a considerable distance from any large city—being therefore a metropolis of sorts—the tourists usually remained for two, three or four days.

They visited Cathedral Gardens in the early morning. They flocked there during all the daylight hours. And, almost invariably, they remained in anticipation of moonlight nights when the Gardens reached the zenith of enchantment. Visitors wrote to their friends:

"Of course Cathedral Gardens are beyond description. You must see them. But when you do come, plan to stay a few days. This is a queer little town, but lots of fun. The hotel isn't half bad and there's dancing every night. One good picture-house, and several places along the roads serve barbecue sandwiches which are worth driving a few miles to get. There are other things, too. The proprietor will tip you off if he thinks you're safe—believe it or not—to a dice-game on the second floor. Regular crap-table, and it's fun, provided you don't mind losing a little. We have stayed five days and we're coming back when the azaleas are over and the lotus season begins. They say that's going to be breath-taking."

And, on more than one occasion, letters were despatched from gentlemen tourists to other gentlemen who might become tourists. These letters touched on another point:

". . . And in addition to all that, Jim, old man, there's plenty of hot-cha here. If you're lonely, meet Miss Henkel, the beauty operator in the hotel. She's easy on the eyes—and boy! how tropic! The rest is up to you. As a matter of fact, the whole thing is a miracle. I can't help wondering what the old-timers in this burg think of the jazz invasion.

"P. S. This Henkel dame answers to the name of Babe. What she answers is something else again. A word to the wise is foolish."

It had taken Beverly no time at all to become tourist-conscious, nor to exploit its visitors. Robbie Morse raised the price for his best rooms to two dollars a day, and never quite oriented himself to the fact that it was paid without question. Pleasant homes on streets jutting off from Monument Square placed signs in their front yards: "Tourists Accommodated" and some of them assumed names: "The Gray House—Meals & Beds for Tourists," "Welcome to Ye Olde Inne. Chicken Dinners and Comfortable Rooms," "Rooms. Meals. Free Parking. Make This Your Headquarters While Visiting Cathedral Gardens."

And all of this had happened suddenly and bewilderingly to a town which for more than two hundred years had dozed placidly under southern skies; a town which was bordered on the east by Big Moccasin Swamp and on all other sides by tradition; a town where business had been depression-proof and boom-proof; a town unaware of the outside world except on those infrequent occasions when the nation had indulged in warfare. Beverly was startled, business men applauded.

A little roadster, having as passengers Kay Forrest and Barney Hamilton, approached Beverly from the east, bumped across the railroad tracks and moved slowly up Palmetto Avenue toward Monument Square.

The Square was crowded. Outside the White Star Hotel was a fleet of cars, most of them wearing the license plates of other States. The general trend of passenger traffic was eastward, toward Cathedral Gardens. Farmers, in from the country in rattle-trap flivvers, searched despairingly for parking space and cursed Beverly's new popularity.

Barney asked a question. "Home?"

"Yes."

"Right away?"

"Yes."

He said, "You're funny. You haven't even been to town in two weeks, and now you have to run home. Why?"

"I must. Really."

"Before you get out—" he started.

"What?"

"Well, I suppose it's none of my business and I swore I wasn't going to butt in . . ."

"Go ahead, Barney."

"All right." He drew a deep breath. "What's wrong?"

The smile died from her eyes. She said, "Nothing."

"Tell that to somebody else. I know there is."

"What makes you think so?"

"Lots of things. It started the day after you went to the dance with Kirk Reynolds two weeks ago. You've been different. And you haven't even wanted to come to town until this morning. It's almost as though you were afraid of something."

She said, "Maybe I am."

"Then spill it. You know how I feel about you."

"How?" She tried to relieve the tension.

"Let's put it that I'm a sap, which might explain why I love you . . ." Her face flushed and she touched his hand ever so gently. "But darn it! don't you see where that puts me? I want to help and you won't let me. You're stalling."

She said, earnestly. "I'm not—really. There's nothing wrong."

He shrugged. "You win. I'll check out."

"Barney! Please . . ."

Plate Glass Mirror Redeems a Dark Corner

THE magic that can be wrought by a wisely placed mirror of plate glass is interestingly illustrated in these two before and after pictures, taken in the dining room of a modest five room house. A total of $8.55, of which $6.00 was spent on a plate glass mirror, redeemed two ugly corners which spoiled an otherwise attractive room. A hanging shelf, for which the homemaker paid $1.25, was hung above a chest just opposite the one pictured to form, with its bright pottery and brass ornaments, a charming reflection in the mirror. The green paint was removed from the chest for $.40, the original wood finished by rubbing with oil and $.90 more provided new handles of brass.

FIQUETTE LETTER

the earliest records, the low-lying part of Poinsett County has been subject to seasonal floods. These sunk lands, it is said, were caused by an earthquake in 1812, or thereabout. As this section was settled, levees were built to take care of this water caused by the recurring floods. This, of course, caused more water to be pushed down the St. Francis River.

"As the St. Francis River is a navigable stream, the government would not allow the stream to be entirely dammed up when the floodway was built. Therefore, a dam was built at the foot of St. Francis Lake with a lock, so that river traffic may go through. In addition, it was necessary to build a sluiceway in order that the normal flow of the St. Francis be maintained.

"On May 7, 1938, the sluiceway was washed out by water and had to be rebuilt. Shortly after that a project unique in the annals of engineering was begun, and completed. The dedication services were held on June 8, 1939.

The project, consisting of three giant steel siphons, each nine feet in diameter and more than two hundred feet long, was completed at a cost of $215,000. They reminded me very much of the caterpillar that we go riding in at the State Fair, however, they are gray instead of green in color.

"These siphons are used to carry a river over a levee instead of culverts to carry it under the levee, and are the latest development in the safe transfer of water across levees.

"This unusual design is the only kind like it in the world, and the siphons were built in the U. S. Engineers Shops with Mr. George C. Ross, chief engineer, in charge of the construction.

"Levees in this area are strong and stable, but the foundation material on which structures must be placed is a fine sand which, when saturated, approaches quick-sand. By passing the water over instead of under, or through the levees, all hazards of floods from sluiceway failure have been eliminated.

"These tubes are air-tight, and are submerged in reinforced concrete inlet and outlet basins. and the flow of water started by exhausting the air from these tubes, or siphons, with a vaccum pump. After the flow is begun, there is no further need of mechanical aid.

"Marked Tree may seem to you, as it did to me when I first heard the name, a bit unusual for the name of a town, so I asked several people after I had been here several days. This is the information they gave me:

"Marked Tree is built between the St. Francis and Little Rivers, which bound it on three sides. At the narrowest point of land, it is less than a quarer mile from one river to the other. To the east the St. Francis makes a bend of five miles, and three miles above Marked Tree, and three miles above Marked Tree the Little River flows into the St. Francis.

"Indians coming up the St. Francis from the south on their way to St. Francis Lake and northward, found that they could drag their canoes across the narrow strip of land which is only about 150 yards thereby saving approximately five to eight miles paddling if they went the distance around. They marked a tree —a large oak—on the bank of the St. Francis to show other Indians and perhaps traders and trappers where to port age to the Little River.

"We live one block from the site where the original tree stood, however it is believed to have fallen into the river during the overflow of 1890.

"Yours truly,
"(Mrs.) Gertie F. Towns,

Gardens On Parade At Chilton County Fair

By Edward Bialas

The writer had the privilege to get this news from Mr. J. Mell Martin, secretary of the Chilton County Fair, that the board of directors of the fair have decided to have a flower exhibit at the Chilton County Fair September 26th to 30th at Gragg Field, as feature attraction.

So with your cooperation the premium list is made, and as soon as it comes off the press, please study it and plan to display your cut flower and pot plants.

Clanton should have a garden club as there are so many flower lovers in the city. What the delay may be the writer does not know, or can say, but as the county is taking leading part in everything else, why not take a leading part in flowers.

From what Mr. Martin tells me, this will be the biggest County fair in the state, and more power to him and the board of directors.

The writer will help and assist Mr. Martin and the local organization as much as time permits, as he has other fairs to make flower displays, but never-the-less he will send a display of dahlias to this fair to make this first flower show a success.

Now all you flower lovers get together and show the fair association that flowers do belong not only at home in the yard but also at the county fair.

HILYER FAMILY REUNION HELD SUNDAY, AUGUST 20

On Sunday, August 20, the Hilyer family, relatives and friends gathered at the home of S. H. Hilyer, Sr., for the one day of renewing old friendships and enjoying themselves in the year.

Before lunch was served, Preacher William Gilliland, who is a nephew of Mr. S. H. Hilyer, Sr., made a fine talk.

Then lunch was spread and thanks was given for the large and wonderful lunch that the ladies prepared.

After lunch several songs were sung. Professor Johnson, who is a friend of the family, made a short talk. Then Rev. J. T. Daniel preached his customary sermon. After the sermon they sang two songs and while they were singing everyone shook hands with grandfather Hilyer, who will be 93 years old December 1.

Those present included Mr. Hilyer's wife; his only living sister, Mrs. Ellen Eiland and a host of relatives and visiting friends of the family.

of the fact that the consumption of more cotton would greatly reduce the carry-overs from year to year.

Mr. Walton explained that through the National Cotton Council a solution to this problem is hoped for. This Council is composed of the five major divisions of the cotton industry, and through their organization much good is being done and will be done to place King Cotton back on the throne where he rightfully belongs.

A County Unit of this organization was recently organized in Clanton, with John Deramus County Chairman. Several of the ginners of the county were present to hear Mr. Walton's talk.

PROMINENT RESIDENT OF CLANTON DIES

J. Q. WADE PASSED AWAY LAST SATURDAY FOLLOWING LENGTHY ILLNESS

John Quincy Wade, one of Clanton's most prominent citizens, passed away at his home here last Saturday near midnight at the age of 71. He had been in ill health for some time, and death came as a result of a heart ailment.

Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock from the home conducted by Dr. S. J. Ezell and Dr. J. L. Daniel. Burial was in the Clanton cemetery, J. Mell Martin & Sons in charge.

Pallbearers were: T. L. Williams, C. E. Stapp, T. J. Littlejohn, M. L. White, J. C. Page, J. Hance Alred, V. J. Elmore, F. J. Callen. Honorary pallbearers were: W. L. Popwell, J. M. VanDerveer, L. F. Gerald, O. L. Reynolds, E. E. Upchurch and H. T. Pipes.

Surviving besides the widow, Mrs. Belle H. Wade, is one son, James Wade, of Clanton. There are three brothers, C. W. Wade of Calera, Alva Wade of Birmingham and Mont Wade of Starksville, Miss. There are three sisters, Mrs. Don Rathers, Houston, Texas; Mrs. E. W. Perkins, Houston, Texas; Mrs. A. J. Powers, Akron, Ohio.

Mr. Wade was originally of Starksville, Miss. He lived in Columbiana a short while, and was married to Miss Bell Huyett there in 1902. They moved to Clanton the same year, and have been living here ever since.

Mr. Wade was engaged in the gin business when first coming to Clanton, which business he followed for a number of years. He put up the first successful lighting and power system in Clanton about 1910, and a few years later began the manufacture of ice. He finally dropped all other busness except the manufacture on a large scale of ice, and as he did in all other undertakings, made a decided success of it.

During his active life J. Q. Wade was a good citizen, a likable neighbor and a distinct asset to the community in which he lived. During the last few years of his life, his health had been bad and he had divided his time between residing at his home in Clanton and his winter home in Fort Myers, Florida.

LOCAL FISHING PARTY MAKES UNUSUAL CATCH RECENTLY

A party of five men recently returned from Panama City Fla., where they fished for two days and told of making a most unusual catch while fishing.

The men, Rip Burnett, Horsley White, Barney Burnett, Jimmie Bell and Wm. H. L. Smith fished with Captain Curtis Ware at aPnama City Thursday and Friday of last wek. On Thursday their catch included grouper, rock salmon, and King mackere, totaling 148 pounds. The unusual part was that rock salmon are very rare and the Captain, who has been fishing for 50 years, stated that he had caught only one of this species during that time, and this party hooked five trolling.

Friday the group went fishing with Capt. W. V. Saswell. Nine King Mackerel, 2 bonita, 18 amberjacks were landed. The two-day catch totaled 201 pounds.

Not One But Two First Bales Of Cotton This Year

We'll just have to call it a draw in deciding who had the first bale of cotton ginned in Clanton this year.

Almost simultaneously the News was informed that two bales of the white gold were being ginned at separate gins in Clanton. First came Mr. R. S. Easterling, who informed us that he was having a bale ginned at the Hugh Thompson gin, which was raised on the farm belonging to W. Z. Hodges on Clanton Route six. That was Monday afternoon.

Hardly had he gotten out of the News office until the Planters Gin & Warehouse Company notified us by telephone that they were at that time ginning a bale for Mr: Arch Hall whose farm is on the Kincheon Road near Clanton. And so we leave it up to you to decide who gets the steam-heated ice cream freezer.

Mr. Hall's bale weighed 542 pounds and Mr. Easterling's bale weighed 375 pounds and both were sold together to Mr. J. S. McSwean at the Chilton County Exchange.

Yes sir, it seems that we'll just have to buy two steam-heated ice cream freezers and make the award in duplicate along with our congratulations to Messrs. Hall and Easterling.

MALICE, HATE; GREED FOR GOLD AND POWER

CHIEF REASONS FOR WORLD UNREST FROM RUMORS OF WARS

According to belief of United States Treasury officials a new European war probably would push farther into the background any possibility of collectin the $14,473,478,027 owed this government as a result of the last war.

Only Finland, which has only a $8,233,157 share of the obligation, has been paying up regularly in peacetime.

England owes $5,497,069,379 in principal and accrued interest; France, $4,180,628,819; Italy, $2,024,150,441; Germany, $1,241,102,030, and Poland, $263,166,398.

Most of the war debts were loans made to the Allies during the World War, but many more millions were loaned for relief and reconstruction purposes afterward. The German debt includes a large sum assessed for the expense of maintaining the American army of occupation in the Reich immediately after the war.

Other debts are: Armenia, $23,803,104; Belgium, $345,324,480; Estonia, $21,029,440; Greece, $34,295,697; Hungary, $2,388,730; Latvia, $8,668,365; Lithunia, $7,760,608; Rumania, $63,999,476; Russia, $390,298,848, and Yugoslavia, $61,779,062.

Add to the above staggering figures untold billions more that would surely accrue if the "European powder keg" is touched off—then in calm meditation contemplate the slain, the mangled bodies of men—pestilence—famine—death, and you can understand why Chilton County News is opposed to this holocaust which is being made to order that a comparatively few rich munitions manufacturers and supply men can make more profits.

The Sudbury, Mass., Globe, of August 28th, quotes Henry Ford as saying there will be no war because "they're all bluffing."

"They don't dare have a war and they know it," the newspaper said the motor magnate declared in an interview on the tense international situation while visiting his Wayside Inn.

"He blamed the present war clouds on munitions makers and profiteering financiers and declared:

"If war does come, let them start by bombing munitions plants behind the enemy's lines."

"Looking toward the future, he said, mechanized farming and chemical science would go hand in hand in eliminating the excuse for war by permitting cultivation of land now used for grazing and fodder. Under such a program, tillable acreage could be increased 70 per cent in England and 50 per cent in Germany, he said."

We sincerely hope that Henry Ford is right in saying "they dare not have a war." —MARK.

LOMAX CHILD KILLED WHEN HIT BY TRUCK

FIVE-YEAR-OLD MARSHALL PRICE DIES FROM INJURIES SUFFERED MONDAY

Marshall Eugene Price, five-year-old Lomax boy, died at 8:00 A.M. Tuesday in the Central Alabama Hospital here from injuries suffered when he was struck by a truck on the Birmingham-Montgomery Highway near his home last Monday at 5:15 PM.

Investigating Highway Patrolmen stated that the boy was struck by a truck owned by the F., J. Nelson Transfer Co., of Birmingham and driven by Leonard U. Teague, when he attempted to cross the highway in the path of the oncoming truck. Teague stopped and assisted in getting the youth to the hospital, where he died fifteen hours later. He suffered severe lacerations and both legs were broken.

Investigation of the accident continued throughout the day Tuesday. No charge had been preferred against Teague at the time of this writing, and it is believed that the accident will be classed unavoidable.

The child is survived by his mother, Mrs. Geneval Price; father, Dewey Price; three brothers, Clarence, of Utah, Fred and Eugene of Lomax.

Funeral services were held Wednesday from the New Harmony Church at Lomax at 3:00 P.M. Interment was in the nearby cemetery wth J. Mell Martin & Sons in charge.

Bigger Agricultural Department At This Year's County Fair

By Edward Bialas

This is the report that Mr. Howard Oden was telling the writer the other day. He believes that the individual exhibits will be larger than in the past years, as more spirit has been taken among the farmers, so he is reserving more space than he has been reserving in the past. With the added money this season for prizes, he sees no reason why this year's Agricultural Department should not be bigger than in the past.

He also told me that the community has shown more interest and they are out to show just what a community can do if they put their shoulders together. All in all it looks as though prospects are really favorable regardless of the fact that much rain has hit Chilton County recently.

The Community Exhibits are open to all schools and different communities such as the Rehabilitation groups, are eligible to take leading parts in this department, and the writer feels that the Chilton County people, never in the past have failed to represent its County to be one of the leading counties in our State of Alabama. I feel sure that these various communities will be represented at their own County Fair this Fall.

So wishing all the communities and all the individuals to have their displays in place and seeing the BLUE RIBBON placed on their exhibits on Thursday after the judging is done—more power to the winner. Will be there to greet the winner or winners.

Prattville "Has What It Takes—On several occasions during our quarter of a century's residence in Prattville we have witnessed disasters which took heavy tolls in property and personal wealth. Some of these tragic blows were seemingly enough to discourage almost any people but those who had the fortitude built up by a love for Prattville, its institutions, and its traditions. Following each catastrophe, our people have demonstrated a wonderful faith by going quietly and earnestly to work in an effort to repair damages and make the best of a bad situation. Very little fanfare and wailing to the high hills of heaven have been heard from our citizens. They accept these disasters philosophically, take them in stride, and always come back with a bigger and better PRATTVILLE.

It's a pleasure to live in such a town. Even after several experiences with flood, fire and bank-breaking, we're thankful that twenty-five years ago circumstances brought us to Prattville to live. We've seen the town enjoy a wonderful growth in those 25 years, and we know that we are blessed with assets which will bring further growth in the years to come.—Prattville Progress.

Talk To The Young Folks—In a letter received a few days ago the writer tries to give me good advice. He says "If I had a paper I would devote it almost entirely to the young folks and try to wake them up. Don't waste your time with anyone over 40 as most of them can be trusted to prevent reforms. Talk to the 4-H Club boys and girls. Get them interested in government and citizenship and show them the right way before their fathers show them the wrong way."

He says you must catch them while they are young, like Hitler, Mussolini and Stalin are doing right now.

I guess my friend is right. Some of us have been trying to do this for many years. We may not have been very successful and probably have not put enough effort into the work.

We also think that morals should be taught in all grade schools more conscientiously and more systematically than at present.—Haleyville Advertiser-Journal.

The President Acts Wisely And Well—At the time when this was written, acceptance by Poland of President Roosevelt's appeal for mediation of issues which threaten to embroil Europe in major warfare gave intimation that untiring efforts by the chief executive to save world peace might eventually be crowned with at least part of the success which his unselfishness deserves.

Unable to do more than appeal to the reason of European leaders, President Roosevelt has performed a delicate task of diplomacy so brilliantly and so tellingly that every thinking American experiences a feeling of pride and satisfaction.

The president has spoken earnestly and sincerely the sentiments of the mass of citizens of this nation and never before has he commanded a more solid following than has rallied behind attempts to avert the ghastly and unnecessary tragedy of conflict.

His masterly handling of a grave situation deserves better for his peace proposals than unconsidered rejection by maddened men marching into battle lines.—Selma Times-Journal.

Battle Of Burnt Corn—Col. Jim Walton, Eupora, Miss., Director of the General Samuel Dale Historical Society, was in Evergreen during the week seeking data about the fight at Burnt Corn in 1813.

According to Col. Walton, the Burnt Corn fight grew out of a wife trade between Jim Cornells, who owned a ferry at Clairborne ferry as boot in the wife trade, moved over to the Wolf Path and opened a trading post where Burnt Corn is now located. Later, High Head Jim and Peter McQueen came down the path with a party of Indians on their way to Pensacola. Cornells was not at home. The party robbed the post, burned the houses and carried Lucy Cornells to Pensacola where two Indians sold her to a Spaniard for two blankets.

Cornells, finding his buildings burned and his wife spirited away, hurried to the settlement around Claiborne where Sam Dale raised a company to await the return of the Indians from Pensacola. Dale and Caller waylaid the trail, and attacked the Indians at Burnt Corn. Dale was seriously wounded in the fight. The Burnt Corn fight led to the massacre at Ft. Mims and subsequently to the Creek Indian wars along the Alabama River.

The Burnt Corn battle field, probably the most noted historical spot in Conecuh county, has been entirely neglected. No marker of any kind has been placed on the battle field, Walton said.—Evergreen Courant.

Nobody Stopped!—A news story from Livermore, California, tells the following story:

Frantically elderly Walter Jenkins attempted to flag down motorists who swooped down the Mission Hill road near Livermore.

Every few minutes he dashed down to a nearby creek for water with which to revive his wife.

On a vacation trip, Mrs. Jenkins was stricken with a heart attack Tuesday, and after treatment she and her husband resumed their homeward journey.

As they drove down Mission Hill a tire blew out. Overcome by heat and excitement Mrs. Jenkins fainted.

For two hours Jenkins implored aid of passing motorists, but none stopped. Finally he gave up. Mrs. Jenkins had died.

That couldn't have happened in the United States twenty years ago. But it could happen, and did happen, twenty days ago. Formerly a motorist never passed another whose car was stopped, without stopping to inquire if he could be of any assistance. It was the courtesy of the road, the custom of the road.

But the motorist is afraid to stop now. Too many criminal attacks have been made on motorists who stop to assist, and find that an accident has been faked and hold-up men are using some device to stop the passerby. Many a motorist has been robbed when attempting to play the good Samaritan.

The driver of a car now seeks safety from highway bandits by the speed of the car.

The criminal has killed the courtesy in the automobile driver.—Greenville Advocate.

Strange Discovery—On the coast of England, in a land-locked bay, which belongs to a private individual, a strange and most interesting discovery has been made.

A few days ago an ancient ship was uncovered in the sands of the bay and immediately an investigation was made of the hulk.

The ship is 80 feet long, and is supposed to have sailed the seas about 1,400 years ago.

In the ship were discovered precious old relics, such as golden scepter, a golden-handled sword, studded with prescious stones and swords are found of minor value, as if they belonged to a regular army, which needed no embossed blades for their battles.

This is a most interesting discovery and high speculation is going the rounds of scientists as to who sailed in that ship and what nationality they claimed allegiance.—Montgomery weekly.

Rain Affects Sorghum—It is a deplorable fact that the heavy rains in Chilton County as well as the entire State, have seriously affected the sorghum crop this year to such an extent that observers say it is practically a total loss. Too much water has diluted the stalks, and rendered the finished product practically worthless.

MORAL ECHOES

D. W. Haskew

When I was a boy I had a watermelon patch. One day I was weeding the ground and hoeing the melons. Unknown to myself I let the corner of my hoe clip the tap root of the melon plant. I went on my way and returning an hour later I saw the vines were wilted. On examination I saw that the tap root had been severed and the connection with the soil was broken. It was marvelous how quickly the vines died when the connection with life was destroyed. In like manner my friends, when you break your connection with God, the source of your spiritual life, your soul will quickly die. When you found out, as I was in de forefront of church enthusiasm is wilting, better look carefully into that symptom. It may be that your connection with God has been broken.

A ventriloquist was attending a funeral and his peculiar powers were unknown to the gathering of the colored race. A few days later one of the pallbearers told what took place at the grave. He was talking to a member of the white family and he said something like this: "Boss, when we started to lower old Joe in d grave he ups and says: 'Let me down easy, boys.' " Then the narrative ceased. After some moments the Boss inquired, "Did they go ahead and bury old Joe?" The would-be pallbearer replied: "Boss, I hain't found out, as I was in de forefrone of de stampede". That was just one more time when a man with a special gift used it at the wrong time and used it to scatter and confuse.

Pastor Ebon met with his congregation on the Sabbath and at the time of the collection he addressed them in this language: "Now, my dear brethren, I tells you dat dare am three kinds of givers, de flint, de sponge and de honeycomb. If you is a flint I means to hammer you until you give. If you is a sponge I am gong to squeeze you until you pour it out. I hopes dat all of you will be a honeycomb and just shed de sweetness of abundance in de plate as it am passing by." Some are stingy and hard. They give nothing away if they can help it. Others only give when they are squeezed. They yield to pressure, and the more they are pressed the more they will give. Few delight in giving without being asked. Remember that the Lord loveth a cheerful giver. The old negro preacher was right—there are three kinds of givers—"The flint, the sponge and the honeycomb."

At one time the Duke of Wellington was out viewing the soldiers of the British Army. To one side he saw an officer of rank standing in a slack, sloven manner. "Why do you stand in such an unbecoming manner?" asked the great general. The officer replied: "I am off duty, sir." The iron Duke replied: "Listen to me, soldier, a British officer is never off duty. Resume your military standing." Many a time have I gone out to view the soldiers who have enlisted in the army of the King of kings, and I have seen many officers in the Church and many privates in the kingdom acting and living in a way that does not become a follower of Jesus Christ Hear me, friends, a Christian Soldier is never off duty. When you enlisted to fight the battles of the King, you must be on duty all the time.

Eearly one morning I walked down town and saw that the sidewalks were all chalked up with invitations to attend a ball game in the afternoon. It was the holy Sabbath day and I did not believe in ball games on Sunday, but I knew that somebody did and they meant to have a crowd. I made the rounds of the little city and at no place did I see an invitation from any church, asking people to worship that day. If you want to know one reason why the picture shows and the ball games gather the millions on the Sabbath, while the churches gather the thousands it is because they go after them, while the church folds its hands and waits for them to come. If we have something better to give than the pleasure world, tell me why we are not letting the world hear about it. There would be fewer vacant pews in our churches if we would go after the people. They need to be invited, urged, compelled to come to God's house.

Headache, Bad Breath Tell of More to Come

Just as Paul Revere's famous ride warned of the Redcoats' coming, so Nature's messengers — headaches, biliousness, bad breath—often warn of faulty elimination.

Neglecting these signs may cause a host of constipation's discomforts: sour stomach, belching; no appetite or energy; mental dullness.

It's so easy to wake up your lazy insides. Just take spicy, all vegetable BLACK-DRAUGHT. Its unusual help comes from its principal ingredient—an intestinal tonic-laxative which imparts tone to lazy bowel muscles.

Millions of packages used testify to BLACK-DRAUGHT'S merit. Try it.

TRUTH about ADVERTISING

By CHARLES B. ROTH

KEEP YOUR SALT CELLARS CLEAN

THE other day I read of an eccentric old woman, rich and socially prominent, who went from house to house judging the occupants by the condition of the salt cellars on their tables.

If these were clean and well kept she put her stamp of approval on the household, but if they were not, regardless of the graciousness and charm of her hostess, she put them down as dowdy folks.

Charles Roth

Not all of us, fortunately, are quite so critical, but in one sense we are. And it is good that we are. We are critical of the merchandise we buy and of the merchants from whom we buy it. It is our criticism which keeps the standards of goods and stores high.

One of the many advantages of advertising is that it invites us to be critical of the goods being advertised.

The advertiser assures us that his goods are good. He invites us to compare them with others. We do. If he relaxes for a minute and lets his standards drop, we discern it. We tell others. We cease buying his product.

He knows that even the finest of commercial reputations will suffer if a mere handful of people get wind of the fact that the goods are su standard. They will tell th friends. Soon a whispering ca paign is under way. He suffers.

It is only by being careful at eve minute of the day that his goods a service are up to high standard th the man who advertises can su

Tuscaloosa Horse Show Opens October 2

—o—

Tuscaloosa, Ala. — The Tuscaloosa Horse Show, which is sponsored by the Tuscaloosa Horse Show Association, will take place at Queen City Park, Tucaloosa, Alabama, on October 2, 1939. The show will be held as a part of a circuit of shows consisting of the Tuscaloosa Show, in Demopolis, Alabama, October 3, and in Selma, Alabama on October 5, 1939.

Cash prizes totaling over $500 will be awarded at the Tuscaloosa Show including prizes for walking horses, mule colts, best team of working mules, gaited horses, pleasure horses, and other classes. One of America's outstanding horse show judges will serve as judg of the show.

Much local interest is added to the show by virtue of the fact that a number of Chilton County residents have evidenced their intention of participation.

This colorful event is expected to attract most of the finest animals in Southeastern states. Many famous a mals have already been entered, and is expected that one of the larg crowds ever to attend an event of si lar nature in this State will be at T caloosa on October .

efferson Banner Moonshine County In Alabama Last Year

—o—

efferson County's mountains, hills d dales yielded more stills in the t 12 months than any county in the te, according to the annual report the U.S. Alcohol Tax Unit. In the al year ending June 30, Federal nts seized 1,575 stills, with Jeffer- furnishing 302 of them. Of the 487 tor vehicles confiscated by the of- rs, 174 were in Jefferson.

rrests for the year numbered 1,531 h 717 or nearly one-half, being in ferson County. That county also led he volume of liquor and mash destroyed.

Runner-up to Jefferson was Montgomery with 122 stills, 33 vehicles seized, 258 arrests, 1,149 gallons of liquor seized and 26,836 gallons of mash destroyed. The aggregate capacity of the stills captured in this county was 33,600 gallons.

The small county of Cleburne in Northeast Alabama gave up 103 stills in the past fiscal year. Other counties where moonshiners and liquor runners gave the Federal agents trouble were Dallas, Tuscaloosa, Lee, Jackson and Russell.

The 1,575 stills seized in Alabama had a total capacity of 630,922 gallons. Actual liquor taken by the raiding officers was 22,498 gallons, and 640,410 gallons of mash were destroyed.

Joe Rollins, Birmingham, investigator for the U. S. Alcohol Tax Unit, prepared the report, which was made pub- one day last week by E. W. Myrick, group head for the middle district of Alabama. The map shows the number of seizures in each county.

While Jefferson was the banner "moonshine" producing county, Tallapoosa, Cherokee, Monroe and Washington got a clean bill of health in Mr. Rollin's annual report, as not a single still was captured in any of them by Uncle Sam's men. However, the sheriffs of those counties, it was said, probably did some effective work in raids on illicit distilleries.

FLOWER GARDEN QUIZ?

"To spiritually understand a simple wayside flower is to enter into the very heart of God."—Sinnett.

—o—

Chilton County has a lot of people who love flowers, and in order to encourage more and more Chilton Countians to become "flower conscious," Chilton County News has arranged with Edward Bialas, the "Dahlia man" of Birmingham, and Mrs. Annie Thacker, Florist of Clanton, to furnish flowers, bulbs and rose bushes to be given away in thirteen prizes to be awarded Chilton County News readers.

Beginning August 24th, and continuing for four weeks, a different set of questions will appear each week relating to flower culture. In all there will be 50 questions to be answered. The only requirement is that you must be a citizen of Chilton County, and a reader of Chilton County News; that you must answer each question as it appears in the News, cut the questions out with your answers and mail to the FLOWER EDITOR, Box 189,

Chilton County News,
Clanton, Alabama.

—o—

The contest will close September 18 at 12 o'clock noon, and prizes awarded the thirteen persons who answer correctly the greatest number of the 50 questions asked. Answers will be filed in the order in which they are received, and in case of a tie, or more than 13 correct answers, the ones received first will receive the awards.

The list of prizes appear below:

Prizes

GARDEN CHATS

By Edward Bialas

Do's and Don'ts For The Lawn

The Fall of the year is the best time to do general lawn work. Weeds are not so troublesome, cool weather plus lots of moisture which occurs during the winter months induces good root systems and growths before hot weather.

Tender grass tendrils cannot come up through hard, dry, sterile soil. Loosen the soil by working into it humus fertilizers and other materials, such as leaf mold screened compost, peat moss and humus free from weed seed and other objectionable things.

Remember that lawns under trees require double attention as trees are greedy for both fertilizer and moistue. Be sure then to keep the soil under the trees loose and doubly fertilize and water.

Light watering of lawns causes vapor burning of the grass; also causes the roots to remain near the surface to get moisture making the plant susceptible to the hot sun in summer and freezing in the winter. Water heavily once or twice weekly so the moisture will reach down to greater depths.

Nearly everyone is familiar with Bermuda grass. It is a grass which likes the sun. So if your lawn is situated in a sunny spot then Bermuda is the kind of seed you need but for a shady lawn you need Blue Grass or some mixture of seed which do well in the shade. Try Bermuda in the open places and shady lawn mixture under your trees. You will like the results.

Never try to sow grass seed on a windy day. A mechanical seed sower may be used if the lawn is large. Apply fertilizer mixed with some loamy soil after the seed are sown. About the best general fertilizer would be pulverized sheep manure, cottonseed meal and bone meal. As lime induces weeds, don't use it unless your soil is sour. Stable fertilizers contain many injurious weed seed. They germinate as soon as applied and so make it hard for the little grass plant to get off to a good start.

The time to cut the grass should come often so that it will not be necessary to rake it. The clippings make a good mulch both in winter and summer and they are a good fertilizer.

A little about roses. Transplant and plant roses while most dormant, usually about the last of November, December, January and February. Provide large hole, loosening up bottom soil at least 12 inches beyond planting depth and apply bone meal. Cut off all broken and otherwise injured roots of the bush and prune top so as to be a foot high. Spread roots out naturally without crowding, pulverize the soil with hand and drop in, packing soil down well, adding ferilizer and water, leaving soil around the plant slightly lower to catch moisture. Roses do best in medium to heavy clay soil.

Prospects for flowers look the best that I have seen in years as traveling around our state and visiting other states, seeing the different varieties of flower species, just beginning to be in their height of glory for the local County and State Fairs to display their beauty, so plan and bring all of your flowers to such exhibitions and each display will encourage others to do likewise in the future.

Church School, 9:45 A.M. each Sunday. L. J. Stewart, General Superintendent.

Morning worship service 11:00 A.M. Sermon by the pastor.

Young people's meeting 6:45 P.M. Sunday in the basement of the Church. Evening worship service 7:30 P.M. Sermon by the pastor.

The record tells us that our attendance was good or better last Sunday at Church School lesson next Sunday. We are happy to have the return of those members and workers who have been sick and have gotten well.

Next Sunday, as we know, begins another month. May we make it usher in a new high record of attendance and work for our God and our Church. The more we attend the better we work. The harder we work the broader will be our happiness. Let's hear that good Churcsh School lesson next Sunday, taught by our respective teachers. Then let's hear those good sermons delivered by our pastor. He deserves our every individual presence. God gives us messages through him.

Our hearts go out in deep sorrow and sympathy and great love to the dear ones in our Church who have suffered broken-hearted grief. We pray the blessings of God's comforting presence on each one.

WILDLIFE COUNCIL PLACES FISH AND QUAIL IN COUNTY

The Chilton County Wildlife Conservation Council placed sixty cans of small fish and 150 pairs of quail in the streams and fields of the County early this week.

J B. Atkinson, Clanton attorney, and Wm. H. L. Smith of the Upehurcn Drug Co. are president and secretary of this Council.

The fish, composed of the Rock Bass, Brim and Bass, species came from the State Fish Hatcheries. Each can contained 300 fish. They were placed in the streams flowing into the Mitchell Dam Lake. The quail were equally distributed over the County at four different points.

AIM for understanding for new prosperity

Labor Day SEPT. 4th

The aims of labor are always and ultimately toward a higher plane of human happiness. In the present era, this objective will be attained by the whole-hearted attempt at better understanding among men . . . which in turn will result in a new prosperity for all.

Labor's part in building America overshadows most economic activities. Let us honor it; let us become a part of it for life!

STRANGE ACTIONS OF DELICATE WATER METER DISCUSSED BY MAYOR C. JONES

There is something very interesting and really strange about a water meter. It acts as though it has a real keen brain, like the brain of a well-balanced person, capable of self-protection and directon. You may be surprised to know that during the cold winter months when we people do not, or may not take a real sure enough tub bath for several days, and our children do not use and waste much water, our flowers, lawns, shrubs, fish pools and lily pools do not require more water than the rains provide, this little make-up of delicate wheels, clock-like hands and disc just quts registering hands and disc just quits registering nation for the winter, and the good people who are supporting our water and sewerage system and helping in this way to build a better and a larger Clanton, do not have any trouble with the little machine.

It is very kind and considerate of our wishes and feeling, and seems to know it is right and regular to send to us at the end of the month a small water bill to pay. It seldom needs any repairs, and no checking to determine whether it registered two gallons when only one gallon of water passed through it, which I would say is impossible.

Really, it is interesting, ,this little machine is. The moment water is drawn through it, the hands begin to register the number of gallons drawn, but when there is no water pressure on it, why the little thing is as still as DEATH, no hands moving or life shown at all. It just will not perform at all for weeks, months or years unless we begin using water again, and when we do, there is instant life, the hands begin to move and the registration of the number of gallons we take is made. Isn't that strange?

But there is another very attractive feature to this water meter. When the pleasant spring time arrives, the flowers begin to blossom, the birds fill the air with their sweet songs, and we turn our attention to the new and costly shrubbery bought, or transplanted at an earlier date, but more especially when time passes into long hot summer days and uncomfortable nights, when the lawns, flowers, shrubs and pools suffer for lack of rain water, and we supply the necessary amount of city water to sustain life, when we take a shower bath or tub bath once and twice every day, when our children use and waste about twice the amount of water, when as a matter of fact, our consumption if water is almost doubled and there is a leak somewhere in our pipe lines we do not know about, this wonderfully strange water meter that cost $12.00 and does not move a single point unless water passes through it, awakens from its winter idleness and sleep, takes up its duty to us and to Clanton, registering the extra quantity of water we use. It is an honest little machine, we have evidence of its honesty in the fact that during the summer we draw more water through it, and at the close of the month it sends us a larger water bill than it did in the winter.

But some of us do not quite understand its perfectness and accuracy, or know should it get out of order, it simply fails to register at all, the delicate wheels cannot revolve, then the city fails to collect for the water used. It just will not register water that does not pass through it. Clanton does not have a better and a more profitable friend than this water meter, and at some future day I may attempt to show you just why it is a true friend. But how queer this little creature is. How it can be so near right in the winter, and so far wrong in the summer is difficult to comprehend.

REUNION AT HOME OF A. BUSSEY NEXT SUNDAY

There will be a reunion held at the home of A. Bussey, next Sunday, September 3, according to a notice received by the News this week. This home is located one mile west of Lomax.

The old friends and relatives are especially requested to come and bring a well-filled basket. Dinner will be spread in the yard. There will be preaching in the afternoon by the Rev. J. R. Cost.

Meadow Strips Help Control Run-Off Water

Run-off water from cultivated fields which formerly carried away each year tons of valuable topsoil is now being utilized by farmers for the production of hay crops, according to Mr. James H. Wood, Superintendent of the Soil Conservation Service in the CCC Camp near Clanton, Alabama.

As a part of a complete water-disposal system, according to Mr. Wood, many farmers have established broad, shallow meadow strips and other vegetated areas for controlling run-off water at terrace ends. Water from the terraces thus promotes the growth of hay on these areas.

Because of feed produced, these meadow strips furnish a greater incentive to the farmer for maintenance, Mr. Wood points out, and because of their width and shallow depth they are readily mowed for hay.

On those areas where old-type, narrow channel outlets have been constructed Soil Conservation Service technicians are recommending that these be converted into meadow strips or disposal areas this fall, Mr. Wood reports. Many farmers, according to Mr. Wood, have been averse to maintaining these old channel outlets properly since there was little benefit except for disposal of water.

Technicians are assisting farmers in making plans for the widening of all old channel outlets and the establishment of broad vegetated areas instead wherever practical. Kudzu will be used primarily for fall plantings in such areas.

NOTICE OF LOCAL BILL

Notice is hereby given that at the present session of the Legislature of Alabama, there will be introduced the following local bill, which shall be substantially as follows:

An Act

For the relief of M. A. Gore, N. S. Johnson, the Estate of John W. Foshee, deceased, W. R. Clements, V. J. Gragg, H. M. Nix, present and former members of Jury Board of Chilton County present and former Judges of Probate and County Commissioners of Chilton County, Alabama, and to relieve said parties from any and all liability for and on account of certain charges set up by the State Examiners of Accounts for alleged compensation or payments made to said members of Jury Board in excess of compensation alleged to be allowed by law.

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF ALABAMA:

Section 1: Whereas, under the provisions of the General Acts of 1931, page 56, M. A. Gore, N. S. Johnson, and John W. Foshee, were appointed members of the Jury Board of Chilton County, Alabama, and Whereas, said Act provided that the compensation of said members of said Board should be paid the sum of $5.00 per day for the time acutally engaged in the discharge of their duties as such members, however, the total compensation of each member for any one year not to exceed $100.00 in counties of less than 25,000 population, according to the last preceding Federal census, and Whereas, Chilton County, according to said last preceding Federal Census, had a population of 24,579, and Whereas, said members were paid compensation in accordance with said general law, and Whereas, Acts of 1933, page 136, reduced the compensation of Members of the Jury Board in counties of less than 25,000 population, to not exceeding $50.00 each year, and whereas said Acts of 1933 were again amended by Acts 1939 at the present session of the Legislature, Senate Bill by Harris No. 55, approved by Governor, March 2, 1939, placing said compensation again at $100.00 per year in Chilton County, and Whereas, W. R. Clements was appoinnted Member of the Jury Board to succeed John W. Foshee, in 1935 and H. M. Nix was appointed member of the Jury Board to succeed N. S. Johnson in 1936 and V. J. Gragg was apponted Member of Jury Board to succeed M. A. Gore in 1937 and Whereas, after the amendment of said General Act of 1931 by said Acts of 1933, through inadvertence or oversight, said Members of the Jury Board continued to draw compensation in excess of said Acts of 1933 and Whereas, the State Examiners of Accounts have charged in their examination of the public accounts of Chilton County that said Members of the Jury Board have drawn the following amounts in excess of the compensation allowed by law as follows: M. A. Gore, $250.00, N. S. Johnson, $150.00, John W. Foshee, $100.00, W. R. Clements, $300.00, V. J. Gragg, $150.00, H. M. Nix, $165.00 and Whereas, the State Examiners of Accounts in their official examination of public accounts of Chilton County have set up said charges against said officials and against the judges of probate and the members of the Commissioners Court in office during the respective time that said jury commissioners are alleged to have drawn said overpayments Therefore,

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF ALABAMA:

Section 2: That M. A. Gore, N. S. Johnson, Estate of John W. Foshee, W. R. Clements, V. J. Gragg and H. M. Nix, Judge of Probate and Members of the Commissioners Court in office during the respective times that said Members of the Jury Board are alleged to have drawn said overpayments as herein stated be and they each are hereby separately and severally relieved from any and all liability for and on account of said compensation received by them or either of them.

Secton 3: That all laws or parts of laws in conflict with the provisions of this Act be and the same are hereby repealed.

My Trip To New York

By LEORA MIMS

Just a small space in your paper to tell of some of the most interesting things on my trip.

I left Birmingham on the morning of August 10 with Capt. C. F. Eddins, wife and daughter. We drove something over 500 miles the first day, stopping in Salsbury, N.C., for the first night. The next night we spent in Jersey City, N.Y. We arrived in New York City the next day around 12:00 o'clock stopping with my sister, Mrs. J. J. Drumm, the former Lena Evelyn Mims.

There is so much to say about the City of New York until I could never tell everything. I was so excited and thrilled until I didn't know what to do. On Monday we took in the World's Fair. So many interesting exhibits to see, but the most interesting thing I saw was the exhibit of the General Motors, however Billy Rose's Show was very interestng, indeed. It would have been to most of the children because I saw Tarzan, characterized by Johnny Weismuller, also Gertrude Erdele and Eleanor Holmes. The latter and Billy Rose are to be married the first of September.

The day was well spent until after ten o'clock when the fireworks came off. They were beautiful out on the water, especially listening to "Tommy Dorsey and his orchestra in person. After the day at the Fair I was ready for a rest. The Eddins went back another day but I couldn't make it.

My next interesting sight was downtown at night on Broadway. It's just too thrilling for words. I had dinner in Jack Dempsey's Restaurant, however he was away and we didn't get to see him. There are many more interesting things I could tell about but I will get to my trip home

We left New York on Saturday, August 18 on our way home. We stopped in Washington for two days. So many historic sights are to be seen here. We visited Mt. Vernon, the home place of George Washington. So many sights there. From there we went to the Arlington Cemetery where we saw the "Unknown Soldier's Grave", also thousands of others.

Another interesting day was spent in watching them make money. A special detective carried us through the place. Postage stamps are also made here. Everything was very interesting. We left Washington on Tuesday morning coming back the "Skyline Drive. Highway." Our first stop was Shenandoah National Park, Va. It's a park consisting of 181,693 acres in the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia. Many interesting sights are here to see. There are tourist home restaurants all along. tourist homes and restaurants all along the way. The highest elevation is 3,550 feet

Our next stop was on Lookout Mountain in Chattanooga, Tennessee. I could never tell the many interesting sights I saw there. From there we drove on into Birmingham arriving there around six o'clock, having diven over 3,000 miles there and back.

Those are just some of the interesting things I saw. Anyone having been themselves can tell you the same.

We are expecting Mr. and Mrs. and Mrs. Drumm and little daughter, Sheila, for a visit in November. This will be Mr. Drumm's first trip South.

SYNOPSIS

Beautiful, young Kay Forrest has been employed by Christine Maynard, photographer, to pose for a series of pictures, the background of which will be exquisite Cathedral Gardens, famous Southern resort. Unknown to them, one Jeff Butler, mean, unscrupulous "swamp angel," has led a friend to spy on the two women. Kay, of necessity, is scantily clad while posing for the camera studies. Kay frequently stays with Mrs. Ruth Hamilton, her son Barney, of whom Kay is very fond, and her daughter Margaret. Mrs. Hamilton, a remarkable woman, conceived the idea of the Gardens following the death of her husband. One night, after a local dance, Kirk Reynolds, a ne'er-do-well gambler of Beverly, a resort town, and Kay go for a ride. Kirk's car collides with that of Harvey Jackson, and during the ensuing argument Kirk whips out a gun and kills the young, popular engineer. Kay is completely stunned by the tragedy. Kirk threatens to drag her into the thing if she tells even her father. Terror-stricken, she agrees to remain silent. However, the next time she goes out with Barney, he realizes something is wrong. She tries to reassure him, but tells him nothing.

Barney turned on her, his blond, boyish face serious. "Let's talk turkey, Kay. Something happened when you came into town two weeks ago. When I drove you in, you were bright and happy. The next day you came back to the Gardens all shot to hell. Mother and Margaret have both noticed it. I've seen it in your eyes. You're scared . . . You must realize we stand ready to help you in anything. Whatever it was that happened has changed you definitely, and don't say I'm wrong either."

She shook her head. "You may not be wrong, Barney; but I still can't explain."

"Kirk Reynolds is mixed up in it, isn't he?"

She was startled. "What makes you think so?"

"I've got to think it. Whatever the trouble is, it started the night you went to the dance with him."

"Yes." Her eyes were somber. "As a matter of fact, Barney, that's why I'm in town today."

"Why?"

"To see Kirk."

"But why? What's the big idea of wasting your time on a louse like him?"

She said, "I've got to talk to him, that's all I can tell you."

The boy's eyes narrowed. "That telephone call you got last night, was that from him?"

"Yes."

"He told you to come in this morning?"

"He asked me to."

"And you won't explain what's eating on you?"

"Barney! I can't! It isn't that I don't want to."

"I see." He spoke gently. "Listen, honey—there's a lot of nasty talk going around regarding Kirk Reynolds. You haven't heard it because you haven't been in town in the last two weeks. And I haven't told you. But I'll tell you this much—I don't like the idea of your playing around with him."

She said, "I don't either, Barney. But this morning I've got to see him."

"Check! I wish you'd tell me what's what."

"I would . . . if I could."

He lighted a cigarette with fingers which were none too steady. "Going back to the Gardens tonight?"

"Yes."

"With me?"

"I hope so."

"I'll pick you up here at five. Oke?"

"Right. So now . . ." She put a warm hand over his in brief caress. Then she jumped out of the car and moved up the walkway toward the veranda of her home. He looked after her with troubled eyes.

"Something's awful wrong," he told himself, "and I'm going to find out what it is."

CHAPTER IV

Mrs. Emma Forrest was a fine woman. Her friends agreed that she was fine; that she had an overplus of those sterling and pious qualities which make for social success and domestic happiness in a town like Beverly.

No one, or at least very few, persons ever criticized Emma Forrest. She ran her home immaculately, dressed well and plainly, did ardent church work, belonged to a reading circle, and was inordinately fond of helping neighbors when there was illness in the house, though it was not unknown that after these neighborly excursions she invariably had something to talk about: something personal and intimate, like the dearth of bed linen or the condition of kitchen plumbing or the shocking failure of the ill woman to have stocked her pantry shelves with preserves.

Mrs. Forrest was forty-eight years of age. She was not fat, but she definitely was heavy. Solid. Not comfortable at all, but solid. Folks asserted that her face showed strength of character. Her manner was positive—so positive that Andrew Forrest, her rather smallish husband, had acquired a chronic submissiveness. He never—or very seldom—argued with Emma, and on such rare occasions as he did, he never won. At least Emma never acknowledged that he had. She was that sort of a woman: a thing was right because she said it was right.

He never—or very seldom—argued with Emma.

The good upper - middle - class housewives of the town admired Emma Forrest. They admired her sterling qualities, her goodness of heart, her efficient management of her household, her success in having molded her twenty-two-year-old son, Andy, into a stalwart masculine edition of herself. And they wondered why a thoughtless Providence had inflicted upon her such a daughter as Kay. "She's wild, that's what she is—in spite of everything her mother has tried to do for her." They said, "She'll come to no good end, mark my words." They said, "It's a pity Kay couldn't have turned out to be a fine girl. Emma didn't deserve to have that sort of daughter."

By that, Beverly did not mean to infer that Kay Forrest was immoral, although there were some few who, without particular conviction, hinted that they wouldn't be so terribly surprised to learn that she was.

This morning the family had finished breakfast. They were waiting, Mrs. Forrest and Andy rather grim and pious. Andrew Forrest who, by original selection and biological chance, had become nominal head of the household, uncertain and ill at ease. He knew that Kay was to be greeted with a barrage of criticism, and inasmuch as there existed between him and his nineteen-year-old daughter a bond of friendship and sympathy and understanding which was beyond the comprehension of the virtuous Emma.

They saw Kay step out of Barney Hamilton's little car. They saw her move up the walk; cross the veranda. They saw her come through the front door and approach the dining-room. Mrs. Forrest greeted her with a remark which was not unobvious.

Mrs. Forrest said, "We've been waiting for you, Katherine."

Kay caught an almost imperceptible warning flicker of her father's right eyelid. Therefore she answered meekly, "Yes, ma'am."

Mrs. Forrest found it necessary to make her point more impressively. "Andy hasn't gone to work yet."

Kay glanced without particular enthusiasm at the sturdy figure of her brother. He was clad in the habiliments of a garage mechanic. But she merely said, "I see he hasn't."

"Sit down, my dear. We wish to talk to you." Emma's requests were always unmistakably commands.

Kay seated herself, but not comfortably. She was grateful for the presence of her father . . . however unable he was to render assistance in this domestic crisis.

"Do you realize," inquired Mrs. Forrest, "that this is supposed to be your home?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"Then why don't you stay here instead of gallivanting all over the country all the time?"

"I wasn't gallivanting, Mother. I've been staying with the Hamiltons."

"And driving out every night with that worthless Barney Hamilton."

She said, "Barney's all right."

"He doesn't work," interjected Andy virtuously. "Just plays around. I've got no use for these fellows that think they're so elegant."

Mrs. Forrest was not to be diverted. "Beverly is talking about you, Katherine."

"That's nothing new."

"And it's not new that you're not ashamed of it."

"Why should I be? I've never done anything wrong."

"You went to one of those terrible orgies at the hotel, didn't you?"

Kay was battling for self-control. "I don't see anything wrong with that, Mother. They're just dances . . ."

"Riff-raff! Tourists! No decent girl would be seen there."

"Now, Mother . . ." It was Andrew speaking. Mrs. Forrest flashed her husband a hostile glance. She said, "You keep out of this, Andrew Forrest. I'm Katherine's mother, and God knows I get no help from you in trying to raise her as a lady."

"I was only going to say . . ."

Kay shrugged wearily. "Keep out of it, Dad."

"You see!" Mrs. Forrest's voice crescendoed triumphantly. "There's your own daughter giving you orders. Telling you not to interfere in her upbringing . . . as though you would, anyway."

Kay leaned forward. She said, "Suppose you stick to me, Mother."

"Such impertinence! Andrew, are you going to let your daughter speak to her own mother in that fashion? I declare I don't know what I've ever done that God should have given me such a child." She was whipping herself into a fury of virtuous anger. "And you listen to me, Miss—I'm not going to stand it any longer. It's time I set my foot down. From now on, you're going to do as I say."

Andy spoke again. "You stay away from Kirk Reynolds, Sis."

Kay was startled. "And if I don't?"

"Then I'll have to take matters in my own hands."

She smiled slightly. "Better not, Andy. I don't think you could scare Kirk very easily."

Chilton WPA Workers To Receive Pay Hike

Chilton County WPA project workers will receive a substantial increase in monthly wages beginning September 1st according to an announcement this week by Colonel W. G. Henderson, administrator for Alabama of the Works Projects Administration.

This increase in the schedule of monthly security wages for WPA project workers is in accordance with the requirements of the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1939 and the intent of Congress as expressed in debate, it was explained in a statement from Colonel F. C. Harrington, Work Projects Commissiiner of Washington. The order provides for three-wage regions by geographical areas and within these wage regions provides for five classifications of workers; namely, professional and techinical, skilled, intermediate, unskilled "A" and unskilled "B". Each of the wage regions is broken down by counties into four population classifications. These provide differentials in wages for counties, first with no town of over 5,000 pipulation, second, with the largest town between 5,000 and 25,000, third between 25,000 and 100,000, and fourth, those in which the largest city has 100,000 or more population. This will make a total of only [illegible] different wage schedules as against the present number of more than 4,000.

Unskilled WPA rural wages in Region 3, which comprises the southern states, will jump from an average of $26 to $35 a month. Unskilled wages in this region in cities of 100,000 or over will be $50.70 a month as against a present schedule of $40.

Chilton County where no town or city has more than 5,000 population, according to the 1930 census, "unskilled B" workers will receive $31.20 per month, "unskilled A" workers will receive $35.10 per month, intermediates $42.90 per month, and skilled workers $54.60. These figures are all based on 130 hours of work per month.

However, in announcing this new schedule of monthly security wages for WPA workers in Alabama, Colonel Henderson emphatically reminded workers that they are expected to accept private employment if it is offered them, provided they are offered the wage prevailing in the community for that class of work. Failure to accept such employment means immediate dismissal from WPA rolls, he stated, and a close check will be made on all reports of WPA workers refusing to accept private employment.

GRADE A REQUIREMENTS FOR MILK OUTLINED BY HEALTH D.

In keeping with the campaign of the local County Health Department to promote a greater demand for Grade A raw milk in the city, Dr. S. D. Sturkie, County Health Officer, today listed the specifications for Grade A milk and pointed to the health protection in the supervision of milk.

The following are the specifications which are included in the Standard Milk Ordinance adopted by many towns both large and small in Alabama: (1). Average bacterial count must be under 50,000 per CC. (2). Average temperature of milk on truck must be under 50 degrees F. (3). Each cow in herd must be tuberculin tested once a year. (4). Dairy barn must have satisfactory lighting and ventilation. (5). Floor of dairy barn must be of concrete or other impevious and easily cleaned material. (6). Walls and ceiling of dairy barn must be whitewashed at least once a year. (7). Cow yard must be graded and manure properly disposed. (8). Milk house must be well built, lighted, ventilated and doors and windows screened. (9). Dairy farm must have a sanitary toilet and protected water supply. (10). Utensils must be of non-absorbent material and after being used must be cleaned and treated with steam. (11). Udders and teats of cows must be clean and washed with a germ-destroying agent. (12). Flanks, bellies and tails of cows must be free from visible dirt. (13). Milkers's hands must be clean, rinsed in a germ-destroying solution and dried before milking. (14). Milkers' clothes must be clean and washable. (15). Milk stools must be kept clean. (16). Milk must be cooled to 50 degrees F. immediately after milking and kept below that temperature until delivered. (17). All persons connected with dairy must be free from communicable diseases.

All of these regulations are enforced at the local Grade A dairy. Any failure of the local dairy to meet any of these requirements will result in lowering of the Grade of the milk. Dr. Sturkie emphasized the need of another small Grade A dairy in Clanton and urged local milk consumers to use their influence in bringing this about.

INCREASE IN ENROLLMENT AT SCHOOLS

SCHOOL BELLS RING IN CITY; ENROLLMENT AT HIGH SCHOOL RECORD-BREAKER

With the beginning of the 1939-40 term of school getting underway Monday morning of this week, the ringing school bells summoned near eight hundred boys and girls of Clanton to their studies after the summer holidays. Other high schools over the County, along with the Junior Department schools, began the session with the assurance that there will be full terms since more money has been appropriated by the State for school purposes.

Prof. Patterson Hicks, principal of the Chilton County High School stated Tuesday evening that up through that day their enrollment had reached 393 with this number increasing to 400 expected before the week is out. This is an increase over last year's enrollment, and is a record enrollment for the first week of this school. Last year the enrollment averaged 375 fo rthe first month. Prof. Hicks stated there were 89 students enrolled in the Junior One Class, the largest enrollment this class has ever had.

Prof. U. H. Abrams, principal of the Clanton Grammar School, gave out the information that the enrollment at this school was 398 through Tuesday and this number is expected to go over the 400 mark before the week was up. Mr. Abrams stated that he believes he has one of the most competent corps of teachers he has ever had the privilege of working with, and expressed an optimistic view for the coming term.

Information coming from the other schools opening their doors Monday was that large enrollments were seen and the outlook for a successful term was bright.

The remaining schools over the county are scheduled to get underway the early part of next month.

Two Men Arrested For Jemison Store Burglary

Two men were placed in the county jail here early this week charged with the burglary of the Cobb Brothers' Store of Jemison.

The two men, James L. Blackmon and Ivy Matthews, were charged with burglary and grand larceny, according to Sheriff W. G. Culp, and are being held in the jail at this time.

The Sheriff stated that the Messrs. Cobb reported that their store had been broken into Monday night of last week and several articles of merchandise had been taken, including a small amount of money. Entrance to the store was gained by removing a portion of the floor.

"A close watch was kept for evidence that might determine who the guilty parties might be. An old bucket was discovered in a swamp near Jemison containing some of the merchandise and money from the store. A close watch was placed on the bucket and its contents, and before many hours had passed one of the men was captured as he came to get the loot. The remaining suspect was arrested shortly thereafter.

J. N. BURKHALTER PASSED AWAY LAST SUNDAY A.M.

Joseph Newton Burkhalter, age 67, passed away at his home in the Enterprise community, Verbena Route 1, last Sunday morning. Funeral services were held from the Floyd Church Monday afternoon at 3:00 o'clock with the Rev. J. M. Dopson in charge. Interment was in the adjoining cemetery with J. Mell Martin & Sons in charge.

Mr. Burkhalter is survived by his widow; two sons, D. S. of Jemison and D. L. of Verbena Route 1, also several brothers and sisters.

Pallbearers were Henry Counts, O. B. Nelson, L. E. Riley, O. Z. Kelley, J.R. Burkhalter, and Marshall Burkhalter.

CHANGE IN TIME AT LOCAL WADESONIAN THEATRES GIVEN

Manager Charles Wade of the Wadesonian Theatres announced this week that a change in the time at the two Clanton theatres will go into effect today. Heretofore the theatres have been showing at 7:15 each evening during the summer. Mr. Wade announced that this time has been changed to 7:00 o'clock with the theatres opening their doors at 6:30.

The theatre goers in this section are asked to keep this in mind. This change is being made to suit the convenience of the patrons due to the steadily lengthening nights and shortening days.

Mrs. G. P. Parks of Tuscaloosa and daughters, Mary Bland and Hazel, and Mrs. S. M. Scharbrought of Reform spent the week end with their sister, Mrs. J. L. Daniel.

President Issues Proclamations

Richard L. Turner, writing for the Associated Press in the daily newspapers of Wednesday morning, says:

"With an historic stream of proclamations and significant but informal statements, President Roosevelt told the world of America's neurality today, clamped down the neutrality act's tight embargo on arms shipments to the belligerents and disclosed that:

"Gaps in the national defense are soon to be filled by increasing the personnel of the Navy, now at only 85 per cent of peace time strength, and augumenting the defense garrison at the Panama Canal.

"A flotilla of World War destroyers will be reconditioned to take up the dramatic task of patrolling American territorial waters, presumably to see that they do not become the scene of violations of neutral rights by belligerent warships.

"Measures will be taken to combat propaganda aimed at the American form of government, espousing communism, dictatorship and the like, and to prevent the United States from becoming a center for the gathering of information useful to the belligerents.

"In all, there were three proclamations, the first, in accordance with international law, notifying the interested nations that America would be officially neutral, the second invoking the arms ban of the neutrality law, and the third dealing with protective measures at the Panama Canal. . . ."

THE WAR TO DATE

FRIDAY—Germany marched into and took possession of the Free City of Danzig, and continued on into the Polish Corridor.

SATURDAY—England and France issued ultmatums to Germany to withdraw its troops from Poland, which were ignored.

SUNDAY—England declared a "state of war existing" between Great Britain and Germany; France declared war on Germany. Within a few hours after these declarations, the British liner Athenia was reported sunk by a torpedo from a German submarine off the coast of Scotland. 44 reported killed and missing.

MONDAY—German troops pushed farther into Poland. French troops began mobilizing on the Germany border; British airplanes dropped six million propaganda leaflets over Germany; German airplanes flew over France, reconoitering, Monday night.

TUESDAY—Warsaw, capital of Poland, evacuates; Government offices moved to the southern part of Poland. Both German and British ships reported to have been sunk by submarines and airplanes in the North Sea and off the coast of Scotland.

WEDNESDAY—Unconfirmed reports said Marshal Edward Smigly-Rydz, head of the Polish army, had offered his resignation to President Ignace Moscicki.

APPROVAL OF LOCAL BILLS BY GOVERNOR

SIGNS BILL CREATING INFERIOR COURT, AND REPEALING COUNTY AGENT ACT

Governor Frank M. Dixon Monday signed two of the Chilton County local bills which have passed through the Alabama Legislature.

The two bills made official by the Governor's signature, were: Repeal of an act requiring the Commissioners Court of Chilton County to appropriate a fixed amount for the maintenance of the office of the County Agent, and the other, a bill creating the office of Judge of an Inferior Court in Chilton County.

The Inferior Court bill, as signed by the Governor, requires the Probate Judge of this county to set the date of an election within forty-five days after the election is called, and the election must be called within fifteen days after the signing of the bill by the Governor.

Another local bill for Chilton County has not yet passed through the mills of the Legislature. This bill makes the office of County Solicitor elective by the people instead of appointive by the Circuit Judge.

At the time of this writing no statement was forthcoming from the office of Judge Smith as to when the election will be held but this will probably be attended to within the next few days.

MISS McKEE CHILTON'S NEW ATTENDANCE SUPERVISOR

Miss Lillian McKee, who comes to this county from Choctaw County, has assumed the duties of Attendance Supervisor in Chilton County schools.

Miss McKee replaces Mr. J. T. Searcy, who is again teaching in the Chilton County High School.

Durwood Robinson has been visiting home folks here this week.

Two Alabamians On Neutrality

Senator Bankhead and former Govelnor Graves took the opportunty at Labor Day exercises in Birmingham to urge the people of this state to observe strict neutrality in the European conflict. The war being waged in Europe is not our war; it was not started by Americans; we have nothing to gain from it.

It is our solemn duty, therefore, as the two Alabama political leaders said, to keep this country free and at peace despite the tyrannies and wars of other continents.—Montgomery Advertiser.

Officers Capture Stills Last Monday

Members of the Sheriff's force made a raid on the illicit whiskey manufacturers in the northwest section of the county last Monday, and captured four copper stills, three of which were in operation at the time of the raid.

A statement from the office of the Sheriff was that the four stills were destroyed along with 115 gallons of whiskey. Two arrests were made, the charges being conspiracy in the operation of the stills. The two arrested were Fred Broadhead and Benjamin Pearson Hughes. The stills were located about three miles south of South Calera, not far from the county line.

BREEDLOVE-MAYTON WEDDING EVENT OF LAST THURSDAY

A wedding of interest which took place recently was that of Miss Helen Mayton of Linden and Opelika, to C. L. Breedlove, Assistant County Agent of this County.

Opelika Baptist Church last Thursday

The ceremony was performed at Opelika last Thursday evening at six o'clock, with Dr. Bowen, pastor of the Opelika Baptist Church, reading the marriage vows.

Miss Mayton is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Mayton of Linden, Alabama. Mr. Breedlove is Chilton's popular assistant county agent. They will make their home in Clanton, occupying the Fox house.

FARMERS UNION TO HAVE ALL-DAY RALLY SEPT. 9TH

The Chilton County Farmers Union will have an all day rally Saturday, September 9, at Mt. Pleasant Scrool building.

The pubic is being extended a cordial invitation to attend. Mr. C. E. Stapp, Mr. Earl Crowder and Mr. Noel Beddow will speak to the gathering in the afternoon. "If you like to hear good speaking then be with us that day," says Gresham Smith, county secretary of the Union.

CORRECTION IN ARTICLE ABOUT MR. WADE

In the report last week of the death and burial of Mr. J. Q. Wade of Clanton, some minor errors occurred, which this paper hastens to correct. Mr. Wade's name was reported as John Quincey; this should have been John Quitman. Among the survivors should have been included the name of the only grandchild, little Margaret Wade of Prattville, only child of Jack Wade, who died some two years ago.

KIWANIANS TO HAVE SCHOOL PROGRAM THURSDAY NIGHT

"A Well Equipped High School For Clanton And Chilton County," will be the theme of a program to be given at the regular Thursday evening gathering of the Clanton Kiwanis Club at the Thomason Hotel tonight, as announcby the Program Committee of the Club early this week.

Kiwanian C. E. Stapp will be in charge of the program, which promises to be rather interesting due to the fact that today was the date set for letting the contract for the construction of the new modern Chilton County High School to replace the one destroyed by fire last winter. Members of the Chilton County Board of Education and E. B. VanKeuren, architect of Birmingham, will be invited guests of the club.

THORSBY CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH NAMES PASTOR

The United Protestant Church (Congregational) of Thorsby has accepted the resignation of Rev. Hubert A. Bahr, who plans to continue his seminary work at Vanderbilt University, in Nashville, Tennessee.

Rev. John A. Gonzales, D.D., the retired Superintendent of Congregational-Christian Churches of Kansas, a man of wide experience, has accepted the call to serve as pastor of this church. Rev. Gonzales will begin his services on October 1.

MARE AND COLT SHOW WILL BE FAIR FEATURE

SHOWING OF BEEF CATTLE ALSO TO TAKE PROMINENT PLACE ON CARD DURING WEEK

At a meeting of the Chilton County Fair Association and interested citizens last Monday night, a thorough discussion was held about every department of this year's Fair, which promises to be the most interesting, entertaining and educational the county has ever seen.

Dr. W. L. Parrish stated at the meeting that he was vitally interested in seeing the Mare and Colt Show which was a big attraction at last years' fair, bigger and better this year. Dr. Parrish has chage of the livestock exhibits. He stated that there were more mares and colts in Chilton County at the present time than there has ever been before. Those wishing to enter their stock in this division are asked to contact Dr. Parrish in the near future. Numerous prizes are being awarded to winners in this department, whilh not only includes mares and colts but other types of horses, mules, etc.

Also to rate as a big feature of the livestock exhibits is the beef type of cattle. This will be under the direction of C. L. Breedlove, assistant county agent. The raising of beef stock is growing considerably in Chilton County, and the Fair will be a means of creating more interest in this industry, especially among the 4-H Club boys of the county.

An addition to the present stock shed is to be made this year to house the pig exhibit, which will also be an

Concord To Observe 40th Anniversary

Prof. John M. Parrish, of the Concord community stated this week that a big anniversary celebration is being planned for the Concord Church on Sunday, September 24, commemorating the fortieth anniversary of this Church, which is located two miles east of Clanton.

It was forty years ago that seven families in that community banded together and constituted the Concord Church, which has in the years following, been one of the strongest churches in the county.

Mr. Parrish stated that a program is being arranged for the day, and that all members, former members and friends of the Church are cordially invited to be present on that day. The program will be published in the News at a later date. Watch for it.

BIDS ON NEW SCHOOL TO BE OPENED BY BOARD TODAY

The office of the Superintendent of Education announced recently that bids on the construction of the new Chilton County High School will be opened and the contract for same would be awarded today, September 7.

The date set for the opening of these bids was exended some time ago due to the fact that more time would be available for the contractors to file their bids. Work on the new structure is expected to get underway as soon as possible.

Let's Not Forget The Needy School Child

The school attendance supervisor reports that there are a great many school children who will not be able to get into school this year without some help with clothes and books and even lunches in some cases.

The need seems to be greater this year, due to the fact that many of the farmers had their crops damaged by the flood and then the WPA laid off many during the past few weeks. Every effort is being made to see that every child in the county has a chance to get into school as early as possible.

The school attendance supervisor and teachers need the help and cooperation of the people in helping to get and keep these children in school. Clothes are needed right now to get many of them started to school even the first day.

If you have any clothes which you would like to give for the needy school children, will you please leave them with the attendance supervisor at the office of the Superintendent of Education, or if you will call her at the office, she will be glad to call and get them at your home.

President Roosevelt Radios Message Of Hope And Courage To All Americans

Following is the radio address of President Roosevelt to the American people Sunday night:

Tonight my single duty is to speak to the whole of America.

Until 4:30 this morning I had hoped against hope that some miracle would prevent a devastating war in Europe and bring to an end the invasion of Poland by Germany.

For four long years a succession of actual wars and constant crises have shaken the entire world and have threatened in each case to bring on the gigantic conflict which is today unhappily a fact.

It is right that I should recall to your minds the consistent and at times successful effort of your government in these crises to throw the full weight of the United States into the cause of peace. In spite of spreading wars I think that we have every right and every reason to maintain as a national policy the fundamental moralities, the teachings of religion and the continuation of efforts to restore peace—for some day, though the time may be distant, we can be of even greater help to a crippled humanity.

It is right, too, to point out that the unfortunate events of these recent years have been based on the use of force or the threat of force. And it seems to me clear, even at the outbreak of this great war, that the influence of America should be consistent in seeking for humanity a final peace which will eliminate, as far as it is possible to do so, the continued use of force between nations.

It is, of course, impossible to predict the future. I have my constant stream of information from American representatives and other sources throughout the world. You, the people of this country, are receiving news through your radios and your newspapers at every hour of the day.

You are, I believe, the most enlightened and the best informed people in all the world at this moment. You are subjected to no censorshp of news, and I want to add that your government has no information which it has any thought of witholding from you.

At the same time, as I told my press conference on Friday, it is of the highest importance that the press and the radio use the utmost caution to discriminate between actual verified fact on the one hand, and mere rumor on the other.

I can add to that by saying that I hope the people of this country will also discriminate most carefully between news and rumor. Do not believe of necessity everything you hear or read. Check up on it first.

You must master at the outset a simple but unalterable fact in modern foreign relations. When peace has been broken anywhere, peace of all countries everywhere is in danger.

It is easy for you and me to shrug our shoulders and say that conflicts taking place thousands of miles from the continental United States, and, indeed, the whole American hemisphere, do not seriously affect the Americas—and that all the United States has to do is to ignore them and go about our own business. Passionately though we may desire detachment, we are forced to realize that every word that comes through the air, every ship that sails the sea, every battle that is fought does affect the American future.

Let no man or woman thoughtlessly or falsely talk of America sending its armies to European fields. At this moment there is being prepared a proclamation of American neutrality. This would have been done even if there had been no neutrality statute on the books, for this proclamation is in accordance with international law and with American policy.

This will be followed by a proclamation required by the existing neutrality act. I trust that in the days to come our neutrality can be made a true neutrality.

It is of the utmost importance that the people of this country, with the best information in the world, think things through. The most dangerous enemies of American peace are those who, without well-rounded information on the whole broad subject of the past, the present and the future, undertake to speak with authority, to talk in terms of glittering generalities, to give to the nation assurances or prophecies which are of little present or future value.

I myself cannot and do not prophesy the course of events abroad—and the reason is that because I have of necessity such a complete picture of what is going on in every part of the world, I do not dare to do so. And the other reason is that I think it is honest for me to be honest with the people of the United States.

I cannot prophesy the immediate economic effect of this new war on our nation but I do say that no American has the moral right to profiteer at the expense either of his fellow citizens or of the men, women and children who are living and dying in the midst of war in Europe.

Some things we do know. Most of us in the United States believe in spiritual values. Most of us, regardless of what church we belong to, believe in the spirit of the New Testament—a great teaching which opposes itself to the use of force, of armed force, of marching armies and falling bombs. The overwhelming masses of our people seek peace—peace at home, and the kind of peace in other lands which will not jeopardize peace at home.

We have certain ideas and ideals of national safety and we must act to preserve that safety today and to preserve the safety of our children in future years.

That safety is and will be bound up with the safety of the Western Hemisphere and of the seas adjacent thereto. We seek to keep war from our firesides by keeping war from coming to the Americas. For that we have historic precedent that goes back to the days of the administration of President George Washington. It is serious enough and tragic enough to every American family in every state in the union to live in a world that is torn by wars on other continents. Today they affect every American home. It is our national duty to use every effort to keep them out of the Americas.

And at this time let me make the simple plea that partisanship and selfishness be adjourned; and that national unity be the thought that underlies all others.

This nation will remain a neutral nation, but I cannot ask that every American remain neutral in thought as well. Even a neutral has a right to take account of facts. Even a neutral cannot be asked to close his mind or his conscience.

I have said not once but many times that I have seen war and that I hate war. And I give you assurances that every effort of your government will be directed toward that end.

As long as it remains within my power to prevent, there will be no blackout of peace in the United States.

Something For Us To Remember

The estimated cost of the last World War, says De Witt McKenzie, Associated Press Foreign Affairs Writer, according to the Carnegie Endowment for international peace, was One Hundred and Eighty-Six Billion Dollars, the indirect cost almost as much more.

The number of known dead was placed at 9,998,771, and the presumed dead at 2,991,800—making a total of 12,990,571.

Add to this the $14,473,478,027 still owed to us by these European countries, and which will likely never be paid, although they have been able to spend as great a sum or more building more war machines; then, if you still think we, as a nation, should get entangled in this newly hell-made cauldron—your place is in the psychiatric ward of the nearest hospital.

o-o-o

The way to keep out of mischief is not to get into mischief. And that European war is plenty mischief.

"Stocks Follow Cautious Trail"—Headline. Keeping away from Alabama's highways, we suppose.

o-o-o

So long as we Americans are willing to sell corn and wheat at 50c to 75c per bushel and buy it back in pasteboard cartons at $10.00 a bushel, there will be no danger of any change in our capitalistic government.

When the "craze for speed" grips the driver behind the wheel, all sense of the rights of, or responsibility to others vanishes.

The Tuscaloosa News has an editorial under the title, "Our Airport Grows Up." Our airport grew up, too, in a different way, however—in healthy weeds.—Decatur Daily.

Ours did, too, until the flood drowned 'em.—Selma Times-Journal.

Clanton is proud of its airport, Gragg Field. Shrubs, flowers and bulbs are now being set to further beautify it.

MORAL ECHOES

D. W. Haskew

There are two habits that I would like to recommend about which you have thought little. The first one is to always make it a habit to walk on the sunny side of the street. If you find yourself trying to get over to the shady side, there is something wrong on the inside of you. The next habit that you should always form is to wash your face up and not down. When you bend your body over and place your face above the basin, then do your washing by pushing the hands up over your face and not down. It will do your face a lot of good to iron out the sagging corners of your mouth. By doing this you create dimples, rather than furrows on your face. Lift the corners of your mouth and smile. Everything we do influences our personality. It pays to walk in the sunshine and it pays to smile.

While climbing one of the mountain peaks in North Carolina I looked back at my little boy of five years of age and I said: "Laurence, are you tired?" He looked up at me and replied: "Daddy, I am not tired but my feet seem to be mighty heavy." The "I am" part of my body was reaching up and anxious to climb on. He was carrying legs and feet that were heavy, but his spirit wanted to climb higher. Up the trail was adventure for the lad. As long as our spirits do not become tired we can climb higher, but when the body andthe soul become tired then we lose courage to go up the way of adventure. Of course our bodies are growing tired as we climb, but we must be careful to keep our spirits fresh and hopeful.

Habits are wonderful things. If we had to stop and think out what to do every time we have to shift the gear of our car in driving, we would not make good drivers. Suppose that you had to think out what you were expected to do with the knife and fork at your plate every time you ate, your table manners would be slow and bad. Habits encrust a personality like moss on a stone, until eventually you can't see the stone for the moss. We form habits and whether they be good or bad, they soon cover over our personalities so that we do not see the man for the habits that surround him. Especially is this true when habits are all bad. We see people walking the street and we say of them: "There goes a bundle of bad habits."

Two years ago there was a great flood in the Mississippi Valley. While the flood was at its height the newspapers carried two items of interest. One item said that twenty-eight million tons of water had fallen on the hills along the Ohio River in a week. The other said that sand boils were appearing along the business streets of New Orleans. Was there any connection between the tons of water falling in Ohio and the sand boils in New Orleans? Certainly. They were related as cause and effect. What happened in the Ohio hills reported itself in New Orleans. Life is an intricate complex. Lead men to know God and the flowers of mercy and joy will bloom on the pathway of all.

I heard a fat-jawed beer imbiber and saloon supporter, one who lugged about an enlarged waistband, as he stood on the street corner and boasted of the increased revenue coming from the liquor store. He looked across the street and saw a building going up and with gusto he said: "See what the whiskey store is doing for our City." I looked and saw the brick building two stories high, and there was something in me that said, "May God have mercy on this little City." Hear me folks, I may not live to see it and you may not live to see it, but any building that goes up from the revenue obtained from blood money, will carry the curse of God upon it. I have the Bible for what I say and as sure as there is a God in the universe, so sure will His Word come to pass. The sad part about all this whiskey business is that the innocent must suffer when the wicked reap their sowing.

SYNOPSIS

Beautiful, young Kay Forrest has been employed by Christine Maynard, photographer, to pose for a series of pictures, the background of which will be exquisite Cathedral Gardens, famous Southern resort. Unknown to them, one Jeff Butler, mean, unscrupulous "swamp angel," has led a friend to spy on the two women. Kay, of necessity, is scantily clad while posing for the camera studies. Kay frequently stays with Mrs. Ruth Hamilton, her son Barney, of whom Kay is very fond, and her daughter Margaret. Mrs. Hamilton, a remarkable woman, conceived the idea of the Gardens following the death of her husband. One night, after a local dance, Kirk Reynolds, a ne'er-do-well gambler of Beverly, a resort town, and Kay go for a ride. Kirk's car collides with that of Harvey Jackson, and during the ensuing argument Kirk whips out a gun and kills the young, popular engineer. Kay is completely stunned by the tragedy. Kirk threatens to drag her into the thing if she tells even her father. Terror-stricken, she agrees to remain silent. However, the next time she goes out with Barney, he realizes something is wrong. She tries to reassure him, but tells him nothing. Barney is troubled by Kay's predicament, and determines to find out how to put an end to it. Mrs. Emma Forrest, Kay's mother, looks upon herself as being completely righteous. She is firm, positive and demanding. Her father is exactly the opposite, kindly and unassuming.

Mrs. Forrest had risen. She was a purposeful and dominant lady, overflowing with righteous indignation.

"Will you promise me never to talk to Kirk Reynolds again?"

Kay met her mother's eyes squarely. "No, ma'am."

"Why not?"

"Because I don't make promises that I can't keep."

"Can't! Can't! You hear that, Andrew?"

"Now, Mother—aren't you a trifle hard on Kay?"

"No! Certainly not! I'm only doing my duty as a mother . . ."

From outside came the insistent honking of an automobile-horn. Four pairs of eyes quested through the window toward the curb. Mrs. Forrest said, "Of all the nerve!" and Andy gasped, "It's Kirk Reynolds."

Kay rose. Her face was white. She walked from the room and onto the porch. Her voice came back to them—clearly. She called, "I'll be with you in a minute, Kirk."

She walked up to her room; not hearing—or not noticing—her mother's statement that she positively was not going riding with that ruffian. She did hear, faintly, her mother's protests that this was more than any good woman should be called upon to stand. She heard her mother stating to husband and son that the neighbors would talk, that this was an unbearable disgrace—her own daughter riding around in bright, broad daylight with a professional gambler. She called upon Andrew Forrest to do something about it, and Mr. Forrest—glad enough to escape—plodded up the stairs after Kay.

Andrew Forrest was a meek person, albeit a gentle and kindly one. By profession he was a lawyer: a keen student who was consulted on intricate matters by his less-learned contemporaries. His practice was arduous and not very remunerative. He was short and slight and on the verge of baldness. His eyes were gentle and not too strong. He was a student and a philosopher; a man of scrupulous integrity—both of thought and deed.

He came now into his daughter's room and touched her shoulder affectionately. He said, "Must you, Kay?"

She nodded. "Yes, Dad."

"I'm sorry. Your mother isn't entirely wrong, you know. Kirk is bad medicine."

"Yes, Dad."

"And you still feel . . . ?"

"Just this once. I'd rather not, but I can't help it."

His eyes clouded. "Something serious?"

"Yes . . ."

"And you can't tell me?"

"I wish I could."

He smiled bravely. "Don't forget we're buddies, Kay."

She kissed him, hard, on the lips. "You know how much I love you, don't you, Dad?"

"I know." He patted her shoulder gently. "Watch yourself, Kay. And don't forget you're mighty young."

She walked downstairs, swiftly, purposefully. Mrs. Forrest made a last, desperate stand. "I order you not to go out with that man."

Kay's glance was unyielding. "I'm sorry, Mother."

She passed through the front door, climbed into the little coupe beside Kirk Reynolds and rolled west on Chicora Avenue. Her lips were tight set.

Kay said, "You sent for me, Kirk. What's wrong?" And he answered, "Plenty."

They rode in silence, Kay's eyes cloudy with trouble; Kirk's face inscrutable. The sapphire sky was brilliantly clear, the April sun bright and warm, yet Kay shivered.

A car approached them, coming from Chicora. The driver saw Kay as they passed, and her face flushed. It was a brief passing, a quick recognition . . . yet Kay knew, without looking around, that the driver of the other car had been startled—and that he had turned to look after her. She said, somewhat bitterly, "It would be that way."

Kirk said, in a flat voice, "Who was it?"

"Barney Hamilton."

"The lad whose mother owns the Gardens?"

"Yes."

They reached the intersection of the concrete Federal highway and Kirk swung to the right. His voice was toneless, almost disinterested.

"What's the setup there, Kay?"

"Where?"

"Between you and that Hamilton guy?"

"What difference does it make?"

"None. I just asked."

His eyes did not leave the broad ribbon of road which unwound under their wheels.

Kay said, "I like him—a lot."

"So I imagined."

"What made you think so?"

"Your expression when we passed him." That faint, mocking smile passed briefly across Kirk's lips. "Has he gone for you?"

"I don't know."

"Okay. But he has."

Kay's body felt uncomfortably warm. "I'd rather not talk about Barney—"

"—To me, you mean?"

"Yes." Her own voice had become edged. "And I might as well tell you something else, Kirk. This is my last ride with you."

"That so?"

"Yes. People are talking . . ." His voice was sharp. "Who?"

"Everybody. My family and—"

"What are they saying?"

"That you're not the sort of person a nice girl should be going with."

He laughed mirthlessly. "I'm not." Then, after a brief pause, "Are they saying anything else?"

"I don't know."

"I mean about the last time we were out together?"

She shrank away from him. "Please, Kirk . . ."

"They will," he remarked acidly, "sooner or later."

She said, "I know it. That's why I'm not going out with you any more."

He didn't answer that. His foot depressed the accelerator ever so slightly and the speedometer moved ahead to forty-five. The road was broad and smooth, cars buzzed by, farm cars and trucks and several big sedans headed toward Beverly and Cathedral Gardens. Kirk said dryly, "Your boy friend's mother has done quite a job."

"Please, Kirk . . ."

"She has, really. The town was dead until she came into the picture."

"I'd rather not . . . Why did you send for me?"

"Reasons."

"Nothing wrong, is there?"

"Yes."

"You mean . . . ?"

"You'll find out."

She pressed her lips together. "Please take me back."

"Not now."

"But it's getting late."

"Not noon yet."

"Where are you taking me?"

"Springdale."

"To Springdale? But Kirk—I can't!"

"Yes, you can. You can do exactly what I say."

She glanced at his face. It was like granite. Hard. Unconscionably hard and dangerous. She asked, "Why are you taking me there?"

There was no emotion in his voice. He made a flat statement. He said, "You and I are going to get married."

Kirk Reynolds drove on in silence. He might have said, "The weather is pleasant." He might have said, "We're going to Springdale for lunch." Instead, in just so casual a manner, he had stated that they were about to be married.

Kay's hazel eyes were wide and frightened. Unconscious of the gesture, she pressed one hand against her lips. She didn't even ask whether he was serious. Kirk was not addicted to making statements which he did not mean. But she did say, "I don't love you" and he answered, tersely, "That has nothing to do with it."

Words were a relief. "It's impossible," she declared and he smiled again; that mirthless, mocking smile. He said, "I don't think so."

Then she asked, "But why? Do you think that you care for me?"

"No."

"And yet . . . Oh, Kirk! You're joking, surely."

"Not exactly. Here's the license." He tossed it into her lap. It had been issued in Springdale, that prosperous agricultural county which adjoined Beauregard on the north. The names stared up at her: Kirk Reynolds, age 28; Katherine Forrest, age 19. "We'll be married by a magistrate or a preacher. It's your wedding. Take your choice."

The thing was too startling, too bewildering. She said, without conviction: "I won't do it!"

"Yes, you will."

"But why?"

"Because I say so."

"I can't!" she cried desperately. "It isn't possible. I—I'm in love with someone else."

He shrugged. "That makes no difference." He turned his cold eyes upon her. "Perhaps you've forgotten that night."

"No! I couldn't forget that."

LOCAL REPRESENTATIVES ATTEND FARM LOAN MEET

—o—

At the meeting of the National Farm Loan Association Board of Directors' representatives, secretary-treasurers and clerical assistants, which was held in New Oleans during Thursday and Friday of last week, the encouraging fact was brought forth that the Federal Land Bank and National farm loan associations. which make mortgage loans in the states of Alabama, Louisiana and Mississippi, are making fine progress and are in better condition than at any time for several years, according to C.C. Cofer, President of the Chilton County National Farm Loan Assocation, who attended the meeting in company with D. W. Waite, Secretary-Treasurer and Miss Dolly Belle Harris, Office Assistant.

"The report by Dr. Roy L. Thompson, President of the Federal Land Bank, of the condition of the system in these states, showed that delinquencies of Land Bank borrowers are fewer at the present time than they have been at any time during the past ten years," Mr. Cofer said. "The report also revealed that the Bank is opearting within its income and is in better financial condition today than it has been at any time since 1929."

A. S. Goss, Land Bank Commissioner, Washington, D. C., was the principal speaker at the two-day session, which was attended by the representative of half of the 262 associations operating in the three states. The other associations sent their representatives to the Bank in New Orleans for a similar conference on Monday and Tuesday. Commissioner Goss in a special interview stated that he has observed encouraging progress in diversifying agriculture in the cotton south.

"The ratio of progress in the South is very encouraging, but there is still a long way to go before difficulties which have been caused by the one-crop system are overcome," Mr. Goss stated. "In operation of the farm credit system, our experience has been that less financial difficulty is experienced in those sections where agriculture is diversified. On my visits to the South, I have always been impressed by the agricultural possibilities and the little advantage which is being taken of the opportunities for further development. For many, many years this section has suffered from the one-crop complex, and until there is greater diversification of crops it will continue to be a problem area."

Mr. Goss was also complimentary of the fine progress which has been made by the Land Bank and the national farm loan associations in coming out of the difficulties which were brought about by bad general conditions between 1930 and 193[illegible].

Howard R. Oden Writes Interesting Letter Regarding Fair And Its Worth To County

—o—

HOWARD ODEN

Former County Commissioner, Who Is In Charge of Agricultural Exhibits At The Chilton County Fair

Editor, Chilton County News:

Just a few words about Chilton County's fair to come off September 26-30.

As has been stated before, the Fair Association is more liberal with prizes this year than they have been in the past. We hope many of you are planning to compete for these prizes.

Our future depends upon the proper development of our Agricultural resources, which are Livestock, Poultry, Fruits, and all cultivated crops such as cotton, corn, hay and all vegetables. A great deal could be said about these and economical production as well as marketing but space will not permit. This one thing we know: we have a long way to go before we will have reached the point where all we produce will give us a profit. A well-planned Fair gives us an opportunity to study these things and usually results in our going back home determined to do a better job of it.

Different sections of Alabama are advertsing their possibilities, why not Chilton County advertise her agricultural possibilities by all becoming fair-minded and lending a helping hand. Even though we have had an abnormal year for growing crops, yet we can put on the best fair we have ever seen in Chilton County.

I have been placed in charge of agricultural exhibits, and all individuals, communities and schools desiring to make an exhibit, get in touch with me at once.

Yours for success,
H. R. ODEN.

IN MEMORY OF MOTHER AND DAD

—o—

We are lonely without mother since the Lord has taken her home.
But we'll try to be contented until our work on earth is done.

Then I hope we'll meet dear mother in that blessed home so fair, and it will be a glad reunion when we all get there.

Yes, dear mother and dear old Daddy is resting on that peaceful shore where there is no more sorrow and they will never part no more.

I have three sisters and four brothers. I hope we'll all have a home on high. there to meet dear mother and dear lad, and we'll never say good-bye.—Written by a Daughter, Mrs. Maudie Emfinger.

It Is Time Now For LANDSCAPE GARDENING

You will be pleasantly surprised at the low cost you can have your home and yards landscaped by an experienced Landscape Gardener. We use only first class shrubbery of the highest quality, grown right, dug right and planted right, at the lowest prices. We have over seventy different kinds of Evergreens, Flowering Shrubs, Shade Trees and Flowering Trees, as well as Pecan Trees, Grape Vines and Apple Trees, Dahlia Bulbs, Gladiolia Bulbs, Rose Bushes, Thrift Plants, Hydrangeas, Santolina, Rosemary, Verbena, Gypsophelia Bristol Fairy, Hardy Palms, Potted Plants of all kinds, Azaleas and Camellia Japonicas, etc.

Perhaps you have some shrubbery now, but do not like the way it is planted. If so, we can rearrange it for you and make it look twice as good, at very little expense. If you have a new house, or one without any shrubbery, let us landscape it for you now! Call or write NOW, for free estimates on your planting, whether it be large or small. No obligation to buy.

We want you to visit our nursery. We will certainly be glad to have you come and see our stock for yourself. You may find just the things you have been wanting.

We are State Inspected and Licensed. No nut grass, insects or diseases. Satisfaction guaranteed. We appreciate your business.

Christian Endeavor News

The Christian Endeavor proposes to have its annual overnight camp at the river on Friday of this week. All are looking forward to this thrilling event. Most of the old endeavorers will be here at that time and we shall have what we often term the 'old gang of C. E. workers" together again.

Sunday evening an impromptu program was presented. Ouida Wright and Martha Williams told of their experiences as Student Summer Service Workers. Leonard Bosworth gave an account of the Boy Scouts' trip into the Smoky Mountains, and Fred Blankenship told of his work in Shelby at the Shelby Church.

Thorsby Institute News

Thorsby Institute will open on Wednesday, September 13. Everyone is invited to attend the opening exercises at 10 o'clock. There will be a special program of talks and music.

Thorsby Institute has secured as music teacher in place of Miss Kathryn Foss, one of the school's own graduates who has done such excellent work for the past four years, Miss Alice Burr, a graduate of Oberlin College Conservatory, Oberlin, Ohio. This conservatory ranks very high. Miss Burr's parents were missionaries in India until her father's health was impaired. She was born there but returned to this country with them at the age of six. She secured her high school training in Cleveland, where she was a member of the National Honor Society of the Cleveland High School. She was a member of the A Capella Choir and Varsity Glee Club while in college, sang in colege operettas, active in Y. W.C.A., social chairman of her class for two years, also of her dormitory and was active in volley-ball, basketball and archery. Miss Burr has taught in the Junior Department of the conservatory and worked with conservatory freshment. She was a piano pupil of the director of the conservatory and it is said that he only takes the best pupils. Also she was in the Evening Conservatory concerts instead of morning and to be in the forum one must have excellent technical ability, as well as expression. She is particularly interested in younger children but perfectly capable of taking very advanced students also. Miss Burr is a young woman of pleasing personality and appearance. She is a niece of Mrs. Emily Harding, librarian at Thorsby Institute.

Miss Ethel Thompson, a graduate of the College of Education of Ohio State University, with the degree of Bachelor of Science, and who has almost completed work for her Master's Degree at Purdue University, Indiana, has accepted the position of Science teacher for the coming year at Thorsby Institute. Miss Thompson has had several courses in the various kinds of chemistry, biology, etc. She has had experience in teaching in West Florida and Indiana. She has also specialized in Home Economics. While in college she was interested in Y.W.C.A. work. The school is fortunate in being able to secure Miss Thompson. Mr. Sutlive who has been teaching the science for some time, will teach economics, civics and world history. He will have added duties as the new Registrar, taking the place of Mr. H. R. Maddox, now County Superntendent of Education.

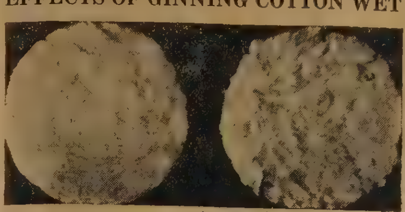
EFFECTS OF GINNING COTTON WET



The effect of lint samples from dry and wet cotton is clearly shown in the above picture, says J. W. Fant, County Agent. On the left is a sample of smoothly prepared cotton that was ginned in a dry condition. On the right is a sample of cotton that was ginned in a green damp condition and will obviously bring less money on the market than the smooth sample.

Farmers Warned About Ginning Wet Cotton

County Agent J. W. Fant this week warned that losses of one to five dollars or more would be sustained if cotton is picked and ginner wet, thereby further reducing the income from cotton this year. At the same time he called on ginners in the county to assist in every way possible in helping farmers get the best sample possible from their cotton.

"Green or wet cotton can be ginned but you get poorly prepared and poorly cleaned cotton and a poor lint turn out," he said. "It is the farmers' responsibility to deliver to the ginner to to turn out a good product."

Mr. Fant pointed out that the gin should be in good repair if the farmer's cotton was to be handled efficiently to preserve quality of cotton that means the annual income of many farmers.

Cotton buyers and mills penalize cotton that is of poor preparation which would reduce value by one or more grades, according to the county agent, who added that since there has been so much wet weather this season it was doubly important that farmers and ginners cooperate in getting the best lint possible from the cotton.

Mr. Fant also cited a report of Dr. D. G. Sturkie, associate agronomist of the Alabama Experiment Station, who recently conducted tests on seed obtained from the flooded section in South Central Alabama.

"Cottonseed are not yet seriously damaged but whether this condition will continue depends on the handling of cotton," Dr. Sturkie said. "The sample of seed collected at various points are satisfactory as far as oil and protein content are concerned. The price farmers receive for them will depend on how dry the cotton and seed are when ginned."

Garden Chats

By Edward Bialas

Winter will soon be upon us. However, it is really a pleasure to see how many people are getting their flower gardens prepared for Fall planting. It will soon be time to put in the bulbs which will give such delight next Spring and which we have probably been meaning to plant each year. Don't delay, get the ground ready now.

More Iris of the Dutch type is being planted this year. King Alfred Daffodils, although an old variety, are still popular. There is a newer one called Hector Trueb, which is larger and a better form and a deep yellow is good. Try to grow a few of this type and see if you won't be pleased. Plant only Holland grown tulips for best results. They will last for years, true to height and color. The writer has a patch of Darwin tulips which came direct from Holland over 12 years ago and they are still going strong. So from that experience my advice is to plant Darwins.

Acquilegia (Columbine) does very well here but do not plan to grow Delphiniums (perennial type) here as the sun will not permit them to do well. They are lovely and it will be a great disappointment to have big plans for them and see them not do so well. The annual type is satisfactory for our climate. They will give you big returns.

It is time to plant Poppy seed now. Plan to grow a few of the large double type as well as the Iceland Poppy.

Ranunculus, a bright showy flower, is usually grown from tubers, but actually is more satisfactory from seed. The latter are disease resistant. They are easily grown from the seed, sown from August to November, depending on when cool weather starts. They can be grown like winter flowering stocks and set out in the Fall. One packet of seed does the work of dozens of tubers.

It is time to plant your pansy seed now. Also try violas, which is like a small pansy but is a perennial.

Do not fail to mulch your Azaleas now, as we all know they want acid soil, use a little peat moss. Your Japonicas need it also and a little watering as well.

Are you planning a rose garden? If so, get busy on finishing your plans now. It will soon be time to put them in. You may be just planning to add some more to the collection you have now. At any rate it will soon be time.

News Of The Jr. G.A.

Picnics are lots of fun, according to the group who attended the Jr. G.A. picnic in Oak Park at Montgomery last Thursday. Adding greatly to our enjoyment was the beautiful day with its bright sunshine.

Play and work were combined in an interesting way for in the morning a mission study book was taught while the afternoon was devoted to fun and amusement.

Taking part on the program which concerned the organization of the W.M.U. in the year of 1888, were Mrs. J.W. Fant, who acted as chairman and Mrs. Oscar Davis, who played the part of Miss Annie W. Armstrong, first corrosponding secretay of the W.M.U. There were ten girls who represented the delegates from the ten Southern States, who voted to organize the W.M.U.

In the afternoon after a very enjoyable day we were homeward bound, weary but with the thoughts of another perfect day to place in our memory.

There were twenty-three girls including Mrs. J. W. Fant and Mrs. Oscar Davis present, so we are looking forward to seeing you again at Sallie Gowan's home for another meeting next Thursday afternoon.

DR. PARRISH EXPRESSES HIS APPRECIATION TO PEOPLE

As the dead line date set by the State is now well passed, I come thanking you folks who have cooperated so nicely in putting the program of "no rabies in Alabama" over so well in Chilton County.

Sorry we still have some that seem to think because his dog has dew claws he cannot develop rabies. Others have not because he forgot it and various reasons.

The Deputy Inspector is now in the field. He is calling on you because it is his duty to see that all dogs are vaccnated. The 50c day is over. He has no right to do it for less than a dollar. I have no right, no other veterinarian in the county or state, has a right to do it for less. If he or I myself do it for less, we are guilty. So please do not ask us to shoulder your responsibility. The law plainly says the 50c time was up at midnight August 31.

Let us not forget to come to the Fair. The money of the taxpayer—your money—help support it. Come and share in premiums to be awarded. Rub elbows with your fellowman. Learn what they are doing and thinking. Give the family an outing. They are due one and will appreciate it.

But let us not forget to thank our editors and staff for the way they have cooperated in making the Fair and rabies campaign a success.—W. L Parrish.

MISS JUNE COX BECOMES BRIDE OF HOWARD McKENZIE—

The marriage of Miss June Cox, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Cox, to Howard McKenzie, son of Mr. G. D. McKenzie, Parrish, Alabama, took place at five-thirty o'clock in the afternoon Sunday in the First Baptist Church. The Rev. Oscar Davis, pastor of the church, performed the nuptial rites using the ring ceremony in the presence of a large assembly of relatives and close friends. Nuptial music was presented by Mrs. Fred Dunlap, organist, and Miss Kathryn Foss, vocalist.

The church was decorated in green and white, with smilax, palms, and ferns banking the chance rail and the altar, with floor basket of white gladioli and tube roses in the foreground. White tapers burned in seven-branched candelabra on either side of the altar.

The bride, wearing a basque gown of white chiffon alternating with wide bands of lace, entered with her father who gave her in marriage. Her three-quarter length veil was of bridal illusion, falling in a transparent cascade from orange blossoms in her hair. She carried a bouquet of white lillies with streamers of white satin ribbon tied in sweetheart knots with fern in each knot.

Mrs. Frank Sanderson, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. She wore a light pink net dress fashioned with full skirt and carried a bouquet of lavender asters.

Miss Helen Moore and Mrs. Claude Clowdus, sister of the groom, were bridesmaids, gowned in yellow and peach net. They carried a bouquet of asters and tube roses tied with acquamarine and orchid ribbons.

Virgil Newton, Mitchell Dam. was best man, and Frank Cox, brother of the bride, and Guy McKee, cousin of the bride were ushers.

Misses Ruth and Elizabeth Jones, nieces of the bride, were junior bridesmaids wearing net frocks of lavender and blue net carrying colonial bouquets of pink roses. Little Martha Cox, niece of the bride, was flower girl.

Mr. and Mrs. Cox entertained members of both families at their home on Lay Dam Road immediately after the ceremony.

After a wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs McKenzie will be at home at Lay Dam. Out-of-town guests for the wedding included: Mr and Mrs. G. G. McKenzie, Mr. and Mrs. Claude Clowdus, Tallassee, Alabama: Mrs. Ben Little, Miss Ima McKenzie, Mrs. Bettie Mahan, Mr. Henry Arthur Roper, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Mahan, Mr. and Mrs. Jimmie Parrish, Birmingham, Alabama; Mr. and Mrs. B. B. Larrimore, Florence; Mr. and Mrs. Fank Sanderson, Guntersville; Mrs. Earl Roberson, Murphy, N.C.; Mr. Huey Green, Andalusia, Ala., and Miss Marjorie Lusk, Knoxville, Tennessee.

SALLYE MULLINS MAHAN HONORS BRIDE

Miss Sallye Mullins Mahan was hostess last Friday at a linen tea shower, when she honored Mrs. Howard McKenzie (June Cox) bride of September 3.

The hostess received wearing a model of ice blue and white, and the honoree chose a dress of coral net trimmed in acquamarine velvet ribbons and violets. Mrs. Charles B. Cox, mother of the honoree, wore blue chiffon.

Mrs. Crit Jones received the gifts at the door. A bowl of pink roses centered the table, the other appointments being crystal. Mrs. Joe Rummel presided at the punch bowl and assisting were Miss Helen Moore and Miss Mary Armstrong.

Mrs. Frank Sanderson displayed the gifts and Mrs. Bettie Mahan kept the bride's book.

BLOODTESTING OF POULTRY STOCK TO BE CARRIED OUT

Mr. R. B. Jones, Chief Poultry Division of the Alabama Department of Agriculture has stated that bloodtesting of poultry flocks whose owners wish to sell hatching eggs will be done again this fall.

There are two approved hatcheries in Chilton County. Namely, Chilton County Exchange Hatchery, in Clanton, and Alabama Poultry Farm and Hatchery, Calera, Ala., Route 1. Before a flock owner can sell eggs for hatching to these hatcheries it will be necessary for him to have his flock bloodtested for pullorum by a field representative of the Poultry Division of the Alabama Department of Agriculture. There will be a small charge per bird for testing work.

All poultry producers wishing to sell hatching eggs should notify the County Agent or Assistant County Agent by October 1, 1939, so that a representative of the Poultry Division may be obtained for this work in Chilton County.

Heads French Defense

Gen. Marie Gustave Camelin is in supreme command of all French forces in the war with Germany, including land, sea and air. Under Gamelin's orders, 31,000 school children were sent to the provinces, and further evacuation orders were rigidly enforced.

Britain Transports Its Troops by Plane

Mobilization of the English army was materially hastened by use of airplanes in the rush to get troops to the continent. Above photograph shows members of the Second Battalion of the Royal Ulster Rifles boarding a plane for the front. The Soviet Union, too, has laid great stress on its troop carrying planes and its mass parachute leaps from the air. Russia, in the past few years, has carried on extensive experiments with this type of air raid and has repeatedly declared them successful. Many army officials, however, declare the mass parachute leaps impractical for war.

Polish Troops in Front Line Trenches

Polish infantry awaiting the attack of German troops on the Polish Corridor border. President Moscicki emphasized the fact that Poland's first battles were purely defensive to establish beyond all doubt that Germany is the aggressor nation. Germany's initial land attacks were from East Prussia against Dzialdowo and Mlawa; from Pomerania against Chojnice at the narrowest part of the disputed Corridor, and from Breslaw against Katowice.

French Troops on Frontier

French soldiers manning field fortifications on the German border. They are equipped with gas masks in anticipation of Germany's use of gas as a weapon against its enemies. France's army of 6,000,000 men is looked upon as one of the greatest armies in the world. Army officials, in answer to President Roosevelt's plea, guaranteed that French forces will not bombard open cities or civilian populations as long as enemy forces do not do so.

DR. J. E. GOWAN WRITES LETTER REGARDING HIGH SCHOOL SITE

Editor, Chilton County News:

I hear some little bit of talk and agitation about moving the Chilton County High School to some other part of the city or probably to some other part of the county. The first I saw or heard of it was a small article in one of the county papers a month ago, and then I understand that the Clanton Kiwanis Club discussed it some at their meeting last week. I learn it was reported to the ladies' Study Club last week that the Kiwanis Club had voted unanimously to go on record as favoring the selection of a new site on which to erect the new proposed building.

I wish to say in the outset, I believe it is a bad idea for this kind of agitation to be started. We have been without a county high school already too long and if this agitation gains momentum, it will only serve to delay the erection of a new building probably several months, to say nothing of the additional cost which it would necessarily incur.

A number of citizens of Clanton labored hard and dug deep into their pockets back in 1914 in order to raise the money with which to build the old building and which now rests in the building fund of the county board of education as insurance money collected when the old building was destroyed by fire. That location was officially selected and accepted as a proper and suitable site, and the people paid their money with the understanding that it be built as it was. That money now lies in the building fund for the high school. The site is bought and paid for, so long as it is used for the county high school, and we should not have to lose the time and added expense of selecting and purchasing another site.

There can be no serious objection to the old high school site—in fact I consider it a very suitable site for a high school. No one would want a school house where there is an abundance of noise, much traffic, etc. The present site is quiet and away from so much traffic and noise, which I consider one thing very desirable for a high school and, too, the people are accustomed to the high school being at the present place.

Then, too, we already have the vocational building—a brick structure—which could not be moved and which could not be sold for anything like what it is worth or cost. And a number of beautiful trees are already large and growing on the lot, which might be duplicated elsewhere and which might not. Now, if there is a lot anywhere else that is as centrally located and which could be procured for anything near the cost this one was, then there might be some argument for another location; but where is such a lot?

I beleive when the people of Clanton consider the matter from every standpoint, they will conclude that we should rush the matter through as hurriedly as possible and get our new high school building erected on the site that has already been provided and used for that purpose. We can ill afford to lose the time and extra expense that would be consumed in trying to move it to some other location.

Yours very truly,
J. E. GOWAN.

Poultry Exhibit At County Fair

By Edward Bialas

There will be more chickens at Chilton County Fair this year than has ever been in the past, Mr. J. Hollis Jackson, superintendent of this department told me when the writer had the privilege of talking to him about the poultry exhibit.

He tells me there will be more classes and breeds of chickens to be seen at Gragg Field this Fall than has ever been seen in this county before. From pullets to old hens, they will be on display. There will not only be chickens but also displays of turkeys, geese and ducks. He will try to show the best varieties for farm or city raising and the ones which will pay the biggest dividends for farm use and egg production. All this department will be larger than in the past.

The Chilton County Association could not have selected a more logical man for this department than Mr. Jackson and with your cooperation this part of the Fair will run perfect.

The Fair Association has not spared money this year in an effort to bring to the people good free acts and shows. Not only the shows will be better but the premium list is larger and the exhibits will be on a larger scale. There has been improvement in every department.

Dr. V. J. Gragg, president, Mr. J. Mell Martin, secretary-treasurer, and Mr. Littlejohn, are working day and night to make the final plans so this yea's fair will be BIGGER and BETTER than it has ever been before.

The Board of Directors, and the Clanton Kiwanis Club, which has done such wonderful work in your community in the past and will continue to do so in the future, cannot be praised enough for all their efforts to make your county known throughout this state and other states as well.

So, one and all should plan to come to the Fair and show them that the population in this section and surrounding towns appreciates all the hard work and will be there to see what they really do at the CHILTON COUNTY FAIR at GRAGG FIELD—SEPTEMBER 26-30.

TRUTH about ADVERTISING

By CHARLES B. ROTH

$2 EGGS

HEN my mother went overland in a covered wagon to a home in the West, the country just settling up. Transporta- was slow, was expensive. ces of everything were high.

e preserved a newspaper of her ood on the frontier, and it in- sts me occasion- to read the cur- prices of things buy every day for a few cents. ggs were $2 a n in those days. ar brought 40 s a pound. Kero- was $3 a gal- Candles cost 25 s apiece.

Charles Roth

ompare these es with the es you see ad- sed in your newspaper today ou will see that, although much is bandied back and forth con- ng the increased cost of living, act is that the cost has gone ward consistently since fron- times.

e of the reasons for high prices was undoubtedly the difficulty which the supply was obtained hazards and expense of trans- ng goods.

t the chief reason was that the of these necessaries could not read out over enough custom- o bring them at lower cost to The merchant had to pay the of his business out of sales to a comparatively few customers. Costs had to be high.

Prices on everything you buy today, regardless of whether you live in a village or a large city, would be higher now if it were not for the service of advertising in lowering them to your advantage.

As soon as a manufacturer or a merchant begins to advertise he begins to sell more. As he sells more it costs him less to sell to each customer. He cuts the price. More customers come. Again he is able to cut the price.

Pretty soon you have the situation of improved quality and lower prices, brought about through the creative service of advertising to the consumer.

Advertising and high prices do not go together at all. They are extremely incompatible to each other. It is only the product which is unadvertised, which has no established market, that costs more than you can afford to pay.

Whenever you go into a store and buy an item of advertised merchandise, it doesn't make any difference what, you are getting more for your money—more in quality and service—than you would get if you spent the same amount for something which was not advertised.

The man who builds a business on advertising can give you more for your money because advertising enables him to give more for less. See how advertising pays you every day.

Hints For Homemakers

By Jane Rogers

FRESH rosy peaches baked with canned unsweetened Hawaiian pineapple juice and sugar, served hot with a dash of powdered mace or a sprinkling of grated nutmeg will add a special fillip to the meat course, especially if roast chicken is the piece de resistance. Or try them for dessert, minus the spice, serving with thin cream instead or hard sauce flavored with nutmeg or mace.

Prepare the peaches this way: Pour boiling water over eight firm but ripe peaches, rub off skins and place fruit close together in a baking dish. Sprinkle with one-half cup granulated sugar, pour over one-half cup pineapple juice, cover and bake in a moderate oven (850°F.) about 20 minutes, then remove cover and allow fruit to brown slightly. Serve hot as suggested above.

This amount will make eight servings.

Smallpox Vaccinations For School Children

Vaccination of all children entering Chilton County schools against smallpox was urged today by the County Health Officer, Dr. S. D. Sturkie.

In contrast to the view held by many people that smallpox today is a non-existent disease, Dr. Sturkie pointed to reports that 139 cases occurred in Tennessee during the four weeks ending June 17, 1939. The high incidence of the disease, he states, which has been occurring in the north and east now seems to be spreading southward into the South Atlantic States; reports of the United States Public Service show an increase of 30 per cent of the prevalence of the disease in the United States during 1939 over the average number of cases during 1934-1938.

"It is my belief," the Health Officer continued, "that vaccination against smallpox and diphtheria of all children entering school should be made compulsory in Chilton County. I have seriously considered recommending this measure to the County School Board. The laws of Alabama give the County or City Board of Education or the County Board of Health the legal right to adopt regulations making vaccination compulsory among school children. I have decided, however, to postpone this step until 1940. I am, nevertheless, firmly convinced of the effectiveness of compulsory vaccination as is shown by the following experience of certain states of the United States. There are now 13 states with compulsory vaccination. Last year these had 238 cases of smallpox or about one case for every 200,000 people. Also last year in 22 states which do not have compulsory vaccination there were 6,000 cases of smallpox or 28 cases for every 200,000 people. This comparison should leave no doubt as to the value of compulsory vaccination.

"While we remain on a voluntary basis, let me assure Chilton County parents that they need not dread or fear the vaccination as it is given today. No longer is the sore large and the constitutional reaction severe. Except for a small sore and general malaise of several days duration there is very little discomfort following the vaccination."

INFANT MORTALITY

Only two states in the South—Florida and Mississippi—had lower provisional infant mortality rates in 1938 than Alabama, according to information received by the State Department of Health from the Bureau of the Census of the United States Department of Commerce.

According to the Bureau of the Census figures, there were 61 deaths of infants under one year of age for every 1,000 live births in Alabama, as compared with infant mortality rates of 68 per 1,000 live births for Georgia and North Carolina, 67 per 1,000 live births for Louisiana, 80 per 1,000 live births for South Carolina, 63 per 1,000 live births for Tennessee, 64 per 1,000 live births for Texas, and 66 per 1,000 live births for Virginia. The Florida and Mississippi rates were 58 and 57 per 1,000 live births respectively, while the Kentucky rate was 61 per 1,000 live births, the same as the Alabama rate.

It's Not 'All's Quiet On The Western Front'

By Irvin Lande

What an apprehensive world has long been fearing has become a reality. All the bloodshed of the first world war has been in vain because early Sunday morning the British Empire announced that a state of war existed between that country and Germany. Immediately following Britain's proclamation the government of France declared war on Germany. Thus, the second world war began.

Back of the immediate cause, however, is the rise of Adolf Hitler to power in Germany. The ruler of the Third Reich had violated nearly all disarmament and peace movements made by the Allies at the close of the 1914-18 conflict. Hitler demanded Austria, Czechoslovakia, the Saar, and Memel. All of those demands were granted under England's Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain's appeasement policy. But the chancellor of Germany was not satisfied. He demanded the port of the Free City of Danzig and the Polish Corridor which was taken from Germany at the end of the World War. Poland, with pomises of aid from Great Britain and France, stood firm. The crisis that followed will go down in history as the greatest battle of nerves. Diplomatic relations were strained. Rumors flew hap-hazardly. The entire situation was that Germany wanted Danzig and the Corridor. Poland. Britain, and France said he could not have it. The next startling event that took place was that Hitler had negotiated a pact with Russia; a pact that both the United Kingdom and France had wanted. But with uncanny diplomatic skill, Hitler won the pact and with Russia' neutrality assured, struck. Poland was attacked!

Britain and France with still slight hopes for peaceful settlement of Europe's aggravated condition, sent a last ultimatum to Germany: withdraw all troops in Polish territory. Hitler refused. With three days of delay having passed, Chamberlain asked the British Parliament for a war declaration. And as previously stated, war began.

On one side is France, Great Britain and her colonies, and Poland. On the other is Germany, a formidable opponent by herself. Perhaps most surprising is that Germany's puissant ally, Italy, did not enter the war.

While the conflict was raging, President Roosevelt addressed the American people at eight o'clock Sunday night telling them that the United States will stay neutral. He said "there will be no blackout of peace in the United States. . . " However, a special sesion of Congress is expected very soon to revise the present neutrality act.

First serious victim of the war was the British ship, Athenia. With a reported 1,400 passengers aboard, of which 246 are believed to be Americans, the ship was torpedoed supposedly by a German submarine. Most of the passengers were saved, however.

In retaliation of the sinking of the Athenia, a British ship destroyed a German vessel after taking as prisoners the German sailors. This, at first broadcast, was only a rumor. Many of the future bulletins we will hear shall also probably be only rumors. It is our duty, as outsiders looking in, to study all reports and decide for ourselves which is true and which is false. As President Roosevelt said, "Do not believe of necessity everything you hear or read. Check up on it first."

LEO THOMPSON AND CHARLES WADE FLEW TO AIR RACES

Clanton's two leading aviators, Charles Wade, manager of the local Wadesonian Theatre, and Leo Thompson, operator of the Clanton Laundry, returned Monday from a trip in Mr. Wade's plane, to the Cleveland Air Races and other points north, east west, and where not.

Messrs Thompson and Wade left at 5:15 Friday morning and flew to Detroit, stopping at Cincinatti for gas and arrived there at 12:50. They crossed over into Canada while there. Leaving Detroit Saturday they went to Cleveland where they viewed part of the races and on leaving Cleveland Sunday they headed for home, stopping in Louisville. Besides some rainy sections these gentlemen reported a fine trip, sans trouble of any kind.

Strawberry Fertilizers For Fall

One of the most important operations in strawberry production is the fall application of a good balanced fertilizer. The plants which have made their summer growth will be making fruit buds in the crowns at that season and later during warm winter weather, and the number of blooms coming out in the spring, as well as the production of berries will be influenced greatly by this fertilization. An application of 500 pounds of a 4-12-4 in September 15 to October 15 seems to give the most economical yields. This comes at a time when vegetative growth for the year has been made and the plant food, especially nitrogen, applied then will be taken up and utilized for bud development. A later application of about the same amount of a 6-8-4 fertilizer, put [illegible] ninety days before the fruit [illegible] ripening, (Jan. 1-[illegible] [illegible] the proper development [illegible] buds into the mature [illegible]

The matted row of plants should be held down to 16 to 18 inches in width. This can be accomplished late in the growing season by cutting off the runners which spread out in excess of this width. It is preferable to do this rather than push them back into the side of the row when cultivating. The latter makes the plants too thick along the side of the row and, in addition to giving weak plants, provides too much shade for the fruit. To give best results, plants should be at least four to six inches apart.

This operation of cutting off surplus plants can be done successfully with a disc opener such as is used on one-horse grain drills or disc hillers used on two-horse cultivators.

The rows of matted plants should be carried into the fall as free of weeds and grass as possible and the fertilizer broadcast over the entire bed and swept off the plants with a broom. Prepare now to do that at the proper time in the fall and secure fertilizer for the [illegible] about January 1st.

outstanding part of the livestock show. Too much interest cannot be shown in this phase of the exhibits.

J. Hollis Jackson, vocational agriculture teacher in the Chilton County High School, who will have charge of the poultry exhibits, has announced that he expects to more than double the displays of poultry of every type this year. Mr. Jackson has been instrumental in creating a growing interest in poultry raising in this section of the country through his work as vocational agriculture teacher. Approximately 125 coops, or exhibits, are expected to show in the poultry department during the fair.

L. E. Diefenderfer, who will have charge of policing the fair grounds, is rapidly getting his organization set up to see that everything will be in order throughout the week.

The Women's Handicraft department will undoubtedly be most interesting as well as the numerous other phases of the Fair.

J. H. Hollis will have charge of the ticket sales, and accurate records will be kept of the financial end of the undertaking. The new Fair catalogs have been issued and lis tprizes for all exhibits, which have grown considerably over last year, with the financial help of the County and City governments.

Thos. P. Littlejohn, manager of the Midway, free acts, etc., is arranging a group of the country's biggest and best shows with numerous free acts. Fireworks will be set off, and twice the amount this year as last. A large band has been secured, Mr. Littlejohn announced, and to say the least plans for this year's Chilton County Fair are pointing toward a truly "Bigger and Better Fair."

Miss Thelma White and Mr. Fred Dunlap were married Sunday, September 3, by the Rev. J. L. Daniels.

he Board Has A Problem—

Since the destruction of the Chilton ounty High School by fire last De- ember, the Chilton County Board of ducation has been facing a problem at has grown to immense propor- ons. We do not say that this is the oblem of the Board alone. It is the oblem of every citizen of Chilton ounty. The Board of Education, how- er, is the group elected by the people carry out the duties and transact siness pertaining to the education of ilton County children. And may we y here and now, we envy them not, t we do offer words of commenda- n and encouragement to these men, o, in our opinion, are doing a good b in serving Chilton in a way that re- cts conscientious study and personal fort, most especially in seeking a so- ion to this particular problem, which, we have said, has grown to immense p. rtions.

The old High School building was stroyed at a time when it seems there s no Federal help to be had from agencies known as PWA and WPA. er seven months slipped by as effort s put forth to secure Federal aid. hen the realization came that no h funds were forthcoming, the only ernative was for the Board to replace building with county funds. School oney in Chilton County not being plentiful has caused the Board no le concern, and the fact that the w Chilton County High School should one that will be adequate in every pect to serve Clanton for years to me, has piled the load higher.

Lions 100 Per Cent Attendance Night Fri.

Clanton Lions, in honor of their President, will hold "One hundred Per Cent Attendance Night" this Friday at their regular meeting place at the First Metholist Church.

Once a year after the new persident is installed, this attendance night program is held throughout the thirty-four hundreds clubs in America and foreign countries. The object is to create new life and new interest in the members who might have lost interest or let other things keep them away from the club meetings.

Clanton Lions need each and every member enrolled and the local club is putting forth a real effort to make this Friday night one to remember in Clanton. Program Committee Chairman Edwin Mullins has prepared a good program for the occasion and all attending are assured of a pleasant and profitable evening.

GRAND JURY RETURNS FIFTY TRUE BILLS

CONSIDERS 65 CASES AND EXAMINES 97 WITNESSES WHILE EMPANELED FOR JULY TERM

State of Alabama, Chilton County.
Circuit Court of said County and State.
To Hon. Arthur Glover, as Judge of said Court:

We, the Grand Jury, empanelled for the July Term of the Circuit Court, after receiving your honor's most able charge, entered upon our investigations of the matters that came before us as Grand Jurors and herewith submit the following report:

During our investigations, we have considered 65 cases and have examined 97 witnesses and have already in our partial report returned 6 true bills and are returning herewith 44 true bills making a total of 50 true bills returned by us.

We have made a personal inspection of the county jail and believe it to be sufficiently safe for the keeping of the prisoners and find that the prisoners confined therein are being well fed and cared for with reasonable comfort.

We have examined the fee book of the Probate Judge and find it neatly kept and correct in so far as we were able to ascertain. On our examination of the Sheriff's account with the State for feeding prisoners, we find that it is being kept in accordance with the law. On our examination of the office of the County Superintendent, we find that his books, records, and papers are neatly kept and in so far as we ascertained were kept fully in accordance with the law.

The Grand Jury has information that many motor vehicles and especially

There's No War Here But Wedding Bells Are Certainly Ringing

We read an artice, relative to the war, of course, which stated that the war in Europe was the cause of a decided increase in marriages in the warring nations. In fact, this particular article stated that the German Government had passed laws making a quick leap into matrimony easier, so the boys could be married before they had to go to the battle fronts.

As the United States is not at war, we suppose it is only a coincidence that there are many couples around here taking the step into this popular sea called matrimony. Following is accounts of five marriages, nearly all Clanton people, that have occurred since the News went to press last week:

Tatum-Armstrong

On last Thursday afternoon Miss Armstrong, charming daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Armstrong, became the bride of "Dusty' 'Tatum. The ceremony was performed by Dr. Bryan in Wetumpka at 5:30, with only a few relatives and friends present. This young couple will make their home at Lay Dam where Mr. Tatum is employed

OLD CITY WATER TANK GETS CLEANING, PAINTING THIS WK

The old water storage tank, located on the hill in the northwestern section of the City, is receiving a genuine scrubbing and repainting outside and inside, Mayor C. Fenn Jones announced this week.

This tank, for twenty-five years the sole water tank of the City of Clanton, is being relieved by the new tanks since Clanton's new waterworks system went into operation. After the renovation, however, the City plans to continue using this tank for several years to come.

INTERESTING PROGRAM TO BE GIVEN AT MUSIC CLUB MEET

The News has been requested to announce that a most interesting program has been arranged for an open meeting of the Clanton Music Appreciation Club on Friday, September 22, at the Clanton City Hall.

At this time Mrs. J. G. Hendricks, an accomplished musician, will render several selections on the merimba. Mrs. Hendricks is from Talladega and is well known in Clanton.

Also to appear on this program is Miss Kathryn Foss and Miss Emily Sawyer, both musicians of note.

The time of this program will be announced in next week's issue of the News.

A QUIET WEEK END FOR CITY

City law violators were either successful in dodging the officers or there were no violators, for there were no cases to be heard in City Court Monday morning, announced Mayor C. Fenn Jones.

County Agent's Office Sponsors Pasture Tour

County Agent J. W. Fant has announced that his office will conduct a "Pasture Tour" Friday afternoon, beginning at 2:00 o'clock from his office.

Farmers and others interested in the study of pastures in this section, are invited to join the party, and make the tour with them, Mr. Fant stated.

MURRAY-BELL HARDWARE ENLARGES STORE RECENTLY

Mr. Jimmie Bell, popular owner of the Murray-Bell Hardware Company, announced to a representative of the News today the addition of some twenty-four hundred feet of additional floor space to this fast growing business.

This, of course, is necessary to take care of the large and varied stock carried by Mr. Bell for the convenience of satisfied customers. Says Mr. Bell: "Clanton is growing, and I am only keeping pace with the need of our City, for if it's hardware you want, I have it."

PARTIES RETURN FROM FISHING TRIPS TO GULF COAST

Luther Foshee, Dick Hayes, Hoyt Taylor and Jim Wade motored down to Panama City, Fla., Tuesday of last week where they fished Wednesday and Thursday with Capt. Curtis Ware.

The party returned Thursday night and reported a catch of 35 king mackerel and one rock salmon, a rare species, on Wednesday, and a number of king mackerel on Thursday. The entire catch weighed over two hundred pounds, with the largest king mackerel tipping the scales at 17 pounds.

Another party which included Dr. J. P. Hayes, W. E. Huddleston and W. M. Polk fished at Perido Bay near Foley, Alabama, and reported a nice catch. These men left last Saturday and returned Monday night.

They fished with Ray Walker and Bill Morrell, and hauled in 35 king and Spanish mackerel. Dr. Hayes was having such good luck that he even caught two on one line. This party's catch averaged 8 pounds each.

ICE CREAM SUPPER

There will be an ice cream supper at Pilgrim's Rest Schoolhouse Saturday night, September 16, benefit Pilgrim's Rest Church. Everybody is invited.

Clanton Baseball Team Closes Out Successful Season Last Sunday, Splitting Double-Header

Clanton's fast-stepping baseball team closed out its season last Sunday, playing a double-header against Ensley Steel Works. Ellison was on the mound in the first game winning 3 tol, and Golson dropping the second 3 to 2. Both games were cut short on account of the Sunday Blue Law. The pitching on both sides stood out and both teams were fielding the ball well.

Clanton and Central Alabama should feel justly proud of the type of baseball played by this team. For the past two years it has had one of the best amateur teams in Alabama, being nosed out only by Tallassee last year in the Alabama Semi-Pro Tournament and showing itself to be first-class this year by beating the Birmingham Federation Champions (Jordan Park) three games out of four during the course of the season. Clanton also beat the fast Naval Base team at Pensacola two out of three games.

According to belief advanced by some of the players and enthusiasts here, now is the time to start planning for another good team next summer. Meetings this winter, for the purpose of working up a real organization, are being advocated. Central Alabama could have a Semi-Pro League as fast as most industrial leagues in the South and in this way young ball players would get greater recognition.

Players participating in ten or more games during the past season, and their standing are as follows:

Alex Hayes	.375
Ellison	.371
Baker	.363
M. Hayes	.341
Jones	.336
Curlee	.336
Tiffin	.316
Armstrong	.288
Cox	.275
Williamson	262
Golson	.253
Williams	.205

Games Lost—12.

SEVERAL CHILTON 4-H CLUB BOYS PLAN TO RAISE CALVES FOR FAT STOCK SHOW

Will Also Display Them At County Fair Sept. 26-30; Purchase Of Stock Possible Through Montgomery Production Credit Association

Twelve Chilton County 4-H Club boys in this County are planning to purchase and fatten for the Fat Stock Show and Sale in Montgomery, young Herford calves, which they expect to show at the Chlton County Fair here September 26-30, and raise for a creditable showing at the stock show that will be held in Montgomery next April.

This announcement was made by C. L. Breedlove, Assistant County Agent in charge of 4-H Club work, who pointed out that the purchase of these calves was being done with money borrowed through the Montgomery Production Credit Association, with his office being in charge of the feeding and caring for the stock, after each boy has secured his loan and purchased his calf.

At the Fat Stock Show and Sale in Montgomery this past Spring, numerous 4-H Club boys throughout the State displayed and sold through auction, thousands of dollars worth of fattened calves. The show and sale drew wide attention over the State. At that show only three Chilton boys entered stock, but there will be many more with their stock fattened and groomed for entrance in the show, with the aim of having in the group a prize-winner, when the show and sale comes off next April in Montgomery.

Mr. Breedlove stated that so far he has applications from twelve 4-H Club boys over the County who expect to secure a loan for the purchase of a calf. The individual youth make a note to the Association, which is almost entirely owned by farmers, and secures enough money to buy one calf. These young herefords will be purchased from local cattle-raisers, who have a number on hand. The feeding and care of the animals through the winter will be under Mr. Breedlove's supervision, and accurate records of the cost incurred will be kept.

These calves will be bought within the next few days, and a number will be displayed at the Fair here the latter part of this month, it was learned. Mr. Breedlove stated that the following boys will secure loans and buy calves:

Thomas Patterson, Clanton Route 2; Joseph Shoults, Lawley Route 1; James Messer, Verbena Route 1; John Schumacher, Clanton Route 2; Ellis Jones, Clanton Route 1; Ned Dennis, Clanton Route 2; Wilburn Caton, Clanton Route 4; George Fox, Thorsby Route 1; Earl Holley, Clanton Route 3; Glenn Latham, Lawley Route 1; James Latham, Lawley Route 1, and Lawrence Williams, Verbena Route 2.

SEVERAL STORES HERE TO BE CLOSED ALL DAY TODAY

The following stores of Clanton will be closed all day today (Thursday), September 14, in observance of a Religious holiday. The public is asked to keep this in mind. These stores will be open for business as usual Friday.

The Leader, Levine Dry Good Co., Parisian Store, Eagle Store, Dollar Store.

WILLIAM McCLELLAN WALKER

William McClellan Walker, 45, son of R. H. Walker, owner and editor of the Athens Democrat, fell from a train at Cincinnatti Sunday and was instantly killed. Mr. Walker was business manager and associate editor of the Democrat.

The body was taken from Cincinnatti to Athens where interment was held.

CITY P.-T. A.'s TO GIVE PARTY FOR TEACHERS FRIDAY NIGHT

"All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy," they say. The same is true of teachers, too, if they only teach all day. We'll cure them all at the City Hall Friday night at eight, in froic and play—we'll drive dullness away.

Says the parents of the P.-T. A.
What is it?
A party!
By whom?
Parents of both local P.-T. A.'s.
For whom?
All Teachers in Clanton Schools
Where?
At City Hall.
When?
Friday night at 8:00 o'clock.

Applications For Farm Loans Being Taken

We have been notified by Marvin Durbin, RR Supervisor, Farm Security Administration, that his office is now accepting applications to buy farms under the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act. It is very important that all tenants, sharecroppers and farm laborers who are interested in being considered for one of these loans should file application at once.

Forms and applications may be secured at the Farm Security Administration office in the Johnson Building, across the street from the County Agent's Office.

Young Clanton Lawyer To Practice In B'ham

It was leaned here today that Charles S. Deason, well known young lawyer of Clanton, has moved to Birmingham where he will make his home and be associated in the practice of law with the firm of Mullins and Deramus of that city.

Mr. Deason is the son of the late Probate Judge and Mrs. E. B. Deason of Clanton. He is a graduate of the Univrsity of Colorado, and of the University of Alabama, where he received his law degree with honors in 1938. He is a member of the bar of the Supreme Courts of Alabama and New Mexico. Since his graduation from the University of Alabama, Mr. Deason has been connected with the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, where he has been private secretary and law clerk to Judge Leon McCord.

The law firm with which Mr. Deason is now connected is composed of two prominent Chilton County men. Mr. Clarence Mullins is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clem Mullins, both deceased, who were well known and respected citizens of this county. Mr. Mullins has been practicing in Birmingham for the past 25 years. Mr. Harvey Deramus was born and reared at Verbena, and is a member of the prominent Deramus family of that place. He has been practicing law in Birmingham for the past 14 years.

The many friends of Mr. Deason regret to see him leave Chilton County, but all wish him the greatest success, and know that he will be a valuable asset to this well-established Birmingham law firm.

EIGHT PERSONS COMMITTED TO JAIL DURING THE PAST WEEK

Eight persons weer committed to the county jail here during the past week, according to the records in the office of Sheriff W. G. Culp.

Charges were as follows: Public drunkenness, 2; Manufacturing whiskey 2; Driving while intoxicated, 1; Carnal knowledge, 2; Assault with weapon, 1.

ICE CREAM SUPPER

We are requested to announce an ice cream supper at Concord Church, two miles north of Billingsley Saturday night, September 16.

Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Caldwell are visiting Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Pattillo, parents of Mrs. Caldwell.

Democratic Executive Committee To Meet

Chairman W. M. Polk of the Chilton County Democratic Executive Committee, has announced that a meeting of the Committee will be held at the Courthouse Friday afternoon of this week, September 15, at 2:30.

Mr. Polk stated that this was to be an important meeting as several matters are to be discussed during the course of the meeting, and he is urging all members to attend.

A CORRECTION

In last week's announcement of the meeting of the Unity Baptist Association there appeared an error in the day of the week on which it is to meet. The announcement stated Wednesday and Thursday, which was my mistake. It should have stated Tuesday and Wednesday, September 26 and 27

You will all please take notice and meet with us on Tuesday and Wednesday.

Yours truly—J. Z. Mims, Moderator.

INFERIOR COURT ELECTION SET OCTOBER 24

PROBATE JUDGE SMITH SETS DATE FOR SPECIAL ELECTION TO NAME JUDGE

In compliance with the requirements of an act recently passed by the Alabama Legislature creating an Inferior Court in this county, and which requires the Probate Judge to call a special election "to be held within 45 days after issuance of a call to be made within 10 day after passage and approval of the act," Judge J. Lee Smith has designated the date of Tuesday, October 24, as the date of this election, at which time the qualified voters of this county will name a Judge for this Inferior Court.

This act, which received the signature of the Governor last week, was one of three local bills submitted to the voters some time ago, and received a favorable vote. The purpose of this new Court is to hear all minor cases coming up in the County, and has as its purpose the relieving of the congested condition of the local Circuit Court docket. The Court automatically creates the one office of Judge, who will receive a fixed salary. The election called will name this judge, but just who will make the race for this office has not been learned. Announcements will probably be made within the next few days.

FIRE AT HOME OF BUFORD LAWRENCE SUNDAY NIGHT

The Volunteer Fire Department was called out to the home of Buford Lawrence on the Maplesville Highway last Sunday night, to check a fire which had started in one bedroom. Considerable damage by smoke, and one bed was destroyed, it was learned. The house itself was not damaged. Just how the flames started was not learned.

MRS. P. C. SMITH, SONS AND DAUGHTER HOLD REUNION

The Tutwiler Hotel, Birmingham, was the secene of a most impressive and enjoyable gathering last Saturday when the six sons and one daughter of Mrs. P. C. Smith and Mrs. Smith herself, held a family reunion. This was the first time this family had all gathered together in eighteen years. Dinner was enjoyed at the Tutwiler and the family later gathered at the home of Frank Smith on Huntsville Road, Birmingham.

The family is composed of the following: Mrs. P. C. Smith of Clanton, six sons, Paul of Camden, Frank of Birmingham, Milton of Birmingham, Kenneth of Pine Bluff, Arkansas, Billy, of Wetumpka, Dan of Birmingham and daughter, Mrs. Mamie Higgins of Clanton.

Needless to say, this was an enjoyable affair, and the numerous friends of Mrs. Smith and her family congratulate her on this privilege—that of having all her children together after these years.

COUNTY HEALTH OFFICER TO PRESENT KIWANIS PROGRAM

"Chilton County Health Unit And Its Relation To The Welfare Of The People Of The County," will be the theme of a program to be rendered at the regular weekly meeting of the Clanton Kiwanis Club tonight. Dr. S. D. Sturkie, County Health Officer, will have charge of the program, and all members are being urged to attend and enjoy what is expected to be an interesting and enlightening program on this subject.

"THANKSGIVING DAY"—

As long as possible The News will not get pessimistic and down in the mouth over the European war. We have everything in the world to be thankful for, thanks to God and the United States of America. We do as we please, we say what we please, we worship as we please and we think as we please.—Covington News.

"LAMPS ARE GOING OUT"—

Looking [illegible] window on the half dusk which falls over London in the late Summer, the British foreign secretary said in August of 1914:

"Lamps are going out all over Europe; we shall not live to see them lighted again in our time."

These compelling words, shot through with a sorrow and a poignancy which strikes home to all sensitive minds, come back again today. The lamps of civilization to which he referred were never lit again. A few were lit and burned feebly. They are going out today and well may we wonder when their feeble glow will live again.—Atlanta Constitution.

RELUCTANT SOLDIERS—

Two armies more reluctant to fight never before faced each other than the two great armies now biding their time on the western front. The Germans don't want to fight, the French and British don't want to fight. The civilians at home, while loyal and no doubt determined, are sickened. They loathe the war that is under way.

There is something hopeful about this. Traditionally the soldier is supposed to be on fire with zeal for his cause. He loves banners and brass bands. But the other day a London news-caster said he hadn't heard a military band, except over the radio, since this war started.

When the men who do the fighting rebel inwardly, and the civilians left behind to keep the home fires burning are sickened at the thought of war, the political adventurers who force peoples into war have their work cut out for them.—Montgomery Advertiser.

WE CAN'T AFFORD WAR—

When the last World War started, we had a national debt of one billion dollars,. Today that debt is more than 40 billions.

When the last war started we were operating on a Federal budget of one billion dollars a year. The budget was easily kept in balance—and at exeremely low taxes.

Today Federal expenditures range from nine to 10 billions, and though taxes are the highest in history, we are running three to four billions a year in the red.

Comparatively speaking we had no unemployment problem in 1914, no relief expense. Today, some 10 million American men and women, able and willing to work, are without jobs, because of economic dislocations directly traceable to the last war. Today one-fifth of the population is dependent upon Government made-work, relief, unemployment compensation, old-age pensions, veterans' benefits or other form of public assistance.

We haven't yet paid the bills of our last crusade to save the world for democracy. We'll have to pay them. And we'll have to pay others aplenty by still heavier taxation, if we are to have democracy for the United States.

So let's keep our emotions down and our intelligence up.—Birmingham News.

PROFITEERING SHOULD BE STOPPED—

It is indeed encouraging to the wage earner with a fixed and limited income that the President, the Alabama Legislature and officials of the City of Birmingham have already announced steps to prevent profiteering in foodstuffs and other necessities of life as a result of the war.

In his address to the nation on last Sunday night, President Roosevelt declared "I cannot prophesy the immediate economic effect of this new war on our nation, but I do say that no American has the moral right to profiteer at the expense either of his fellow citizens or of the men, women and children who are living and dying in the midst of war in Europe."

In this statement the President gave indication of his intention to prevent war profiteering in the necessities of life in so far as it lies within his power. Unfortunately, neither the President, Congress, the Legislature nor the Birmingham City Commission is going to be able to stop such profiteering altogether. That is just as impossible as it is to repeal the law of supply and demand. The war has created overnight an active and prospective demand in Europe for certain foodstuffs, such as sugar, dried beans, canned meats, wheat, corn and their products, and those who hold supplies of these commodities have seen their value increase because of the war demand.

Just what can be done to keep profiteers from boosting prices artifically because of the admitted abnormal demands of war s something we will not presume to say. Perhaps a confiscatory tax, a tax that would take all the profit above a legitimate rate, would be the answer. For some years Congress has been toying with proposed laws to take the profit out of war and stop just the kind of profiteering the President spoke out against, but nothing concrete ever came out of the legslative mill. But faced with the grim realities of skyrocketing prices, fixed and limited incomes of its wage earners, and the savings of many of its people having been wiped out by years of depression. Congress will probably attempt to meet the situation with some kind of law designed to prevent any further dislocation of our economic system.

Writing in The United States News, David Lawrence points out that with increased industrial production will go rising profits, decreasing unemployment, declining relief rolls, rising government revenues—the recovery, that has been sought for so many years.

But the 1920-21 depression that followed the World War is still fresh in the memories of our Governmental and business leaders. They know that if we do not control the inflation that will be the natural result of a vastly increased tempo of the nations, industrial machine, we will face another depression when the war just begun is ended.

The keeping of the United States out of the new war through enactment of proper neutrality legislation, and the prevention of inflation are the two greatest problems that face Congress and the President.—Alabama News Digest.

LEVEL HEADS; CLEAR THINKING—

Never has there been a period in our nation's life when the need for level heads and clear thinking was more imperative than now. With our people nearly one hundred per cent in sympathy with the efforts of England and France to rid Europe and the world of the distinct threat represented in the philosophies and accomplishments of Adolph Hitler and the misled German people, there is an ever present danger that overt acts brought about by this conflict may inflame the minds of our people.

Let's remember these facts:

The present war "to save Democracy" is a direct result of the World War which came to a close with the Versailes Treaty almost a quarter century ago.

America's entry into the World War was brought about by a succession of overt enemy acts which fanned the indignation of our people to white heat.

The sacrifice of thousands of lives, the maiming of many more thousands of our young men, and the destroying of billions of dollars of our national wealth accomplished exactly nothing in the way of lasting peace.

Everything in our power should be done to assure that America and the Western Hemisphere remain neutral. Civilization must be preserved, and if the nations of Europe are to become engaged in a bitter struggle the end of which none can forsee, the responsibility for civilization will rest on the Americas.

Let's keep America out of war! Lessons learned from the experiences of the months leading up to our entry into the World War should prove of incalcuable benefit in this undertaking.—Prattville Progress.

BIRTHDAY CELEBRATION

On Saturday night, September 9th, Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Moore and brother, Charlie, gave their father, M. Curtis Moore, a surprise supper for his birthday. He was 73 years of age.

Everyone had a nice time. Sandwiches and cold drinks were served. Father talked about old times and about his wife, Mrs. Anna Moore, and two sons, Alfred and Frankie, and about his trip to Calexico, California and back. They went away for their health, and are now improving.

Those attending this affair were: Mr. and Mrs. Allen Moats and sons, Mr. and Mrs. Fonzie Bates and daughter, Mrs. Jettie Lewis and daughter and two sons, Mrs. Eunice Lewis and son and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. H.H. Moore Mr. and Mr. Morris Moore, Mr. and Mrs. Harris Moore.

A few presents were given to father, and we appreciate the kindness of our friends and thank everyone for the presents. We are glad our father has been with us so long and hope he has many more happy birthdays.

The Baptist Church at Bethany desires a small space to express their heart-felt thanks to the good people of Clanton and the surrounding territory for their most liberal contributions towad helping us build a house of worship. We cannot find words to express our heart-felt thanks for their loyalty in this cause. May God bless each and every one who contributed to this great cause. We invite you to worship with us.—Your Brother in Christ, W. Y. Keel.

Harvesting Lespedeza Sericea

Many farmers in this section have recently obtained better understanding of the proper methods for harvesting and curing Lespedeza sericea and kudzu hay, according to Mr. James H. Wood, Superintendent of the Soil Conservation Service in the CCC Camp, near Clanton, Alabama.

New methods and technical information have been demonstrated at joint field meetings between the Extension Service and the Soil Conservation Service as part of the erosion control program in this section, Mr. Wood points out. Numbers of agricultural workers as well as farmers attended.

Points stressed in harvesting Lespedeza sericea were the importance of cutting for hay when the plants average 12 to 15 inches in height and the best methods for cutting the hay in order to retain the leaves. It was also pointed out that Lespedeza sericea should not be harvested for hay before the second season.

At the kudzu demonstrations, farmers were shown a mechanical attachment for use on the cutter bar of the mowing machine to simplify the mowing process. The proper methods of curing kudzu hay were explained in detail.

Growing Crops For Effectiveness Of Close-Erosion Control

The excessive rainfalls in this area recently have provided an excellent opportunity to show how properly planned erosion control programs safeguard both soils and crops, according to Mr. James H. Wood, Superintendent of the Soil Conservation Service in the CCC Camp, near Clanton, Alabama.

Comparison of clean cultivated areas with others planted to close-growing crops in strips on terraced fields as part of erosion control program, shows the superior effectiveness of these strips of close growing crops in stopping the movement of valuable topsoil under excessive rainfall conditions.

On the other hand, inspection of areas planted to row crops, without adjoining strips of close-growing crops to absorb the run-off from the clean cultivated rows, reveals after such heavy rain far greater losses in topsoil while areas below the row crops have suffered much damage from silting.

Vegetated meadow outlets in this section also received a severe test during the heavy rain and have proved effective in almost every instance, according to Mr. Wood, carrying the run-off water from terraces safely off of fields.

Fine examples of meadow strips in this area can be seen on the farms of Mr. J. G. Gray, located one mile west of Baker School on the Billingsley road, Mr. S. E. Moatts, one mile north of the cotton mill on the old Birmingham highway, Mrs. Sophia L. Jones, 2 miles from Clanton on the Lay Dam Road, or Mr. J. R. Blow, one mile south of Thorsby on the Birmingham-Montgomery highway. These are a few of the meadow strips in this county. They provide a safe disposal of terrace water and are a source of hay. Kudzu or Lespedeza sericea are used to vegetate thes areas.

MORAL ECHOES

D. W. Haskew

Men had gathered for the construction of a residence. One of the carpenters had a very fine saw and every man on the job wanted to use it. They would idle away a lot of time waiting for the fine saw. Suppose that you should be in the woods and no birds were sinying except those that could sing the best. The woods would be almost as silent as death. Whether the bird can sing well or not, its voice rings out with the sound that it can make and that fills the woods with charm. Use what talent you possess. Your tools of life may not be the best. You may not have the throat of the best song birds, but you have what you have and use it. Every man doing his best with what he has will add charm to life.

At a certain place in the Alps there is a monument erected to a guide who had perished while attempting to make the ascent to the mountain. The simple inscription on the stone is "He died Climbing." That is a noble tribute to a heroic man. His face was forward, upward. He had only one aim and that was to go higher. "He Died Climbing." These words are suggestive to you and to me. The place that knows us now will soon know us no more forever. Some day we are going to drop on the road of life. Can it be said of us, "He Died Climbing." I fear that there are many who died "Going Down Hill." Happy the man of whom it can be said: "His efforts day by day was to be better and to get nearer God."

One day Jesus was nearing the little town of Nain. Looking ahead they saw a funeral procession coming to meet them. Jesus stepped to one side and reverently waited for it to pass. Just behind the wicker bier the Master observes the weeping mother. Her only son is dead and now she is alone in the world. Jesus calls for the pallbearers to stand still and in a moment the young man is alive and is in his mother's arms. It was more than the Master could stand to see a mother weeping over her dead boy. We know no sadder sight than to see a lonely mother weeping over the body of her dead son. Only one sight is sadder than that and that is to see a mother weeping over the living of her prodigal boy. Many a time have I heard a mother say in her tears, "I had rather have followed that boy to the gaveyard than to suffer in his ruin." Young folks, listen to me, beware of hurting the heart of your parents.

One day I was in conversation with the manager of a large department store and I asked him this question: "Do men or women bring back the larger amount of goods sent out on approval?" You might be surprised to know his answer. Here is what he said: "Why, sir, ten women to one man will return the goods when we send them out." Then he smiled and said: "You see, we have to grant to women the privilege of changing their minds." Let me ask these questions for you to thrash out. Is it because women are harder to please than men? Is it because they are more careful about their dress than men? Is it because they pay more attention to what other people say than men? Is it because they are lacking in the fine art of making up their minds and sticking to a decision? My advice is that you do not argue either one of these questions with your wife, daughter or sister.

On the second Sunday in June the pastor came before his congregation with a white binding over his right eye. The congregation was very curious to know what had caused the injury. In his announcements the preacher said: "I am quite certain that many of you are anxious to know why I have an injured eye this morning. To ease your inquisitive nature I will state that last Sunday was the first Sunday of the summer months and the first Sunday after the graduating exercises at our High School and on that day I looked so hard for you all at church until I strained my eye." To that man I would like to say: "Preacher, you are not the only pastor who strains his eyes in June to see the absent members of his church." Knowing how a preacher feels during the summer, if I were a layman I certainly would not miss church in June, July and August.

MRS. C. B. HAWKINS PASSED AWAY ON SEPTEMBER 7TH

o

On September 7th, the death angel visited the home of C. B. Hawkins of Bessemer and took away his loving wife, age 31, who before her marriage was Ivye Sutley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Sutley of Jemison.

She leaves to mourn her passing her husband, one son, C. B. Hawkins, Jr., one daughter, Mrs. J. B. Casey, all of Bessemer; her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Sutley of Jemison; three brothers Gady of Bessemer, Russel of Clanton, Marvin of Jemison; three sisters, Mrs. Ethel Edwards of Bessemer, Mr. Ruby Northcutt of Warren, O., and Mrs. Mary Jim Pierce of Jemison.

A short funeral service was held at the residence Friday afternoon and the body brought to the home of her parents. Burial was in Oak Grove cemetery. Rev. Clyde D. Deal of Brighton conducted the services with Brown-Service of Bessemer in Charge.

Clanton Methodist Church

Church School, 9:45 A.M. each Sunday, L. J. Stewart, General Superintendent.

Morning Worship, 11:00 A. M. Sermon by the Pastor.

Young Peoples meeting, 6:45 P.M. each Sunday in the basement of the Church.

Evening Worship, 7:30 P.M. Sermon by the Pastor. Service to be held in the sub-auditorium or basement of the Church.

Last Sunday we had good attendance at all services. At the worshp services we heard wonderful, spirit-filled and uplifting messages. Those who heard wish all others had enjoyed like blessings.

The music at the morning worship service was excellent. A thrilling message in song was given us by Mr. Herbert Caldwell, Jr. If one enjoys lots of good singing of the loved old hymns of the Church, and who doesn't one should not fail to attend the evening worship services.

Lest we miss such good services, may we fill our church, yes, really fill our church for all its services.

The Youth in Business

By C. E. Johnston

Dean, School of Business International Correspondence Schools

"DO not sell yourself short" is excellent advice for the young man entering the business world. Toe many persons who possess the required mental and physical equipment fail to achieve success because they continually create a poor impression. Personal habits and appearance are of prime importance both in obtaining a job and in securing advancement once a position is obtained.

Learn to create a good impression by checking up on yourself at intervals. Ask yourself questions such as the following. Then take the steps necessary to make it possible for you to give a favorable answer to each question.

1. Am I careful about my personal appearance—about the condition of my clothing, shoes, hair, skin, nails, and carriage?
2. Am I pleasant, cheerful, and courteous to others?
3. Am I alert and attentive?
4. Do I always tell the truth about myself or am I inclined to brag about my exploits and accomplishments?
5. Do I use good English?
6. Are any of my personal habits objectionable to others?
7. Have I confidence in myself?
8. Do my close associates really regard me as a friend?

TAKING INVENTORY

"As we take inventory of Clanton's progression, we strut down the street with our heads cocked back, our thumbs in our vest, our chest expanded, our minds so full of self-conceit, until we feel we have individually, captured the whole army, but look out, little boy, there's an old goose on the other side of the fence who might take a whack at you.

"In taking this inventory, there is no use in enumerating the various things we have done, for they have already been broadcast until we expect the whole country to brand Clanton as the most progressive little town in the State of Alabama.

All right, Mr. Bookkeeper, let's take a look at that journal: Well, this seems to be an adult town, don't we have any children? I was really expecting to see a great amount of these expenditures charged to the children—and you don't even have them listed as an asset—I thought they were our most valuable one.

"Nothing for our children, no place of diversion—swimming pool, ball park, skating rink, etc. Absolutely nothing, not even a nine months school, and no place to play even at school. How many know the condition of the Grammar School grounds?

"About two or three years ago the government paid two park supervisors. The park was located on the lodge hall grounds. Since there is no hydrant in the yard, an official was asked about the town furnishing a hydrant so the children could have drinking water. The answer was: 'I'm sorry, we can't; the children might waste the water.' Yet there are people in Clanton who get their water bills free, and water their flower garden until it looks as though it had been grown under the fountain of youth.

"I must compliment the Chilton County News on their article, 'Be Careful,' since this happens to be the first time I have ever noticed the safety of our children mentioned in a county paper, but maybe I'm just a casual reader.

"In speaking of safety, how about taking a look down the Selma Highway at the time the children go to and from school. I stand agast when I see the death traps these children are placed in by the passing traffic, which obviously gives them no concern. Dead children won't need the things Clanton or any other town has to offer them. Children should be taught to walk on the sidewalk instead of in the street, but there is no decent sidewalk from the lodge hall to the stop light. Why can't this be our next project—our children need th sidewalk. They also need a policema stationed on this street during the tim they go to and from school. I hav seen as many as three on one bicyc and, of course ,this should be prohibited.

"After all, is it not the little thin that make up life? Then surely, it time for all loving parents to co to the aid of their children, and see it that they get some consideration.

FORMER COOPER RESIDENT PASSED AWAY AT LANETT

The unexpected death of Harvey Patridge, age 27, at the Valley Hospital in Lanett, Alabama, Monday night, brought sorrow to the entire Valley, where this sterling young man was widey known and esteemed.

Funeral services were conducted Tuesday afternoon from the Baptist Church in West Point, the auditorium being completely filled with the many friends who came with relatives to pay their last tribute to the deceased.

Mr. Partridge was carried to the hospital August 2nd for an operation. Complications developed and he passed away at 9:45 Monday night.

Born near Cooper, Ala., the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Patridge, he had made his home in West Point and Lanet for almost five years, at the time of his death was employed by the Brown Service Insurance Company.

Funeral services were conducted by Rev. John W. Faulkner, assisted by Rev. L. L. Stanley.

Pallbearers were Frank Calloway, James Calloway, Lee Otis Calloway, Ed Humphrey, W. A. Norris and Jimmie Hall.

Survivors include the widow, the former Miss Frances Calloway; the mother and father, now living at Cooper; two sisters, Mrs. Ed Humphrey and Mrs. W. A. Norris.

Burial was in the West Point cemetery conducted by Johnson and Blakeley.

Prospects For Guard Unit Receives Blow

A communication from Congressman Pete Jarman this week is somewhat of a discouraging nature in that it brings news that Clanton's prospects for getting a unit of the Alabama National Guard in the near future are slim, due to recent action in Washington, affecting the entire State. Following is the communication, addressed to Alabama's Adjutant Gen. Ben Smith, a copy of which was received by the News:

"General Ben M. Smith,
'Adjutant General of Alabama,
"Montgomery, Alabama:

"When I learned of authorized increase last night I immediately thought of our application with Clanton particularly in mind, and decided to get busy on matter immediately this morning. In meantime your wire arrived.

"Called General Blanding first thing and regretted to learn that this increase is a lateral one to bring existing units toward peace strength and that it positively authorizes no new units. He states that he wished an increase of existing units to peace strength which would have required one hundred twenty thousand, but could not get this approved. He spoke of two pontoon companies recently authorized. As you know am on Blanding's staff and am now working with him on another matter. If additional units authorized believe can get him to give Alabama this Regiment if possible. Kind regards,

"PETE JARMAN."

Elizabeth Williams of Montgomery spent the week end here visiting friends and relatives.

National Youth Administration Handicraft Project To Have Exhibit At County Fair

The National Youth Administration handicraft project is planning to have a very attractive display at the County Fair of representative articles made on this project, it was announced this week by Miss Nolen Meroney, Director of the Chilton County Department of Public Welfare.

It will be recalled that through the courtesy of Mullins & Scott this group of girls presented to the public a very attractive window display during the last two weeks in July. All articles displayed at that time, as well as the ones to be displayed at the Fair, were made by the girls working on the project under supervision of Mrs. Edna W. Gilbert. These girls are taught to make garments of all sorts and to do various kinds of handwork. Scraps left from cutting are utilized for making quilt-tops, braided rugs and other useful household articles. Some of these things as well as finished garments will be on display at the Fair. The girls are also taught to use sacks and other readily available materials in the construction of garments, aprons, table linens, hot dish mats, etc.

The display at the Fair will include samplings of the work which has been accomplished by ths group since the beginning of the project on February 6th, 1939.

This project not only furnishes training to the girls employed thereon but also gives to them paid, part-time employment. The garments and other articles made by the girls on the project are turned over to the Department of Public Welfare for distribution among needy families in the county.

This project is sponsored by the Department of Public Welfare and financed by the NYA and the local Court of County Commissioners. However, much of the success of the project has been due to the whole-hearted cooperation of citizens, clubs and business establishments in Clanton and of the public at large. Machines for use on the project are furnished by NYA, and Mr. Burton Mullins, local representative of the Singer Sewing Machine Co., has cooperated by keeping the machines checked and in good order, making necessary repairs as needed. The Clanton Pilot Club has furnished materials for making layettes which are given to mothers unable to provide needed clothing for their infants.

Individuals have cooperated by lending patterns for use on the project and by offerng helpful suggestions from time to time. Leaflets, pamphlets, etc., have been made available by the Home Extension Service and County Health Department.

This is a public project sponsored by a Public Agency for the benefit of the public; and we hope that every person visiting the Fair will take time to examine this attractive display, which is being arranged in order that the public may see what is actually being accomplished by this project, of which its sponsors are, we believe, justly proud.

"The Telephone is one of the Most Valuable Pieces of Machinery on my Farm"

"I am just a medium farmer," says W. H. Haynes, of Whitesville, Kentucky, "but I've had a telephone for thirty-five or forty years. I consider it one of the most valuable pieces of machinery on my farm, as it works twenty-four hours a day. I believe any farmer makes a serious mistake when he tries to get along without a telephone."

A telephone is a top-notch hired hand on any farm. It is ready to work for you twenty-four hours a day. It will make and save money for you. It will save valuable time and expensive trips. It puts you almost in arm's reach of assistance in emergencies. Town and friends are always in quick, easy reach. The farm with a telephone is never isolated. SYNOPSIS

Beautiful, young Kay Forrest has been employed by Christine Maynard, photographer, to pose for a series of pictures, the background of which will be exquisite Cathedral Gardens, famous Southern resort. Unknown to them, one Jeff Butler, mean, unscrupulous "swamp angel," has led a friend to spy on the two women. Kay, of necessity, scantily clad while posing for the camera studies. Kay frequently stays with Mrs. Ruth Hamilton, her son Barney, of whom Kay is very fond, and her daughter Margaret. Mrs. Hamilton, a remarkable woman, conceived the idea of the Gardens following the death of her husband. One night, after a local dance, Kirk Reynolds, a ne'er-do-well gambler of Beverly, a resort town, and Kay go for a ride. Kirk's car collides with that of Harvey Jackson, and during the ensuing argument Kirk whips out a gun and kills the young, popular engineer. Kay is completely stunned by the tragedy. Kirk threatens to drag her into the thing if she tells even her father. Terror-stricken, she agrees to remain silent. However, the next time she goes out with Barney, he realizes something is wrong. She tries to reassure him, but tells him nothing. Barney is troubled by Kay's predicament, and determines to find out how to put an end to it. Mrs. Emma Forrest, Kay's mother, looks upon herself as being completely righteous. She is firm, positive and demanding. Her father is exactly the opposite, kindly and unassuming. While at home Kirk Reynolds calls for her, and she is forced to go with him despite her family's protests. He tells her the circumstances make it necessary for her to marry him.

"Then try to remember exactly what happened. Perhaps then you'll understand whether I'm fooling."

She turned frightened eyes upon him. "Is it really necessary, Kirk?"

His explanation was, to him, sufficient. It was made without interest, a mere cold statement of fact.

"In this State," said Kirk Reynolds, "a wife cannot be compelled to testify against her husband."

The preacher, a rather gaunt and unkempt individual, pronounced Kirk Reynolds and Katherine Forrest man and wife. Then, gratuitously, he intoned a long and sonorous prayer, during the course of which Kay kept her eyes fixed upon the minister's wife; a nondescript person in a long coat which had been donned hurriedly in the present emergency to cover an unceremonial wrapper. Behind her stood a grinning Negress, impressed into service as a second witness.

Kay had ceased to think. She had ceased to feel. She knew that something terrible was happening; something of awful finality. She knew the same cold fear which had paralyzed her that night on the road when a gun had spoken harshly from Kirk's hand, and now she sensed, rather than saw Kirk produce a wallet and press a bill into the far-from-unwilling palm of the preacher.

She wanted to laugh. Or to cry. She was audience and actor. It was as though she were preparing to leave the movie theater in Beverly after having suffered through a dreadful and unreal tragedy. She heard the wispered, surprised comment of the portly Negess, "Golla! Don't look as if he's even gwine kiss the bride."

When they were in the car again, headed home, Kirk drove slowly. Once he even smiled, thinly, as he said "Snap out of it, Kay."

She nodded, waiting for him to speak again.

"Do you understand why I did it?" he inquired.

"No. . . "

"Had to. You're not a bad kid, but you happened to be in the wrong place at the wrong time. Now I'm afraid Beverly is wising up."

Conversation—even this sort of conversation—was a relief. She said, "What do you mean?"

"You pulled a dumb play that night. You dropped your compact near Jackson's body."

"My compact . . . ?" She remembered missing it. "But it wasn't marked."

"Folks knew it was yours."

"It could have belonged to any tourist, couldn't it?"

"It could. But it didn't. Where'd you get it?"

She said, "Barney Hamilton gave it to me."

"I thought so. None like it in Beverly. Swank stuff. And there's not a woman in town who hasn't noticed it. I only found out yesterday it had been pickel up—out there."

"They—they couldn't prove it was mine."

"They could try," he stated dryly.

"But I promised you I'd never tell what I saw."

"Sure you did. You'd have been too wise to blab. But you're a kid. Smart enough in some ways, but dumb as hell in others. The Solicitor for this circuit is shrewd. He's been asking questions. Lots of folks remember we were at the dance together and that we went riding that night. If you had been picked up suddenly and had a bucketful of questions thrown at you, you'd have given yourself away."

"But can't they still do that?"

'Sure. And where would it get 'em. You might even be tricked into telling the truth. Not meaning to, of course. But what good would it do? What you tell the Solicitor ain't evidence in this State. They've got to get it out of you on the witness stand, and they can't make you take the stand against me—now that we're married."

"You think they'll try you for killing Harvey Jackson?"

"Not now they won't. No witnesses. Couldn't possibly convict me."

"But if they're sure . . ."

"They're never sure. And if they were, that ain't evidence. You're the only person who could convict me. And you won't."

She was silent for a long time. Then, "What are you going to do now, Kirk?"

"Abou what?"

"Us."

He shrugged indifferently. "Nothing."

"You mean . . ."

"Living together Hell—I didn't marry you for that. So long as you keep your mouth shut, you can do what you want."

The Youth in Business

By C. E. Johnston

Dean, School of Business International Correspondence Schools

THE young man in business who expects advancement should ask himself "Do I seek responsibility or do I merely brag about the things I will do and the decisions I will make when the right opportunities occur? Do I, in fact, leave the carrying out of hard jobs to others in the department and keep silent when assistance in solving problems is needed by others?" Leaders of business enterprises owe their present positions to the fact that they early demonstrated that they could bear responsibility and carry through difficult jobs.

Someone has said that to "stand out" in a group of workers, a man must first learn to "stand up." By this he meant that a man attracts the favorable attention of his superiors by showing ability to deal with difficult situations. It may be embarrassing to make a mistake, but the man who lets fear of embarrassment deter him from accepting responsibility will get nowhere.

The man who knows one thing well may be able to hold his job, but the individual who knows many things is the one who will be promoted when the opportunity occurs. Advancement comes to the man who already knows the duties of the job ahead. The devoting of part of one's spare time to study should not be regarded as a hardship, but as a privilege. The right use of one's leisure is perhaps the most important factor in business success.

TRUTH about ADVERTISING

By CHARLES B. ROTH

FINE GOLD

IF YOU want to discover the humanizing influence of advertising, one of the extra dividends it pays you every time you buy, make this experiment:

First go into the store of a merchant who doesn't advertise; it probably won't be a very large store. Next go into the store of a merchant who does. See where you receive the most courteous, the most attractive, the most gracious service and treatment.

Charles Roth

One of the big truths of advertising is that it not only saves you money when you buy, but also makes your buying more pleasant.

The merchant who advertises has an obligation to uphold—the obligation of fair prices and better service. This obligation becomes the ideal of his business. Whatever the advertising says about his goods and his store he feels he must provide. As a result, the intangible influence of the printed word makes itself felt in the courtesy, consideration and desire to serve of every member of his organization.

You may have noticed that when a store begins to advertise something takes place. Its employees, clear down to the delivery boy, become seized with the inspiration the advertising has set up.

The reason for this influence of advertising is not hard to find. The advertiser is a leader, and every leader has an obligation.

You as a customer benefit greatly by this indirect value of advertising. You benefit in additional courtesy, additional consideration and in the additional value you receive for your money, because advertising has always been the one means by which prices have been brought down.

The merchant who advertises sets himself up as a price and quality standard for the community. You buy from him and receive the most for your money. And you also receive the most in human values—in what a wise man once called "the fine gold of business."

The time when business is the pleasantest is when a fine sense of mutual confidence exists between buyer and seller. In helping bring this feeling about, newspaper advertising contributes something to business which is of as much value as its practical services.

It contributes a mutuality of feeling that gives business a character and a trust that nothing can replace. Fine gold, you know.

HEALTH OFFICER ADVOCATES BLOOD TEST LAW

Indorsement by the local Health Department of legislation now pending in the State Legislature making laboratory tests for syphilis compulsory for both men and women before marriage was announced early this week by Dr. S. D. Sturkie, County Health Officer. The new law was described by the Health Officer as a great forward step in Alabama's campaign to control the spread of syphilis. The Chilton County Medical Society also has gone on record as favoring the passage of the bill, according to Dr. Sturkie who serves as the Secretary of the Society. "Hon. Percy M. Pitts, Chilton County's Representative, has been notified of the Society's action," Dr. Sturkie said.

In commenting on the new law, the Health Officer made the following statement: "Under Section 1 of the new law every applicant for marriage must file with the probate judge a certifificate from a physician to the effect that he or she does not have a venereal disease. Section 2 requires that a certificate from a laboratory that a blood test has been made must accompany the physician's statement. Section 5 requires that the probate judge must attach a copy of these certificates to the license. Ministers are forbidden to perform the ceremony unless said certificates are attached.

If either prospective husband or wife have a venereal disease on joint application a license may be issued provided a state of emergency can be proven as in the case of impending death for either party. On request by a physician, the County Health Officer will perform the examination free. Blood tests must be made 60 days prior to the application for license."

This law would prevent such unfortunate incidents as the following which actually happened in an Alabama county: "A prospective husband latent syphilis went to a physician a marriage certificate. Because of haste of the applicant and the abs of any external signs of the disease doctor issued the young man a c ficate to the effect that he had venereal disease. The marriage consummated. Later a child was with signs of syphillis. The wife examined and of course was foun have syphilis contracted from her band. A blood test of the prospe husband would have prevented th fection of these two innocent vic the wife and the baby."

Former Chilton County Man Is Subject Of Article In Wood County, Texas, Pa

EDITOR'S NOTE—We are indebted to Mr. G. W. Willis, well known and respected citizen of North Clanton, for this article, which is about a former Chilton County man, J. R. Connell, who resided here some years ago. The following article appeared in the Wood County Democrat, under the heading "Sidelights On Wood Countyites":

J R. Connell, 68, was born in Coosa County, Alabama, May 5, 1871, the son of W. M. and Sara Connell. His father died in 1892 and his mother passed away in 1902.

Connell the youngest of six brothers, spent his early life splitting rails and building fences. Also much time was spent filling looms for his mother to weave cloth to make clothing for the children to wear to the three months school. He says that his wardrobe when a boy consisted of two pairs of pants, one dyed with copperas, the other with walnut bark.

In January, 1893, Mr. Connell came to Texas with his brother, the late Dr. R. O. Connell, and went to work in the Pine Mills community on the farm of J.K.P. Davis, later he operated a general mercantile store for several years and then returned to the farm.

A member of the Christian Church, he has been active in the religious and civic life of the Pine Mills community since the day he arrived there and is at present Precinct Chairman for the Democratic party, a post he has held for many years.

As a hobby, Mr. Connell says fishing must be it, as he likes to fish, however, he claims that in some manner or other he has not been able to figure out the kind of bait that the fish like best. He also likes totravel a lot so not long ago he took a trip back to the old home place in Alabama and visited the old church where his mother once taught a Sunday school class.

J. R. CONNELL

In 1896, Mr. Connell was mar Miss Letha Davis, daughter of J.K.P. Davis. They have two son tis Connell of Greenwood, L Woodrow of Quitman. Three ers: Mrs. H. V. Puckett of Q Mrs. J. C. Collins of Los Angele anl Mrs. Dillie Walker of Rode

At the present time Mr. Co enjoying the best of health at hi in Pine Mills, reading a great d thinking about the future and th He says the county and the c a whole needs to put in more ti ing the bell cord over old Be Pete, instead of sitting around w on boxes and benches and talk the Government.

"Could—could we keep it secret?"

"Certainly not. I want people to know. In fact, that's the big idea—so they'll understand that there's no use trying to convict me."

Her thoughts were chaotic. Fragments of ideas. She said, I"I wish I hadn't married you."

The car slowed perceptibly. He said, "You're not really damn fool enough to wish that."

His words were not harsh. He merely made a statement. He went on. "You do whatever you want. I'll do the same. If anybody questions you, you don't know a thing. You've got nothing to to say."

Kirk was speaking. "I'm dropping you at your house. There's no need repeating anything. Just remember this: keep your guard up all the time."

"But when they ask why?"

"Tell 'em anything. They'll know you're lying—but they won't know the truth. And that's all that matters with me."

There was a car parked in front of her house. A small car. Barney was waiting.

CHAPTER V

Barney drove slowly through the traffic which congested Monument Square. They passed the White Star Hotel, gay in its new yellow paint with white trimmings, and they rolled by the Bon Ton Pool Room before swinging into Palmetto Avenue. Kay said, "Drop me at Dad's office, will you, Barney?"

The young man's face was grave. He said, "Certainly, Shall I go up with you?"

"No." She left the car and mounted the narrow dusty stairway leading to the second floor of the Fraser Block, that rambling four-story, red-brick structure which served, after a fashion, as Beverly's one and only office building.

Barney gazed upon this section of Beverly with some distaste. As a matter of fact, he was far from happy. He had passed Kay and Kirk Reynolds on the road that morning. He had been waiting at Kay's home when she had returned with the same man. And Barney didn't like Kirk Reynolds. Not that he was at all shocked by the fact that Kirk was a black sheep, a gambler and a gentleman of flexible morals . . . but he knew that Kirk was different and picturesque, and that Kay was young and impressionable.

He waited, it seemed, interminably. The day was ending in a blaze of crimson. He began to fancy himself a very injured young man. He donned a mantle of dignity . . . and discarded it the instant Kay appeared on the sidewalk and climbed into the car beside him.

He saw that she had been crying. It was then that he forgot that he had been ill treated. Kay Forrest crying! It was impossible. It disturbed him profoundly.

He reached over and squeezed her hand. "Have a good time, Duchess?"

She nodded, but the little lump in her throat made speech impossible. Barney plunged ahead, hoping to arouse her. He gestured boyishly toward the radiance which was bathing the countryside.

"Our best and most guaranteed sunset. Positively genuine, or your money refunded. Service free to tourists and patrons of Catherdral Gardens. Particularly interesting on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. Ladies' Day Tuesday . . . gee! Kay, isn't there some way I can help?"

It was sudden. Abrupt. Devastatingly kindly—this change from banter to sympathy. Kay's defenses crumbled. Her voice broke and she said, "Oh, Barney . . ."

He drove with one hand, holding her arm with the other.

"Is it as bad as that, Chica?"

She tried to talk, but the words would not come. Unconsciously, she moved closer to him, so that her body touched his. Then she spoke, without taking tear-dimmed eyes from the road. She said, simply, "I love you, Barney."

His face lighted. He clamped on the brakes and stopped the car. But when his arms reached for her, she moved away. The eyes which she turned upon him were filled with tragedy, and she said, "No. Not that. I—I just wanted you to know."

Puzzled, perturbed, he drove on—though very, very slowly. His voice was almost a whisper.

"I love you, too, Kay. But you've known that for a long time, haven't you?" And she answered, "Yes."

by the Alabama Power Company.

Nix-Aldridge

Last Friday night Miss Margie Aldridge of Clanton and Jasper, and Mr O. H. Nix were married in Clanton. Mrs. Nix is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Aldridge, who have recently moved to Jasper from Clanton. Mr. Nix is warehouse manager for the Elmore Five and Ten Stores here, and they will make their home in Clanton. Friends of this popular couple are extending congratulations.

Norris-Harris

The marriage of Miss Elizabeth Harris of Clanton to Mr. C. L. Norris of Montgomery, was solemnized at 5:00 P.M. Saturday, September 9, at the home of the Reverend Hunt in Prattville.

Mrs. Norris is the popular daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Harris of Clanton. Mr. Norris is a native of Mt. Creek and is well known here.

The bride wore a pidgeon blue crepe dress with black accessories and a corsage of sweetheart roses. After a short-wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Norris will make their home in Montgomery.

Hand-Dennis

Mr. E. B. Dennis of Cooper, announces the marriage of his daughter, Esther Lee, to Herschel Hand of Birmingham. The wedding took place September 9.

The bride attended the Chilton County High School where she was popular among her schoolmates. Mr. Hand is the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Hand of Birmingham, formerly of Clanton. They will make their home in Birmingham.

Wagoner-Smith

The marriage of Mrs. Harrison Smith, widow of the late Harrison Smith of Cooper, to Mr. Ed Wagoner, Clanton barber, was an event of Sunday morning. Elder J. S. Kelley performed the ceremony in the presence of a few relatives and friends, at the home of Mr. Oscar Kelley in Cooper.

CIRCLE SIX MET

Mrs. J. W. Fant was hostess to Circle Six of the Clanton Baptist W.M.U. Monday afternoon.

The meeting was opened by singing "Jesus Keep Me Near The Cross," after which Mrs. Willie Bean led in prayer. Those taking part on the program were Mrs. F. H. Spicer, Mrs. Wallace Wood and Mrs. J. W. Fant.

Two new members, Mrs. Charlie Breedlove and Mrs. E. B. Simpson, were welcomed into the Circle.

A short business session was held after which a social hour was enjoyed.

Eleven members were present.

CORRECTION OF TWO ERRORS

In last week's issue of the News there was a very embarrassing error in the list of marriage licenses. The names of Frederick Dunlap and Miss Thelma White appeared in the "Colored" section of the list. This error was made due to the fact that this last minute addition was phoned to the News office by he Judge of Probate office, and instead of placing the names in the proper place they were, by mistake, added to the bottom of the list, which happened to be the colored section. We offer our apologies to the parties concerned, and we are glad to make this correction.

Week before last another error, which also happened to prove very embarrassing to several persons, appeared in an article pertaining to a program rendered at a recent meeting of the Clanton Pilot Club. Mrs. Oscar A. Davis was guest speaker at this meeting and her subject was "Women, A Force In Community Affairs." However, an "a" crept into the "force" and crowded out the "o", and one can well see how that proved embarrassing to the Pilot Club members and Mrs. Davis. We humbly apologize to these ladies, and are deeply indebted to them for sparing our lives thus far.

GRAND JURY

large trucks are not using due caution in passing and meeting school buses that are operating on the public highways of the county. Many of those school buses are crowded with children of all ages and when trucks and motor vehicles meet and pass such buses at a rapid rate of speed, lives of the children are jeopardized. We wish to urge the Sheriff and his deputies, and all other officers of the law, to be alert for violation of the laws with reference to these school buses and to make cases against anyone violating such laws. We call upon the citizenship of the county to be on the alert and to cooperate and aid the Sheriff and his deputies in the enforcement of this law.

The Grand Jury wishes especially to thank your honor for the very able charge given us when we were first empanelled as it has been most helpful to us throughout all our investigations.

Sheriff Culp and his deputies and Mr. Albert Culp, the Grand Jury Bailiff, were most courteous to us during our investigations and rendered us valuable assistance in the dispatch of the busines before us, all of which we greatly appreciate.

We, having complied to the best of our ability with your honor's charge, respectfully ask that we now be dismay see fit and think proper to have missed until such time as your honor us again convene.

This September 8th, 1939.

NEW SALEM CHURCH

The New Salem Social will meet Thursday, September 14th at 2:00 o'clock. All members are urged to attend.

STUDY CLUB ENTERTAINED

The Study Club of Clanton entertained on Friday, September 1, at a luncheon at one o'clock at the home of Mrs. John Mullins, General Chairman.

The guests of honor were the incoming officers and project chairmen. Sharing honors was Mrs. Horton Walker, who has been president for the past year. Mrs. Walker and Mrs. Hugh Jones, the president of the club for the coming year, introduced the speakers and project chairmen, who gave splendid outlines of the new club year, which will embrace a study of problems of the South.

The guests were seated at small tables centered with crystal baskets holding white carnations ,the club flower. The menu and place cards carried out the club colors of white and green, and the decorations throughout the spacious home were confined to this color scheme, in a profusion of white dahlias, carnations and clematis.

War—

There has been so much written and aid about the second World War, hat we feel our say could throw little ight on the situation, but one thing e noticed is that, according to Dr. eorge Gallup, Director of the Ameri- an Institute of Public Opinion, there as been no rising public sentiment ince the outbreak of the war over that several months prior to the con- lict, regarding our participation in the ffray. Dr. Gallup says that a poll five onths ago showed that 84 per cent the U. S. population were opposed sending our Army and Navy to the id of the Allies in case of war, while per cent favored such a move. A poll ince the outbreak of hostilities shows his percentage still stands. The Gallup oll, however, shows that if the Allies ppeared to be losing within the next ew months, public sentiment would ncrease, but even if this should occur, persons out of every 100 are not favor of declaring war on Germany, hile the other 44 would favor partici- ation. We say let public sentiment ntinue to show a majority inclined to av clear of that holocaust.

n Entering A Theatre—

Without a doubt you have noticed hat there is a difference when it comes entering a theatre in the afternoon d entering one at night. That is, if u are a theatre-goer, you have. A rson's eyesight is adjusted to the rkness when he first walks into a rkened theatre at night, but not so hen one attends a matinee. Some- nes the difference is very striking— d very embarrassing. That embarrass- ent may be credited to the fact that u felt pretty sure there was no one ting in that seat you had picked out, t then, that's a mighty dark place, ecause your eyes haven't had time become adjusted to the sudden con- ast between sunlight and darkness. t you take the chance and ease into d seat—and then it's "oh, I beg your rdon." That place is occupied and you are a gentleman and the seat is cupied by a lady—well, that's really barrassing. If on the other hand, you e a lady and the seat is occupied by gentleman . . . now that IS em- rrassing.

We've seen just that happen in the al theatres, but at the same time, see no need for such occurrences, en the addition of one or two ushers the staff of our two Wadesonian eatres during the few matinee show- s each week, would be such a help preventing this. Take a tip from us, arles It's a laughter-provoking oc- if you're safely seated and another fellow commit himself— if you're that other fellow, believe when we say we KNOW—it's funny.

ne night not long ago an auto- ccident occurred at the inter- tion one block east of the court- se, which caused us to take note of necessity of a traffic light at this nt. This accident occurred because her of the two cars involved stop- or even slowed down when they proached the intersection. Since ny of the streets over the city have n paved, this will cause autos to el faster, with more traffic on many ets. This particular spot is right town, and would get our vote for installation of a light. There are er intersections over the city that ht well call for some sort of traffic ulator. But we will not overlook which has already been done in respect within the past few weeks. stop signs have been placed at intersection of the street leading n the Grammar School and the Map- ille Highway, and wil lno doubt ce the danger at this point.

y Need And Deserve Our Support—hose twelve 4-H Club boys who are ning to enter beef stock in the Fat k Show and Sale in Montgomery Spring are deserving of the sup- of the older people of our County. clearly shows that these boys are rested in that which makes every ty go forward. They need and ld have our encouragement and They are starting out on some- that might ultimately lead to a extensive production of beef in ton County. This could easily be ched to dairying, for the theory has advanced that Chilton is more pted to the dairy industry than the -producing industry. For some time County Health Department has sed the need of one or more grade airies near Clanton to serve the cossumers here. There is not enough dairy cattle throughout county to serve the home demands of course, there is always the pos- y of developing foreign markets airy products. Anyway, we should ever be on the aleart to aid and encourage the boys and girls of 4-H Club age.

Flower Garden Quiz—

Publisher Mark Tucker tells us that he is gratified at the splendid show of interest in the Flower Garden Quiz sponsored by the News, which recently closed. A great deal of interest was shown by participants in the contest. We see no reason why a flower garden club of some kind could not be organized among the growers of this section. We're certainly looking forward to the flower exhibit at the County Fair next week. We predict this will be one of the most interesting departments of the Fair.

CONTRACT FOR NEW SCHOOL AWARDED MON.

CULLMAN CONTRACTOR IS LOW BIDDER ON NEW COUNTY HIGH SCHOOL PLANT

Supt. of Education Rascoe Maddox announced Monday afternoon of this week that the contract for the erection of a new Chilton County High School was awarded Monday to P. S. Duckworth, contractor of Cullman, Alabama. The bid was $89,250.

The Board of Education had previously asked for bids on a somewhat larger building, but rejected all bids submitted and asked for bids after several changes had been made in the plans.

It is understood that work will be- future. The building will have 18 class- gin on the new plant in the near rooms, including laboratory, etc., study hall and principal's office. A large gymnasium will adjoin the main plant. An auditorium was not included in the plans but this addition will probably be made at some later date. Failure to secure Federal aid caused the Board to leave off this part of the structure. The building will be located on the site of the old one, it was learned.

HOWARD ROPER RE-APPOINTED COUNTY LICENSE INSPECTOR

Howard Roper, who has served for some time past as license inspector of this County, received notice this week from the State Department that he had been re-appoined inspector of this county and also of Coosa County. Mr. Roper will assume these duties immediately.

FALL TERM OF CIRCUIT COURT NEXT WEEK

MANY CASES SET FOR WEEK BEGINNING MONDAY, CONTINUING THROUGH FRIDAY

The regular Fall term of the Chilton County Circuit Criminal Court has been set for next week, beginning Monday, with cases set through Friday, according to the office of Circuit Clerk J. C. Pattillo; Circuit Judge Arthur Glover will preside on the bench with Solicitor Winston Huddleston prosecution for the state.

Two cases of first degree murder are included on the docket. These are: Coleman Reed, negro, charged with the murder of another negro, and Virgil Headley, charged with the murder of Lorenza Mims, Pleasant Grove community farmer, last July. Both these cases have been set for Thursday.

Gypsy Ann Boyd Wins National Riding Honor

Gypsy Ann Boyd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Glenn Boyd, formerly of Clanton and now of Selma, had her name spread across a whole page of the Selma Times-Journal Monday, on account of honors she and her horse "Cotton Stockings" had heaped upon them at Louisville, Ky., on Saturday, Sept. 16. She won the World's five-gaited $300 pony championship at the Kentucky State Fair horse show.

The little Miss was said to have had the plaudits of the crowd of 6,000 spectators from the first spin around the tanbark pavilion. Cotton Stockings, in capturing the world's title, defeated a sterling class of twelve five-gaited ponies from many stables.

Gypsy Ann's championship climaxed an already brilliant record set by the young Selma rider on several of the country's biggest circuits. Another Selma girl winning honors at Louisville was Margaret Tillman, who is to ride on Thursday night at the State Fair in Nashville, Tenn.

Both Gypsy Ann Boyd and Margaret Tillman will ride in the Selma Horse Show to be staged there on Thursday. October 5th.

Letter From Pitts And Harrison

"To The People Of Chilton County:

"As your representative and senator we feel that we should give an account of our stewardship pertaining to the three local bills which were endorsed by an overwhelming vote of the people of Chilton County, namely: The Inferior Court Bill, the repeal of the local County Agent Bill and the County Solicitor Bill.

"We have passed a bill creating an Inforior Court and we have repealed the local County Agent Bill.

"Unfortunately no time was mentioned in the proposition submitted to the people on making the office of County Solicitor elective, as to when it should take effect. Your Representative has taken the position that it should take effect no late than the next general election, and passed through the House of Representatives a bill to that effect. Your Senator has taken the position that it should take effect at the expiration of your present County Solicitor's appointive term of office, and informed your Representative that he would not pass a bill through the Senate to make this change become effective prior to the expiration of your County Solicitor's appointive term, which expires in January, 1943. Whereupon your Representative passed your Senator's Bill which makes this change take effect January, 1943. Under this law in November, 1942, the voters of Chilton County will have the opportunity of electing Chilton County's next County Solicitor.

City Officers Capture Escaped Convict

A man about 25 years of age who gave his name as Robert Cliett, and who admitted he was an escaped convict from the Lawrence County Public Works Camp of Dublin, Ga., was captured by City Officers Arthur Willis and B. R. Plyler last Sunday night about 11:00.

A motorist stopped at the Teel Selvice Station Sunday night and stated that the driver of a Chevrolet automobile had apparently been trying to force him off the road for several miles before they reached Clanton. The Chevrolet also stopped at the service station for a few moments, but drove away toward Birmingham. The City officers gave chase and overtook the car just north of the City, where it was parked by the side of another auto. Occupants of the Ford made their escape, but the driver of the Chevrolet was taken into custody by the officers and on being placed in jail is said to have confessed that he had escaped from the Georgia prison.

The occupants of the car who made their getaway, apparently were accomplices of the convict.

Cliett stated, it is said, that he had escaped from the prison camp the previous Sunday. No contact had been made with the Georgia authorities at the time of this writing, while Cliett remains in the county jail here.

FRUIT GROWERS CALLED TO MEET TO BUY TREES, PLANTS

R. M. Roper, president of Clanton Berry Growers Association, announced that a final meeting of growers of the County who wished to purchase cooperatively berry plants or fruit trees, will be held next Saturday at their warehouse in Clanton. Those interested are urged to be on hand.

FORMER CLANTON LADY VISITING RELATIVES HERE

Mrs. Charles Becker, formerly known as Mrs. Tom Parrish, of Ambler, Pa., is visiting her daughter, Mrs. James Arnold of Clanton.

Mrs. Becker has been in Pennsylvania for some time and her many friends in Clanton and Chilton County are glad to see her again.

TWO ENTER RACE FOR JUDGE INFERIOR COURT

A. B. FOSHEE AND RAYMOND MIMS ASK FOR PLACE AS JUDGE OF NEW COURT

Announcing that they are candidates for the office of Judge of the new Inferior Law Court of this County, are two of Clanton's leading young attorneys, A. B. (Buster) Foshee, and Raymond Mims.

A special election for the purpose of selecting a judge for this Court, created with the signature of Governor Dixon recently, has been set for Tuesday, October 24. This office was created to take care of all minor cases in the County courts. The bill was introduced and passed through the Legislature by Representative Percy Pitts and Senator Karl Harrison, after a popular vote was held on the question.

Mr. Foshee is a native of this County. He is a graduate of the Chilton County High School and holds a law degree. He has practiced law in Clanton for the past several years, and has made a decided success of his practice.

Mr. Mims is also a native of this County and holds a law degree from the University of Alabama. He has practiced law in Tuscaloosa, but for the past several months he has been one of Clanton's leading practicing attorneys. He is also manager of the Thomason Hotel here, the son of J. Z. Mims former Circuit Clerk.

OLD FASHIONED REVIVAL AT STANTON WESLEYAN CHURCH

Octobr 20—Sylacauga, there.
October 27—Montevallo, there.
November 3—Wetumpka ,here.
November 10—Holtville, there.
November 17—Columbiana, there.

The Tigers are looking good this season, and Coach Spicer is expecting his boys to give any opposing team a good scrap, one that will be rendered on a high plane of sportsmanship.

Some of the players back again this year and of which much is expected, are as follows:

Askins, Carl Cooper, Lavern Cooper, J. W. Johnson, Lester Jones, Bobby Newton Earl Melton Hubert Williams, Wallace Headley and Charles Thomas.

Boys lost by last graduation are as follows:

Armstrong, Thornton, Locklear, Taylor, and McDowell.

New boys who should make the team ths year:

J. W. Chambers, J. A. Guice, Jr., from Greenville, Alabama, Osmond Johnson Arthur Nelson, Cecil Powell, Cecil Smelcer, James Sides, J. W. Williams, W. Collins F. C. Cost and Guy Higgins.

COUNTY FAIR TO OPEN TUESDAY

Large Number Of Exhibits And More Prizes Will Make This Year's Fair More Interesting Than Last

With time drawing near for the third annual Chilton County Fair, officials in charge have expressed the belief that this year's undertaking will truly be one that will bear out the slogan "Bigger and Better," with the most complete assortment of all that goes to make a fair what the word implies, ready for the public eye. When the gates to the enclosure swing open next Tuesday, September 26, at Gragg Field, those attending will be privileged to see "Chilton County On Parade."

According to J. Mell Martin, secretary of the Fair Association, everything is in readiness. Space for exhibits and displays have practically all been filled. Besides the spacious hangar at the airport, two tents will be on the grounds. In the hangar will be found the Handicraft exhibits, the flower exhibits, which is a new feature this year, and [illegible] displays including commercial exhibits.

In the larger tent will be the Agricultural exhibits, which will consume a large portion of the tent, with the remainder being devoted to [illegible] exhibits. This tent will house many interesting displays.

Another tent has been set aside for the poultry exhibits under the direction of J. Hollis Jackson, teacher of vocational agriculture at the Chilton County High School. This department will be larger than last year, with prizes being offered for almost every type of poultry.

And of course there will be the livestock exhibits. The large barn erected last year will house the livestock, with probaby an addition being made to the shelter.

The midway this year will be the best

P.-T.A. To Sponsor School Of Instruction

All officers of the local Parent-Teachers Associations of Chilton County are urged to be present for the School of Instruction to be held at the Clanton City Hall on September 22, beginning promptly at 9:30 o'clock.

Helpful instruction is promised and State workers will take part on the program.—Mrs. Walter McNeil.

PILOTS TO HAVE EAT, DRINK STAND AT FAIR NEXT WEEK

The Clanton Pilot Club, which is assisting in a big way in putting over the Chilton County Fair here next week, have announced that they will have an eat and drink stand on the grounds, serving sandwiches and other eats, also a variety of soft drinks. The public is invited to keep in mind that the Pilots are sponsoring this stand, and that the proceeds will go for a good cause.

REMAINDER OF COUNTY SCHO'LS OPEN OCTOBER 3

LIST OF TEACHERS FOR THESE SCHOOLS GIVEN; INSTITUTE TO BE HELD OCTOBER 2

Announcement was made this week that the institute for white teachers of this county will be held at the Courthouse on Monday, October 2, beginning at 9:00 o'clock. All schools which have not already opened will open on Tuesday, October 3. The institute for negro teachers will be held on Saturday, September 30, at the Chilton County Training School.

A list of teachers for those schools opening Tuesday, October 3, is as follows:

Verbena Elementary—F. H. Robinson, Mrs. Annie J. DuBose, Mrs. Lucy E. Pattillo, Mrs. Myra M. Bradley, Mrs. Arah P. Stanley.

Baker—John M. Parrish, Woodfin

HAPPY HAL BYRNES TO BE HERE

Happy Hal Byrnes and his Cross Roads Follies will be at the Courthouse next Saturday night, September 23 at 8:00 o'clock P.M. Their appearance is being sponsored by the Clanton Ball Team, it was announced.

Kiwanians To Meet At Thorsby Tonight

The Clanton Kwanis Club is scheduled to meet at Thorsby for their regular meeting tonight at 7:30, at which time Senator Lister Hill was slated to speak on "Individual Bill of Rights As Guaranteed By The American Constitution," as this is Constitution Week, but due to the fact that a special session of Congress has been called, it is doubtful that he will be able to attend. A supply speaker will be furnished in case Senator Hill cannot attend, it was announced.

The meeting will be held in the Thorsby City Park with Thorsby business and professional men and farmers as guests of the Club. The program will be in charge of County Agent J. W. Fant, and a good attendance is expected.

Last Thursday night members of the Club enjoyed a most interesting program under the direction of County Health Officer S. D. Sturkie. Dr. Sturkie gave many interesting facts regarding County Health work in this County, and also talked on the history of County Health work. Fred H. Buckelew, County Sanitation Officer, also showed a film pertaining to hookworm disease and how it may be controlled. The film was very interesting. Chilton County has a thirty-five per cent infestation among its school children, Dr. Sturkie pointed out, and the program of control in the County is one of major importance.

COMMITTEE MEETING

A meeting of the Executive Committee of the Chilton County Association is called to meet at the Clanon Baptist Church Friday night, September 22 at 7:30 o'clock. Please all members be present.—G. G. Williams.

Yesterday-Today-Tomorrow

(An Editorial)

Yesterday we Americans sat complacently under our own vine and fig tree, surrounded by a super-aboundance of all those material things which make for contentment, happiness and the general well-being of mankind.

In our self-satisfaction we were wholly oblivious of the fact that from the expenditure of billions of dollars for education, both high and low, we had signally failed to develop and train the minds of our youth in the [illegible] of healthy thinking to a degree of efficiency whereby this gracious [illegible] might be so distributed that blessed happiness could attend everyone.

Today, as Congress convenes on, what history may record as the most solemn, and the most important in its entire existence, it is confronted by three great problems, which its members and they alone must solve. On one side are ten million hungry, undernourished, ill-clad, ill-housed Americans, surrounded by plenty of all needed things, but without the necessary wherewith with which to buy, even the meager necessities of life—although good citizens of the richest Nation the World has ever known. On another side are lined up a clamoring crowd of the Nation's greedy, over-wealthy individuals, companies and corporations, whose sole aim in life is to add more dollars to their already too large selfishly-acquired pile. The Devil whispers through the tongues of the munitions manufiacturers, the profiteers the racketteers: "Let us sell munitions to all belligerents, let us double and treble our profits, let us increase our thievery and racketteering—then abundance of everything will automatically distribute itself to every needy creature."

Tomorrow, those who govern our Nation will think soberly and solemnly on these things, on the malice, covetousness and hatreds of other peoples, on the carnage of war and its attendant pestilence in other lands—then each one will realize that he is face-to-face with the greatest problem of all—Duty and Obligation: to ourselves as a Nation, to our philosophy of life, to our Christian civilization, to our neighbors throughout the World, neutral and belligerent alike.

Verily, to our President, to the people, to the Congress of the United States of America, has come unbidden the sacred task of saving a badly disorganized world family from its own folly, lest the Laws of Jehovah and the Light of Christianity perish from the [illegible]

Lindbergh Says Stay Out Of War

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, recently returned from Europe where he has been residing for the past few years, and who is perhaps better posted on European conditions than any other American, speaking over a nationwide radio hookup Friday night said:

In times of great emergency, men of the same belief must gather together for mutual council and action. If they fail to do this, all that they stand for will be lost. I speak Friday night to those people in the United States of America who feel that the destiny of this country does not call for our involvement in European wars.

We must band together to prevent the loss of more American lives in these internal struggles of Europe. We must keep foreign propaganda from pushing our country blindly into war. Modern war with all its consequences is too tragic and too devastating to be approached from anything but a purely American standpoint. We should never enter a war unless it is absolutely essential to the future welfare of our nation.

This country was colonized by men and women from Europe. The hatreds, the persecutions, the intrigues they left behind, gave them courage to cross the Atlantic Ocean to a new land. They preferred the wilderness and the Indians to the problems of Europe. They weighed the cost of freedom from those problems, and then paid the price. In this country, they eventually found a means of living peacefully together—the same nationalities that are fighting abroad today. The quarrels of Europe faded out from American life as generations passed. Instead of wars between the English, French, and Germans, it became a struggle of the New World for freedom from the old—a struggle for the right of America to find her own destiny. The colonization of this country grew from European troubles and our freedom sprang from European war; for we won independence from England while she was fighting France.

No one foresaw the danger ahead of us more clearly than George Washington. He solemnly warned the people of America against becoming entangled in European alliances. For over 100 years his advice was followed. We established the Monroe Doctrine for America. We let other nations fight among themselves. Then, in 1917, we entered a European war. This time we were on England's side, and so were France and Russia. Friends and enemies reverse as decades pass—as political doctrines rise and fall.

The great war ended before our full force had reached the field. We escaped with the loss of relatively few soldiers. We measured our dead in thousands. Europe measured her's in millions. Europe has not yet recovered from the effects of this war and she has already entered another. A generation has passed since the Armistice of 1918, but even in America we are still paying for our part in that victory—and we will continue to pay for another generation. European countries were both unable and unwilling to pay their debts to us.

Now that war has broken out again, we in America have a decision to make on which the destiny of our nation depends. We must decide whether or not we intend to become forever involved in this age-old struggle between the nations of Europe. Let us not delude ourselves. If we enter the quarrels of Europe during war, we must stay in them in time of peace as well. It is madness to send our soldiers to be killed as we did in the last war if we turn the course of peace over to the greed, the fear, and the intrigue of European nations. We must either keep out of European wars entirely or stay in European affairs permanently.

In making our decision, this point should be clear: These wars in Europe are not wars in which our civilization is defending itself against some Asiatic intruder. There is no Genghis Kahn or Xerxes marching against our Western nations. This is not a question of banding together to defend the white race against foreign invasion. This is simply one more of those age-old quarrels within our own family of nations—a quarrel arising from the errors of the last war—from the failure of the victors of that war to follow a consistent policy either of fairness or of force.

Arbitrary boundaries can only be maintained by strength of arms. The treaty of Versailles either had to be revised as time passed, or England and France, to be successful, had to keep Germany weak by force. Neither policy was followed; Europe wavered back and forth between the two. As a result, another war has begun, a war which is likely to be far more prostrating than the last, a war which will again kill off the best youth of Europe, a war which may even lead to the end of our Western civilization.

We must not permit our sentiment, our pity or our personal feelings of sympathy, to obscure the issue, to affect our children's lives. We must be as impersonal as a surgeon with his knife. Let us make no mistake about the cost of entering this war. If we take part successfully, we must throw the resources of our entire nation into the conflict, munitions alone will not be enough. We cannot count on victory merely by shipping abroad several thousand airplanes and cannon. We are likely to lose a million men, possibly several million—the best of American youth. We will be staggering under the burden of recovery during the rest of our lives. And our children will be fortunate if they see the end in their lives, even if, by some unlikely chance, we do not pass on another Polish Corridor to them. Democracy itself may not survive. If we enter fighting for democracy abroad, we may end by losing it at home.

America has little to gain by taking part in another European war. We must not be misguided by this foreign propaganda to the effect that our frontiers lie in Europe. One need to only glance at a map to see where our true frontiers lie. What more could we ask than the Atlantic Ocean on the east and the Pacific on the west? No, our interests in Europe need not be from the standpoint of defense, our own natural frontiers are enough for that. If we extend them to the center of Europe, we might as well extend them aroun dthe earth. An ocean is a formidable barrier, even for modern aircraft.

Our safety does not lie in fighting European wars. It lies in our own internal strength, in the character of the American people and of American institutions. As long as we maintain an army, a navy, and an air force worthy of the name, as long as America does not decay within, we need fear no invasion of this country.

Again, I address those among you who agree with this stand. Our future and our children's future depends upon the action we take. It is essential to think clearly and to act quickly in the days which are to come. We will be deluged with propaganda, both foreign and domestic—some obvious, some insidious. Much of our news is already colored. Every incident and every accident will be seized upon to influence us And in a modern war there are bound to be plenty of both. We must learn to look behind every article we read and every speech we hear. We must not only inquire about the writer and the speaker—about his personal interests and his nationality, but we must ask who owns and who influences the newspaper, the news picture, and the radio station. If our people know the truth, if they are fully and accurately informed, if they are not misled by propaganda, this country is not likely to enter the war now going on in Europe.

And if Europe is prostrated again by war, as she has been so often in the past, then the greatest hope for our western civilization lies in America. By staying out of war ourselves, we may even bring peace to Europe more quickly. Let us look to our own defenses and to our own chaarcter. If we attend to them, we have no need to fear what happens elsewhere. If we do not attend them, nothing can save us.

If war brings more dark ages to Europe, we can better preserve those things which we love and which we mourn the passing of in Europe today by preserving them here, by strengthening them here, rather than by hurling ourselves thoughtlessly to their defense over there and thus destroying all in the conflagration. The German genius for science and organization, the English genius for government and commerce, the French genius for living and the understanding of life—they must not go down here as well as on the other side. Here in America they can be blended to form the greatest genius of all.

The gift of civilized life must still be carried on. It is more important than the sympathies, the friendships, the desires, of any single generation. This is the test before America now. This is the challenge—to carry on Western civilization.

Headachy, Breath Bad?
Make This Check-Up

The Police Siren means "Look-out!" And so do Nature's signals—headaches, biliousness, bad breath, which are often symptoms of constipation.

Don't neglect your sluggish bowels, for a host of constipation's other discomforts may result: such as, sour stomach, loss of appetite or energy, mental dullness.

Help your lazy bowels with spicy, all vegetable BLACK-DRAUGHT. Acts gently, promptly, thoroughly, by simple directions.

BLACK-DRAUGHT'S principal ingredient is an "intestinal tonic-laxative." It helps impart tone to lazy bowel muscles. Next time, try this time-tested product!

IN MEMORY OF JOHN H. VINSON

—o—

On Monday, August 28, 1939, the death angel visited the home of Mr. John H. Vinson, just north of Clanton on the Lay Dam road, and wafted his great spirit to its home beyond this vale of tears from which none has ever returned.

Although his going seems so hard to us who loved him so, we should not mourn his loss to us for God knoweth best and he doeth all things well to them who love and serve him.

Mr. Vinson was a noble character whom to know was to love and respect. He was a loving husband, a kind and compassionate father and a true friend and neighbor. He was no dout an obedient son for he was blessed with 80 long years of health and strength. He loved his entire life in Chilton County and in his going Chilton County has lost one of its most noble citizens, the kind of which makes any county, State or Nation great.

He leaves to mourn his loss, beside his wife, three brothers, A. P., Jerome and Newton A. Vinson, all of Clanton; five children, Sam Vinson Lena Armstrong Pearl Martin and Hermon Vinson of Clanton and Elsie Martin of Birmingham; eight grandchildren and two great-grandchildren, together with a host of other relatives and friends.

A MAN TOLD ME---

"The beer industry's drive to 'clean up or close up' the honky tonks in Alabama is the finest thing I know of.

"I want to buy beer but I insist it be sold under clean, wholesome conditions. That's what you and your industry are trying to do, and I'm for you all the way."

I thanked that man for his words of encouragement and told him the Brewers and Alabama Beer Distributors Committee had initiated cases before Alabama's aggressive ABC Board which had resulted in 17 revocations of license and three suspensions at law-violating retail beer outlets. I told him we had warned the owners of more than 100 other establishments conditions there must improve.

Then I promised that man we would never cease our work until disreputable honky tonks were driven from the state, and that we would then maintain a vigilant watch to prevent their return.

SYNOPSIS

Beautiful, young Kay Forrest has been employed by Christine Maynard, photographer, to pose for a series of pictures, the background of which will be exquisite Cathedral Gardens, famous Southern resort. Unknown to them, one Jeff Butler, mean, unscrupulous "swamp angel," has led a friend to spy on the two women. Kay, of necessity, is scantily clad while posing for the camera studies. Kay frequently stays with Mrs. Ruth Hamilton, her son Barney, of whom Kay is very fond, and her daughter Margaret. Mrs. Hamilton, a remarkable woman, conceived the idea of the Gardens following the death of her husband. One night, after a local dance, Kirk Reynolds, a ne'er-do-well gambler of Beverly, a resort town, and Kay go for a ride. Kirk's car collides with that of Harvey Jackson, and during the ensuing argument Kirk whips out a gun and kills the young, popular engineer. Kirk threatens to drag her into the thing if she tells even her father. Terror-stricken, she agrees to remain silent. However, the next time she goes out with Barney, he realizes something is wrong. She tries to reassure him, but tells him nothing. Mrs. Emma Forrest, Kay's mother, is firm, positive and demanding. Her father is exactly the opposite, kindly and unassuming. While at home Kirk Reynolds calls for her, and she is forced to go with him despite her family's protests. He tells her the circumstances make it necessary for her to marry him, so she cannot be forced to testify against him if he is accused of Jackson's murder. They drive to a neighboring town and are married. The next time they are together Kay tells Barney she loves him.

Two big cars whirled by them, creating dust-clouds on the gravel road. Dusk was settling over the country-side like a benediction. The air was fragrant with the fine, clean odor of pine.

Barney wanted to help. He knew he must do something . . . anything to shock her out of this emotional depression.

He said gently, "Will you marry me, Kay?"

The effect was startling. Her eyes widened and she turned in her seat. She cried, "Oh! Barney—please don't."

The car had stopped, and night enfolded them.

"Why?" he asked.

"You mustn't . . ."

He held one of her hands between both of his. "But you're wrong, honey, I must. In fact . . ." and he tried to laugh, "In fact, I should have asked you long ago."

She said, then, "I wish you had."

He saw only the top of her head, heard only the ghost of her voice.

"I'm married, Barney."

He was shocked "You're what?"

"I'm married."

"But Kay . . ." For the first time he was beginning to understand that life was not always kindly. "I just don't get it."

She shook her head helplessly. "Neither do I."

She clung to him. "Please try to understand, Barney."

He said, "I'll try, honey. But it doesn't make sense. It isn't you—or me." His face was serious; older than she had ever seen it. Maturity seemed to have collided with him. "How long have you been married?"

"A few hours."

"To whom?"

She looked away. "Kirk Reynolds."

"Good Lord! You mean—when I passed you this morning you were on your way to be married?"

"Yes . . ."

"Why didn't you tell me?"

"I—I didn't know. Then."

His hand tightened on her arm. "But why? Surely, you're not in love with him."

"You know I'm not." She tried to be brave. "Listen, Barney . . . try to believe me . . ."

"I'll try."

"I had to marry him—"

"Had to!"

"No! Don't misunderstand. Oh, please . . . It's something I can't explain. That's why I told you first that I love you. It sort of gave me courage to tell you the rest. I married Kirk because I had to . . . because there were reasons which I can't explain to you. Ever."

He said, "Things like this can't happen, honey."

"They have happened. And I need your help more than you can understand. I need to know that you care for me, that you're going to keep on caring for me. And that you won't torture me with questions I can't answer."

"Why can't you answer them?"

"Because I'm afraid."

His jaw was set grimly. "Of what?"

"That's what I can't explain. Don't you see that I'm telling the truth . . . that I didn't do this thing because I wanted to?" She was suddenly more womanly. "If there was any other reason, Barney, I wouldn't be leaving Beverly tonight, would I?"

"What's wrong, Son?"

"I suppose not . . ." His face flushed. "You're not going to live with him?"

"Of course not."

He laughed shortly. This wasn't the Barney she had known for a year and a half . . . and she knew that she had changed, too. Two youngsters faced with ugly fact, grappling with a problem which was too big for them. He said, "There was a reason—of course."

"Yes. And you'd know—if I could only tell you—that I couldn't do anything else."

"Can't you trust me?"

"Yes . . . But I still can't tell you."

She felt his muscles grow taut. "I'm not a child, Kay."

"That isn't it. It's something . . . Oh, Barney! I can't explain. I couldn't even tell my father. He asked everything you are asking . . ."

"What did he say?"

"He was hurt . . . but he understood. He was shocked. But he was kindly—and brave."

"What do you mean, brave?"

A faint, pitiful little smile flickered across her lips. "I gave him the job of telling Mother. And Andy. That isn't going to be very pleasant."

Barney spoke slowly.

"You don't love Kirk Reynolds, yet you married him today. You married him because you are afraid of something. You are running away from Beverly because you don't want to face gossip . . . which means that you know the marriage won't be kept secret. You couldn't tell your father the truth and you can't tell me. Have I got it right?"

"Yes."

"I think I'll have a chat with Kirk Reynolds."

"No!" She was terrified. "Please promise me you won't do that."

"Why not?"

"It would only make matters worse."

"What can I do, then?"

"Just what Dad is doing. You can be my friend. You can, perhaps, try to make me think that you believe whatever I have done is right. You can let me talk . . . and you can help me to forget the whole thing."

"But if you're married to him—"

"I'm not, though. We simply went through a ceremony."

"That sort of marriage can be annulled."

"Dad said that. But this marriage can't be."

"Why?"

"Because the same thing that frightened me into marrying Kirk would prevent that."

"Will you ever tell me the whole truth?"

"I—I don't know."

"In other words," he said seriously, "you're giving me a job to do. Something pretty rotten has happened to you. It has played hell with your nerves. I'm to snap you out of it if I can."

"Yes . . ."

"You'd like me to forget that this cuts pretty deep. You'd like me to be the clown again . . . to kid along as I've always done . . . to make rather an ass of myself. Right?"

"You make it sound silly."

"I don't mean to. I'm trying to make you see that I understand how you feel. And it would help if I could get you laughing again, wouldn't it?"

She asked, "Could you?"

"I don't know. But I can try."

"Then try . . . please." She caught one of his hands. "But oh! Barney, if you're being very, very funny some time and I suddenly start crying . . . you won't misunderstand?"

"No," he said, "I won't. Not even if I start crying, too."

He started the car and moved on through the night. They did not talk, but again she moved so close that her body touched his. There was something so reassuring in this brief contact, something so fine in the stern expression of his boyish face.

At home they crossed the veranda and entered the big living-room. Mrs. Hamilton greeted them from the chair under the reading-lamp.

"Nice day?" she inquired.

Kay said, "Yes, ma'am."

"Upstairs, You." Barney was smiling gallantly. "And make it snappy."

Barney waited at the foot of the stairway until the girl's slender ankles had disappeared. Then he walked toward his mother's chair. She rose to meet him, instinctively knowing that all was not as it should be.

He put his hands on his mother's shoulders and looked down into her eyes.

"Tough sledding," he said.

"What's wrong, Son?"

"Kay's in a jam. I'll tell you about it before she comes down." His voice broke slightly. "I know you're going to help—you and Margaret. Be as gentle as you can."

He turned abruptly and walked from the room. Ruth Hamilton looked after him, worry and pride in her eyes.

Something had happened. She knew that a boy had gone to Beverly that morning, and that a man had returned.

At the rear of the White Star Hotel lobby, just opposite the dining-room and near the foot of the stairs, was a door with a sign:

MISS SONIA HENKEL
BEAUTICIAN

If you were a guest of the hotel, this sign would not surprise you, inasmuch as you would long since have found a card on your dresser divulging the same information, with this added: that Miss Henkel was expert and experienced, that she cheerfully and efficiently dispensed shampoos, finger-waves, marcels and facials; that her prices were reasonable and her work swift.

Thorsby Institute News

Thorsby Institute opened September 13 with a very good enrollment of both regular pupils and those taking music. Miss Jenkins presided at the exercises: Rev. Hubert Bahr read the scripture and lead in prayer; Miss Marguerite Davison, Congregational Extension worker among young people and Dr. Loos, who recently has been studying in Scotland, gave interesting talks. Rev. M. I. McLeod gave the welcome from the Trustees. Miss Lillian McKee, Attendance officer of Chilton County, gave the welcome from the alumni. Inez Duke, a senior, gave the welcome from the old students. Miss Alice Burr, music teacher, played Rachmaninoff's Prelude, proving by her playing that she has both expression and technique. Miss Laverna Jones, teacher of Public Speaking, gave a talk and short reading, which were very good. Mr. V. H. Sutlive, as Registrar, and Mrs. Maddox, as Treasurer, explained about their part of the work. The exercises were concluded with the mizpah benediction.

Mr. Howard Boockholdt, of Stanton has been secured as substitute teacher because of the resignation of Mr. V. H. Sutlve to accept a Civil Service position as Railway Mail Clerk. Mr. Sutlive has taught nine years at Thorsby Institute and it was with much regret he was released to take the new position. Mrs. Sutlive will continue teaching at the Institute through the school year.

Friday night a reception at Thorsby Institute will be given in the auditorium by the Ladies Guild. To this are invited the Faculty, pupils and parents patrons of Thorsby Institute, members of the Ladies Guild and husbands. There will be a program, games and refreshments will be served to those present.

Message From Jarman To War Veterans

The News received the following letter early this week from Congressman Pete Jarman which will be of interest to World War Veterans:

"The time within which World War Veterans, or their dependents, might file their claims for adjusted compensation, generally referred to as the Bonus, has been extended by the Congress from time to time. The present limitation of January 2, 1940, was again extended for five years recently, but the veto of this bill by the President prevented it from becoming effective.

"Consequently, the 'dead-line' of January 2, 1940, still stands, and I cannot too strongly urge any veteran who served longer than 60 days during the War and who may not have applied for his bonus, or the dependents of deceased veterans who are not sure that this application has been submitted, to attend to this matter at an early date. Those dependents entitled to draw the Certificates are the widow; if no widow, the child; if no children, dependent mother; if no mother the dependent father.

"If there is any doubt in your mind, I shall be glad to ascertain the facts for you.

"Your friend.
"PETE JARMAN."

Mr. Julius Vinson of Montgomery was in this community Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Ottis Glenn and baby, Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Glenn and children and Mrs. Oliver Glenn were the Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Glenn and family.

Mr. Joe Lansfor dspent a while Sunday afternoon with Mr. W. F. Glenn.

Mr. and Mrs. Kern Sandlin and children were the Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Driver and daughter.

M. Lamar Collins was in this community Sunday afternoon.

Health Dept. News

Fred H. Buckelew, Chilton County's Sanitation Officer and member of the County Health Department, leaves September 23 for a three-months scholarship at Vanderbilt University, according to a weekly bulletin from the Department.

Mr. Buckelew's course in Nashville will consist primarily of sanitary engineering and will include other scientific subjects having a bearing on public health, such as bacteriology. With the completion of his course, all the technical workers of the local Health Department will have had specialized training in schools of public health, it was pointed out by Dr. S. D. Sturkie, County Health Officer.

These scholarships are made possible by funds allotted to the Alabama State Health Department by the Federal Government. During Mr. Buckelew's basence Dr. Sturkie plans to carry on certain indispensable phases of his program, but the privy building program utilizing free WPA labor has been suspended.

An nteresting booth is promised Chilton County Fair goers this year by the Health Department, according to an announcement by the Health Officer. The exhibit will probably be built around general sanitation.

Word is also received that the establishment of a venereal disease clinic at Maplesville providing free treatment for indigent cases of syphillis and gonorrhea residing in that sectio of the County is likely to take place soon. Dr. Sturkie gives out the information that the State Health Department has promised enough financial aid for this new clinic that only a little assistance will have to be asked of Chilton County's Commissioners.

IN MEMORY OF J. R. LUCAS

We are lonely without J. R. since the Lord has taken him home.
But we will try to be contented
Then I hope we'll meet dear J. R.
until our work on earth is done.
in that blessed home so fair,
And it wll be a glad reunion.
When we all get there.
Yes, dear J. R. is resting on that peaceful shore where there is no more sorrow and he will never part no more.

He has a wfie and two children. I hope they all have a home on high.

There to meet dear J. R. and they will never say good-bye.—Written by a niece, Mrs. J. E. Mims.

JUST IN CASE you're the least bit interested in yelling for the benefit of the football team, be sure and come down promptly at three o'clock, Friday, September 22, at the ball park and watch the kick-off for the Clanton-Verbena game. Incidentally, the cheerleaders for the year, and good ones at that, are Eugenia Newton, Elizabeth Armstrong and Dorothy Arnold.

THE BETA CLUB has really begun work in earnest. Last Monday morning they began a "School Post Office." This is to lessen the amount of students who "simply must mail this letter for mother" from going down town. For the past year, our principal has had quite a bit of confusion in connection with excuses at all hours of the day, for going to town so this year the Beta Club has undertaken to cut down on that. Now any student who has a letter to mail may bring it to the office before nine in the morning and two in the afternoon, and the Beta students, who are at present keeping the office, will see that you get first class attention and that your letter goes off on time.

CHILTON COUNTY ASSOCIATION

Please all pastors and churches of the Chilton County Association, see to it that we do our part in getting up our prorata of funds for Howard College. Our Association is asked to give $268.00. Some of the churches can give more than others and therefore the amount for the varous churches differs. Someone asked to give as much as $40, others as low as $1.00. Surely each church can do something.

The Unity Association was asked for $900.00 and subscribed more than that.

Let us do our best for Howard in the hour of her need.—G. G. Williams, Moderator.

Program Announced For Fortieth Anniversary Celebration Of Concord Church Near Here

In celebration of their fortieth anniversary, a special program will be rendered at Concord Church next Sunday moning, September 24th, beginning at 9:00 o'clock. Concord is two miles east of Clanton on the Higgins Ferry Road.

Following is the program:

9:00—Sunday School, the adult and young peoples classes jointly to be taught by Mr. G. C. Armstrong of Clanton.

10:00—History of the Church by John M. Parrsh, and open hour for discussion by charter members and former pastor of the church.

11:00—Sermon by Rev. C. J. Bentley of Birmingham, former pastor, subject, "The New Testament Church."

12:00—Dismission.

All former members and friends of the Church are cordially invited. Concord Baptist Church was organized on September 14, 1889, the presbytery consisting of: F. M. Woods, B. H. Vickers, M. J. Parrish and W. J. Armstrong. The latter was elected pastor of the Church by acclamation. Tommie N. Parrish was the first Church Clerk.

The charter members were: E. H. Parrish and wife, Rev. M. J. Parish and wife, J. P. Parrish and wife, C. H. Plier and wife, J. W. Cox and wife, T. G. Taylor and wife G. W. Blalock and wife, Julia Parrish, Sam Parrish, E. H. Parrish, Jr., T. N. Parrish, Annie Parrish, Janie Parrish, L. M. Taylor, Havanah Taylor, Margurite Taylor, Ella Taylor Willie Cox and Dora Cox.

It was first decided to have the services all day with singing in the afternoon but on account of the annual all-day singing at Jemison on the same day, the afternoon part of the program has been called off. However, for the information of the singers, there will be an afternoon singing called at Concord in the near future, and it is hoped that the singers of the county will come out and assist in the services.

NOTICE

Notice of the Filing of Bill of Complaint by State of Alabama, Complainant, vs. One 1929 Model Ford Coupe, Respondent.

State of Alabama, Complainant, vs. One 1929 Model Ford Coupe, Respondent.

In the Circuit Court of Chilton County, Alabama, In Equity.

The Bill of Complaint of the State of Alabama, on the relation of G. C. Walker, as Deputy Solicitor of Chilton County, Alabama, against One Ford Coupe, being exhibited to me, and it appearing therefrom that on the 18th day of September, 1939 one Will Jones did transport in one 1929 Model Ford Coupe, certain prohibited liquors and beverages, from one point to another in the State of Alabama, and that said automobile was on said day seized by George Murrah, Deputy Sheriff of said County and said Bill of Complaint praying that said automobile be declared forfeited to the State of Alabama, and for an order of condemnation and sale thereof.

It is therefore ordered and decreed that notice of the filing of said Bill of Complaint be given for three successive weeks in The Chilton County News, a newspaper published in the Town of Clanton, Alabama, and that all persons claiming or asserting any right, title or interest in said automobile be required to appear and assert such claim by the 15th day of October, 1939, and that failing to do so, the said right, title or interest will be forever barred.

Given under my hand, this the 19th day of September, 1939.

Are you planning to bring your cut flowers, and pot plants to the fair? It will soon be the big event of the season for this county.

Do not miss this fall attraction as the fair management has spent lots of time planning this for the people of this section and surrounding towns. This year's fair will be bigger and better than in the past and larger. In all departments more space has been alloted to these departments. It will be a real fair this season.

Have you planned your fall garden? If not you better hurry as winter time will soon be here. Do so, and then you will not be disappointed next spring when the Tulips, iris, hyancinths, crocus, narcissus lillies and other perennials will be in their height and glory and of course I should not forget the rose bushes and the climbers that will trail on your fences you will have nobody to blame but yourself if you do not plan to do this this fall.

The writer will send to your Fair a display of Dahlia blooms.

How are your lawns for this fall? Have you planted your rye grass seed? Mildew on plants can be remedied with dusting the plants with sulphur early in the morning or by using one of the several prepared remedies found at good seed stores.

Have you planted your pansy seed. The seedlings are and should be ready to transplant at this time of the year, so that they can get set for the winter. This is the time of the year to transplant your strawberry plants if you are planning to have a new strawberry patch. Are you planning to plant a few peach, apple, pear, plum, cherry, apricots or other fruit trees? Better plan now—do not fail to add a few grape vines. Does the front or side of your home need any other shrubs? Do you need any shade trees? It is time to look into these few bare spots in your garden or around your home. Plan what you can use to add more beauty to what you already have.

If you have not entered the flower Garden Quizz you sure lost a lot of free prizes that the Chilton County News offered its readers. The contest has just closed. These prizes will sure make some flower lover in your town happy. The prizes will be mailed to your door, or you can call for them at the Chilton County News office when it will be the proper time. Mrs. Annie Thacker and the writer want to thank Mr. Mark Tucker for the splendid way he conducted this contest. More power to winners and better luck next time to the losers.

Women's Department At The County Fair

o

By Edward Bialas

The chief executives of the Chilton County Fair Association were out of town this past week end on fair business. Dr. Gragg had to make a hurried trip to some large city in the Mid-West and J. Mell Martin, who was in Chattanooga, Tenn., was on the lookout for more star attractions for this years' fair.

The latest information on the Women's department is that Mrs. Annie Thacker will not only have charge of the flower department but will also have the women's with the assistance of Mrs. Marion Gore, as both of these ladies are old fair heads, the Fair Association could not have selected any who could beat them when it comes to running the above departments.

These ladies informed me that there will be lots of changes to improve the set-up such as there will be modern decorations in the building and the color scheme this year will be red and white decorations that should improve the building quite a bit.

This year the above score sheet will be used for canned products, consisting of preserves, jellies, jams, pickles, meats fruits, relish and vegetables as follows: Appearance color and cleanliness, 25 per cent.

Texture, 15 per cent.

Flavor, 20 per cent.

Pack, 20 per cent.

Uniformity (ripeness, appropriate), 20 per cent.

Premium will be awarded only on the above score sheet, please note.

In the Handicraft, consisting of embroidery, such as crochet, knitting, tatting, quilts, rugs tapestries and sack garments this score sheet will be used:

General appearance, 10 per cent.

Color, 20 per cent.

Perfection of stitches, 50 per cent.

Design(beauty and decoration) 10 per cent.

Stability of article, 10 per cent.

Both these ladies inform me that the "Garden on Parade" will be the talk of this year's fair, as everybody loves flowers, so why not see if yours are not nicer than your friends, besides ribbons the Fair is offering cash prizes. Also these lades are looking forward to having you friends bring your canned products and your handicraft, and see for yourself who has the oldest quilt, or any other varieties of articles that women make during spare time, so bring them to the fair grounds, located at Gragg field and win this extra money that is offered for above articles. More money has been added to both departments this year. Don't forget that these displays will be on exhibit on September 26-30 at GRAGG FIELD!

Jr. G. A. News

The Jr. G. A. met at the home of Sallie Gowan on last Thursday afternoon, havng one of the largest gatherings ever at the meetings. The program concerned the teaching of another chapter in a Mission Study book.

The G.A.. hymn, "We Have A Story To Tell To The Nations," was sung by the group to open the program.

Mrs. J. W. Fant, Junior G. A. leader, gave an interesting account of the offerings taken to support our Missionaries at home and on the foreign fields. The State Mission offering taken at this meeting of the Junior G. A. amounted to one dollar and five cents. As the Clanton Jr. G. A. is rapidly increasing in size, Mrs. Fant has chosen Mrs. Charlie Breedlove to assist her in leading the group. Several new members were welcomed into our organization Thursday.

After the program was closed, refreshments were served to those present. The next meeting will be held at the home of Hazel and Willene Thomas. So we repeat these words: Come one, come all!

Terrace Maintenance Instructions Issued To Cooperating Farmers By SCS Officials

Dear Cooperator:

In a short time you will be planting your winter legumes and grain. It is very important that you maintain the terraces on this land before planting. There is a long winter ahead, and much rain is naturally expected. Your terraces will not have a fair chance unless you give them proper attention..

The terraces on your other land should also be given this same treatment. This can be done shortly after your planting is finished.

The following are a few guides and suggestions for this maintenance operation: Repair all breaks and weak places before plowing is done—plow as wide a channel as the slope of the land will permit (from 12 ft. on 12 per cent slope to 20 ft. on 2 per cent slope)—the wider the channel, the more water your terrace will take care of—an ordinary two-horse turn plow will give satisfactoy results—use the crest of the terrace and a line from 12 ft. to 20 ft. up the slope as boundaries of the channel—treat the area inside these boundaries as a land and plow out completely until a dead furrow is reached—take fairly wide and shallow cuts on outer edges of land and gradually narrow and deepen as you work to the middle.

We are planning terrace maintenance demonstrations for each community, and you may be asked to assist us in carrying one out on your farm. Our aim is to have every terrace on every cooperator's farm plowed out this fall. This can only be done by having your usual fine cooperation.

Yours very truly,
HENRY T. STANLEY,
Camp Engineer.
Approved by: James H. Wood,
Camp Superintendent.

We Now Sell the SAFEST TIRES You can buy

~ the New Advanced RICHLANDS

HERE'S the safest, longest-wearing modern streamlined tires it is possible to build. We are pleased to offer these outstanding Richland Tires to the car owners of this community. We're selling them because their advanced construction features place them far in the lead in the safety performance so necessary for today's higher speeds and harder wear.

You cannot afford to ride on anything but the safest tires. Richlands not only give you greater safety but more miles, too, and that's important from the standpoint of economy. Let us show you the new, cooler running, silent Richlands. You'll like their good looks and their longer, safer miles of extra service. There's a stronger, safer Richland for every motoring need.

3 Ways Safer

SAFETY-LOCK SIDEWALL
For extra strength and safety the lower sidewall of every Richland is reinforced by carrying the two inside cord fabric plies around bead cable and up into lower wall.

● SUPER-FLEX CORD
The Richland carcass is super strong because its dense-twisted Super-Flex Cord concentrates great strength in small bulk. This makes sturdier, cooler running, safer tires.

● DENSITE TREAD
Richland's Densite Tread is tougher, denser, longer-wearing. Its scientific 6-Bar design puts more rubber on the road to deliver greater mileage and protection against sidewise and forward skids.

Letter To Voters From Raymond Mims

To The Voters of Chilton County:

After considerable solicitation of my friends, I am at this time announcing myself as a candidate for the Judgeship of the Inferior Law Court of Chilton County, which Court was created by a recent act of the 1939 Legislature of Alabama.

In making this announcement I am aware of the responsibilities and sacredness of the office to which I aspire. If I am the choice of the people, I will consider myself an officer and servant of all the people, and it shall be my purpose to dispense justice and fairness in my dealings with every person regardless of their station in life. I believe in and stand for equal rights to all and special favors to none.

I feel that I am qualified to perform the duties of this office. I graduated from the University of Alabama in 1935 with a Law degree. After graduation I practiced law in Tuscaloosa for fifteen months, at which time I moved back to Clanton and have been in the active practice of law since I came back to Clanton.

It is my aim and purpose to see every voter personally that I can before the election, but since the election will be on October 24th, I will not have time to see every one; therefore permit me to take this means to solicit your vote and influence. I will strive to give you no just cause to regret having done so.

RAYMOND MIMS.

COUNTY FAIR

that could be found in the country, according to Thos. P. Littlejohn, manager. The Littlejohn Fair Circuit of Troy has been in charge of this phase of the Fair for the past three years. Several interesting, entertaining free acts will be on hand, including The Crawfords, famous group of jugglers, wire walkers, contortionists, etc. and the Great Ricardo the man on the 75-foot pole, who balances himself atop the pole 75 feet in the air and swings to and fro while going through his routine of acts.

Gragg Field, where the Fair will be staged, is located just off the Lay Dam Road, northeast of the City. Since last year the main street and road leading to the airport has been paved, except that part from the Lay Dam Road to the field, which is in excellent condition. This road was built by the county and shortens the distance to the airport from that of the old road.

The program for the week is as follows, as announced in the Fair catalog:

Tuesday

LADIES FREE DAY—On this day at 4:00 P.M., the gates will open and all ladies will be admited FREE. Don't miss this.

Wednesday

SCHOOL CHILDRENS DAY—On this day the Fair Grounds will be open at 8:00 A.M. and all school children will be admitted for five cents. Teachers and bus drivers admitted free. An attractive prize will be given the school showing the largest percentage of attendance on this day. Clanton schools excepted. Special arrangements have been made with the County Superintendent of Education for all schools whether open or not, to attend. All open schools will get credit for the time. All riding devices and shows will operate specifically for the school children for five cents until 5:00 P.M. Free acts will be put on at 2:30 P.M. on School Day.

Thursday

FARMERS DAY—This day must bring the crowds. COME, bring the entire family and spend a full day of pleasure and see the products of Chilton County. Special fireworks Thursday night.

Friday

AVIATION DAY—On Aviation Day you will se some breath-taking surprise numbers in flying. Parachute jumping and some of the internationally famous stunters will be among the participants, under the supervision of trained licensed pilots.

Saturday

EVERYBODY'S DAY—This will be THE day of days. If you have come before, come back and if you have not you had better come early and stay late for of all days this will be IT. A special feature for this day will be the Boys' Horse Racing, for which prizes will be given.

The general admission to the Fair grounds will be twenty-five cents for adults and ten cents for children, ages six to twelve. There will be no charge for parking, but please do park as directed by guards and Boy Scouts.

Pass-out checks will be given only in the mornings and until 1:00 P.M., returnable afternoon or night same day given.

A half-page advertisement from the Fair appears in this issue of the Chilton County News. Turn to it now.

Neat Sum—

check for $6,625.86 was received by City of Clanton the other day, yor Jones tells us. The Mayor stated t this was part payment of the grant City received from the Federal ernment for use on the waterworks ject now underway. This money is ig help in this important improve- nt project, and we feel that the City s fortunate in securing this aid. t where one group succeeds, an- er fails, as may be noted in the of the new County High School.

aking Of The School—

Infortunate as it is that we were un- e to secure Federal money, it is a ef to note that construction is at getting underway on the new lton County High School. Although has been quite a problem, we have h hopes that this new builling will wholly adequate, and we believe it —at least until such time when ad- ions and other changes can be made.

hat About County Health?—

There ever seems to be enough [illegible] available for school purposes pite rising taxation, but have you r taken the time or expended the ort to check up on how much Chil- County is spending annually for lic health? A program rendered a lic health? A program rendered at recent meeting of the Clanton Ki- nis Club in charge of County Health licer S. D. Sturkie and Sanitation pervisor Fred H. Buckelew, brought many facts relative to our County alth program. We firmly believe t Chilton has one of the most com- tent corps of workers in this de- tment that could be found in any nty in the State, but Chilton County has many health problems to be ved, and we are prone to wonder he appropriation the County makes, ncially, is enough to employ a suf- ent number of competent nurses to e these problems.

irst, let us compare what Chilton pending for county health with what being spent for other important nty institutions. On a per capita is we are spending $3.80 for roads n year, totaling $95,000; for educa- , $2.60, amounting to $65,000; for [illegible] work, 40c, which amounts to ,000; the Farm Unit gets 20c, total- $5,000, and for Public Health, ich is at the bottom of the list, we spending 16c, or $4,000. This is t is being spent locally, not con- ering what the State contributes.

omparing what Chilton County is nding with six surrounding coun- , we find the following: On the s of each county's wealth, we see t for each million dollars worth of essed property Autauga County nds $720; Bibb, $625; Coosa, $735; llas, $591; Elmore, 333; Perry, $580 Chilton 360. It can be seen that are next to the bottom of the list h these neighboring counties in lo- health appropriations according to wealth. Chilton County's figure is ived at by using the amount of ney being spent in 1939, while the res for the other counties are for 8 The minimum amount recom- nded to be spent in the county for lth service is 50c per capita, or $500 ropriated locally for each million lars of assessed property, using the ommendations of the Alabama State alth Department and other eminent lth experts. Applying either of these nciples to Chilton County, one finds need for an increase of $2000 to 0 locally. An additional nurse ld enable the County to meet this ndard, as the nurse's salary plus vel would amount to $1980, we are deally, one nurse is needed for ev- 2,000 in the population, health of- als tell us. At least five nurses ld be used in Chilton in carrying a good program. Certainly there 'd be not less than one nurse for 10,000 persons in the County, ich would require two nurses in lton. One of the most important ions of the nurse, the home visit of expectant mothers, young in- ls, preschool children and school dren is being neglected in the nty because one nurse cannot even n to see even a small percentage these groups. For example, there about 600 expectant mothers a year the County. One nurse cannot satis- torily supervise but 100.

hilton County does excel, however, its syphilis program and its tuber- osis program. Free treatment for cents syphilis and a limited number digent tuberculosis is provided by Commissioners.

ve have a right to be proud of what now being done in preserving the lth of our County, but our belief that if the addition of one more se is as important as these figures ow, our County officials could find no place where it might place that much money to do as much good as with the County Health Unit. If you have ever visited the health office here on days when clinics are being held, you, like the writer, will think the addition of another nurse would be justified.

FAIR GETS OFF TO GOOD START DESPITE RAIN

OPENING DAY FINDS PEOPLE DISPLAYING INTEREST IN THE MANY DEPARTMENTS

Cloudy skies and occasional showers failed to keep a large crowd from being on hand at the opening of the third annual Chilton County Fair.

Gragg Field, where the Fair is being held, was the scene of much activity Tuesday afternoon and especially Tuesday night, when citizens from all over the county viewed the many interesting exhibits and displays. This was Ladies Free Day, at which time all ladies were admitted free of charge.

Noticeable is the fact that despite considerable damage to crops in this county this year, the agricultural exhibits are considered among the best ever displaye dat Chilton County Fair. Also interesting are the various school displays from over the county. Such institutions as the Clanton CCC Camp, the County Health Department, the N.Y.A., etc. are very interesting. Several commercial exhibits have been placed by the merchants of the County.

Too numerous to mention are the Local Welfare Office Certifies 100 For Work

Information coming from the office of Miss Nolan Meroney, Director of the Department of Public Welfare, is that this office last week certified 100 men of the County, mostly farmers, for one months work with the WPA.

Seventy of these men, it was learned, will be used at the Thorsby Government Nursery, and the remaining thirty will be used on the County Roads.

This office last year certified near 1200 men of this county for work with approximately half of them being given employment with the WPA. Many are this year seeking employment due to the fact that the crops of this county were severely damaged by rains, causing them to be short.

RALLY DAY AT METHODIST

Next Sunday morning, October 1, at the Clanton Methodist Church, the entire Church School is urged and requested to meet in the sub-auditorium at 9:45 for a devotional Rally Day program after which classes will convene for the lesson as usual.

County P.-T. A. Met At City Hall Friday

A meeting of the Chilton County Council of P.-T. A. was held at the City Hall last Friday morning and was well attended by members from over the County.

Mrs. B. R. Showater, State President of the P.-T. A. Council, and Miss Martha Smith, State Program Committee Chairman, gave interesting talks.

Mrs. H. H. Denson, County President, urged all Assoaiations to pay their membership dues by October 1st.

The outlook for P.-T. A. work in this County is encouraging, with much interest being displayed.

BARBECUE SUPPER

There will be a barbecue and Sandwich Supper at Antioch Church Saturday night, September 30. Everybody come. We promise you plenty to eat, and drink, also we will have a guess cake. Proceeds will go to the Church.

LUNCH ROOM PROJECT GETS APPROVAL

THREE CHILTON SCHOOLS VOTE TO SPONSOR WPA PROJECTS; OTHERS MAY FOLLOW

Parent Teachers Associations of three Chilton County Schools have voted in favor of sponsoring WPA lunchroom projects, according to officials of the local County Departments of Education and Health. These schools include Thorsby, Verbena and Collins Chapel; several others are expected to act favorably on the project before the date set for the opening of the county schools, it was reported. Dr. S. D. Sturkie, County Health Officer, predicted that the serving of hot lunches would improve the nutritional status of many of Chilton County's school children and should become popular with many school patrons.

J.B. ATKINSON ENTERS RACE FOR JUDGESHIP

HIS ANNOUNCEMENT BRINGS NUMBER TO THREE ASKING FOR INFERIOR COURT OFFICE

The News learned this week that Mr. J. B. Atkinson, attorney of Clanton, had qualified as a candidate for the office of Judge of the Inferior Law Court of Chilton County, Alabama, in the special general election to be held on Tuesday, October 24th.

Mr. Atkinson has been a citizen of Chilton County since 1915, and is well and favorably known throughout Chilton County and Central Alabama. He served ten years as a member of the Council and Mayor of the City of Clanton and during the World War was chief clerk of State Headquarters of the Selective Service Department of the Army.

He was admitted to the Bar in 1913 and has held a number of honorary offices in fraternal and political organizations. With the exception of the time in service of the Army, he has been actively engaged in the practice of law.

The entrance of Mr. Atkinson into the race brings to three the number asking for this office. All three are well known Clanton attorneys.

A. B. (Buster) Foshee, whose announcement was carried last week, is one of Clanton's youngest attorneys. Raymond Mims, another young attorney, is the son of J. Z. Mims, former Circuit Clerk of this County. His announcement was carried last week also.

County Schools Organize For Work

With the opening of all schools close at hand, the leaders in the Chilton County Teachers' Association are busy with plans for the coming year. Already Mr. J. R. Ekblad, President of the association, has called two meetings of the Steering Committee. It is the duty of this committee to plan and organize the curriculum work of teachers' organization.

The first meeting was called September 13, at Superintendent H. R. Maddox's office for the purpose of selecting a curriculum consultant for the year 1939-1940. The committee considered several leaders from various educational institutions. Dr. R. E. Tidwell of the University of Alabama was

THANKS TO EVERYBODY!

This week's issue of Chilton County News completes the first year of my ownership, and let me say here that the year has been a pleasant, prosperous and happy one. The people have been kind and considerate, the merchants and business men have been generous with their patronage, and a spirit of cooperation to the end that the general welfare be served, has prevailed throughout the year.

I therefore rededicate myself to the service of the whole people of Chilton County, Alabama, the United States, for the good that I may do—serving in any capacity, of which I am capable.

Sincerest thanks and appreciation is extended to my associates, who have labored unceasingly for the best interests of Chilton County News, and together, with the beginning of another year, we will strive harder than ever to merit the fellowship and appreciation of our friends.—MARK L. TUCKER, Publisher.

AUTO TAGS GO ON SALE HERE OCTOBER 2ND

APPLICATIONS FOR DRIVERS LICENSES ARE BEING TAKEN BY PROBATE OFFICE

The 1939 automobile license plates will go on sale at the office of the Judge of Probate on October 2, as October 1st comes on Sunday, it was learned early this week. Auto owners will have until November 15th to secure thir tags. Ths, however, mans through Novmber 14.

There has been some misunderstanding here regarding the new law governing the purchase of drivers licenses; since quite a change has been made over last year regarding this. Licenses this year are being issued for two years instead of the usual one, and the price for owners and non-owners

Clanton Defeats Verbena In Opener

The Chilton County High School Tigers defeated the Verbena High School team on the local field last Friday afternoon by a score of 20-0.

Just prior to the game Snowy Melton was elected captain of the Tigers for the season with Carl Cooper second assistant. These two are key men in the Tigers' line-up this year.

Touchdowns were made by Melton, Askins and Carl Cooper, with the extra points by Cooper and Askins. Lester Jones, fullback for the Tigers, received a dislocated collar bone in the latter part of the game.

The Verbena aggregation is noticeably strong this year, and these boys held the Tigers to a scoreless tie until the end of the first half.

Next Friday afternoon, September 29, the Tigers face Isabella at 3:00 o'clock at the local park. Regarding this game with an old rival, Captain Snowy Melton stated: "I believe we're going to beat them—we'll sure be in there trying."

COUNTY SINGING CONVENTION AT COURTHOUSE

TWO SESSIONS SET FOR SATURDAY NIGHT AND SUNDAY WITH BIG CROWD EXPECTED

Announcement was made this week that the Chilton County Singing Convention will meet at the Courthouse in Clanton Saturady night and Sunday, Sepember 30th and October 1st. Several out-of-the-county singers are expected to attend, as well as some quartets. The general cooperation of the singers of the county, regardless of what kind of books they use, is urged.

The Saturday night session meets at 7:30 it was learned. Some time during the night session officers for the coming year will be elected, so the singers are asked to have in mind what they want to do about officers for the coming year.

Commissioners Court Minutes Of Chilton's Early Days Make Interesting Reading Matter

A book with the record of proceeding of the Court of County Commissioners of this County, first known as Baker County and later changed to Chilton County, from March 21, 1870 to September 10, 1878, shows many interesting occurrences back in those days.

This book, in the possession of John M. VanDerveer, Jr., an employee of the Chilton County News, records the proceedings of the Court of County Commissioners in a flowing long hand. It covers the period of over eight years during which time M. Roberson first served as Judge of Probate, followed by H. T. Callen, grandfather of F. J. Callen, present President of the Peoples Savings Bank here.

One interesting recording in the first of the book, under the date of May 2, 1871 is as follows: "Be it remembered that at an election held in said County (then Baker) on the last Saturday in April, 1871, for the purpose of naming a permanent location of the Court House of said County, and Clanton having received the highest number of votes at said election, it is therefore ordered that Clanton be and it is hereby declared the permanent location of the Court House of said County.—M. Roberson, Judge of Probate; Anderson Baker, Sr., A. J. Cooper, G. W. Culp, Commissioners."

But let us turn back still nearer the front of this historical document and read the following: "State of Alabama, Baker County. Special Court of County Commissioners, April 5, 1871. Be it known that at an election held in said County on the first Saturday in April, 1871, for the permanent loca-

Veterans To Meet Here Friday Night

A special meeting of the American Legion is called for Friday night of this week, September 29, at the Court House. The purpose of this meeting is to attend to all busines coming before the organization at this time, which is very necessary now.

Plans will also be made to form a Committee to meet the State Commander at Clanton on October 12. Every veteran in Chilton County please take notice of above date and be present.—V. C. McKee, Post Commander; J. N. Calloway, Adjt.

VERMONT SCHOOL TO OPEN TUESDAY MORNING

The pupils of Vermont community are asked to take notice that the Vermont School will open Tuesday morning, October 3rd, for the coming session. All pupils are urged to be on hand opening day and at the hour of opening—8:00 o'clock A.M.—J. D Hopper, principal.

Clanton Kiwanis Club Holds Interesting Meeting With Thorsby Business Men Thurs.

Instead of the usual meeting at the Thomason Hotel last Thursday night, members of the Clanton Kiwanis Club gathered at the Congregational Church at Thorsby, where they had as their guests leading business and professional men of this thriving little town.

This was considered by man ymembers of the Club one of the most interesting and enjoyable gatherings ever held, with an air of neighborly friendliness prevailing throughout the meeting. Ladies of the Church served a delicious plate to a large group and guest speaker of the evening was Hon. Lawrence F. Gerald, Clanton attorney, and a native of Thorsby. Mr. Gerald gave a most interesting talk on "Individual Freedom As Guaranteed By The American Bill Of Rights." His talk was both patriotic and informative. He discussed the famous first ten Amendments to the American Constitution. His statement that: "The one thing for which we should all be truly thankful is that we have been privileged to live as American citizens" received a big hand from his audience.

Before Mr. Gerald's talk each person present, including the charming and gracious ladies serving, were asked to stand and introduce themselves. Two of the Thorsby guests, Postmaster Donald Merchant and Prof. C.M. Williams, were asked to make some remarks. They each expressed for the entire Thorsby group, their pleasure on being privileged to meet with the Kiwanians. Mention of their intentions to cooperate in every way with Clanton for the betterment of Chilton County, was made, and a hearty welcome was accorded the Kiwanians.

The Clanton Club each year has made it a rule to meet with some neighboring community with the purpose of creating a closer feeling of fellowship and good will. It may truly be said that never has the Club been privileged to meet with a finer group [illegible] than those of Thorsby, or a warmer wel[illegible] received than that from the Thorsby group.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT OUTLINES PLAN TO KEEP US OUT OF WAR

The text of President Roosevelt's message to Congress last Thursday, assembled for extraordinary session, is as follows:

I have asked the Congress to reassemble in extraordinary session in order that it may consider and act on the amendment of certain legislation, which, in my judgment, so alters the historic foreign policy of the United States that it impairs the peaceful relations of the United States with foreign nations.

At the outset I proceed on the assumption that every member of the House of Representatives, and every member of the executive branch of the government, including the President and his associates, personally and officially, are equally and without reservation in favor of such measures as will protect the neutrality, the safety and the integrity of our country and at the same time keep us out of war.

Because I am wholly willing to ascribe an honorable desire for peace to those who hold different views from my own as to what those measures should be, I trust that these gentlemen will be sufficiently generous to ascribe equally lofty purposes to those with whom they disagree.

Let no man or group in any walk of life assume exclusive protectorate over the future well-being of America because I conceive that regardless of party or section the mantle of peace and of patriotism is wide enough to cover us all.

Let no group assume the exclusive label of the peace "bloc." We all belong to it.

I have at all times kept the Congress and the American people informed of events and trends in foreign affairs. I now review them in a spirit of understatement.

Since 1931 the use of force instead of the council table has constantly increased in the settlement of disputes between nations—except in the Western Hemisphere where there has been only one war, now happily terminated.

During these years also the building up of vast armies, navies and storehouses of war has proceeded abroad with growing speeds and intensity. But, during these years, and extending back even to the days of the Kellog-Briand Pact, the United States has constantly, consistently and conscientiously done all in is power to encourage peaceful settlements, to bring about reduction of armaments and to avert threatened wars. We have done this not only because any war anywhere necessarily hurts American security and American prosperity, but because of the more important fact that any war anywhere retards the progress of morality and religion and impairs the security of civlization itself.

For many years the primary purpose of our foreign policy has been that this nation and this government should strive to the utmost to aid in avoiding war among other nations. But if and when war unhappily comes, the government and the nation must exert every possible effort to avoid being drawn into the war.

The executive branch of the government did its utmost, within our traditional policy of noninvolvement, to aid in averting the present appalling war. Having thus striven and failed, this government must lose no time or effort to keep the nation from being drawn into the war.

In my candid judgment we shall succeed in these efforts.

We are proud of the historical record of the United States and of all the Americans during all these years because we have thrown every ounce of our influence for peace into the scale of peace.

I note in passing what you will all remember—the long debates on the subject of what constitutes aggression, on the methods of determing who the aggressor might be, and on who the aggressor in past wars had been. Academically this may have been instructive as it may have been of interest to historians to discuss the pros and cons and the rights and wrongs of the World War during the decade that followed it.

But in the light of problems of today and tomorrow responsibility for acts of aggression is not concealed, and the writing of the record can safely be left to future historians.

There has been sufficient realism in the United States to see how close to our own shores came dangerous paths which were being followed on other continents.

Last January I told the Congress that "a war which threatened to envelop the world in flames has been averted, but it has become increasingly clear that peace is not asured." By April new tensions had developed; a new crisis was in the making. Several nations with whom we had friendly, diplomatic and commercial relations had lost, or were in the process of losing, their independent identity and sovereignty.

During the Spring and Summer the trend was definitely toward further acts of military conquest and away from peace. As late as the end of July I spoke to members of the Congress about the definite possibility of war. I should have called it the probability of war.

Last January, also, I spoke to this Congress of the need for further warning of new threats of conquest, military and economic; of challenge to religion, to democracy and to international good faith. I said: "An ordering of society which relegates religion, democracy and good faith among nations to the background can find no place within it for the ideals of the prince of peace. The United States rejects such an ordering and retains its ancient faith."

"We know what might happen to us of the United States if the new philosophies of force were to encompass the other continents and invade our own. We, no more than other nations, can afford to be surrounded by the enemies of our faith and our humanity. Fortunate it is, therefore, that in this western hemisphere we have, under a common ideal of democratic government, a rich diversity of resources and of peoples functioning together in mutual respect and peace."

Last January, in the same messaage, I also said: "We have learned that when we deliberately try to legislate neutrality, our neutrality laws may operate unevenly and unfairly—may actually give aid to an aggressor and deny it to the victim. The instinct of self-preservation should warn us that we ought not to let that happen any more."

It was because of what I foresaw last January from watching the trend of foreign affairs and their probable effect upon us that I recommended to the Congress in July of this year that changes be enacted in our neutrality law.

The essentials for American peace in the world have not changed since January. That is why I ask you again to reexamine our own legislation.

Beginning with the foundation of our constitutional government in the year 1789, the American policy in respect to belligerent nations, with one notable exception, has been based on international law. Be it remembered that what we call international law has had its primary objectives avoidance of causes of war and the prevention of the extension of war.

The single exception was the policy adopted by this nation during the Napoleonic wars, when, seeking to avoid involvement, we acted for some years under the so-called embargo and nonintercourse acts. That policy turned out to be a disastrous failure—first, because it brought our own nation colse to ruin, and, second, because it was the major cause of bringing us into active participation in European wars in our war of 1812. It is merely reciting history to recall to you that one of the results of the policy of embargo and non-intercourse was the burning in 1814 of part of this capitol in which we are assembled.

Our next deviation by statute from the sound principles of neutrality and peace through international law did not come for one hundred and thirty years. It was the so-called neutrality act continued in force by the joint act continued in force by the joint resolution of May 1, 1937, despite grave doubts expressed as to its wisdom by many senators and representatives and by officials charged with the conduct of our foreign relations, including myself. I regret that the Congress passed that act. I regret equally that I signed that act.

On July 14th of this year, I asked the Congress in the cause of peace and in the interest of real American neutrality and security to take action to change that act.

I now ask again that such action be taken in respect to that part of the act which is wholly inconsistent with ancient precepts of the law of nations—the embargo provisions. I ask it because they are, in my opinion, most vitally dangerous to American neutrality, American security and American peace.

These embargo provisions, as they exist today, prevent the sale to a belligerent by an American factory of any completed implements of war but they allow the sale of many types of uncompleted implements of war, as well as all kinds of general material and supplies. They, furthermore, allow such products of industry and agriculture to be taken in American flag ships to belligerent nations. There in itself—under the present law—lies definite danger to our neutrality and our peace.

From a purely material point of view what is the advantage of us in sending all manner of articles across the ocean for the final processing there when we could give employment to thousands by doing it here? Incidentally, and again from the material point of view, by such employment we automatically aid our own national defense. And if abnormal profits appear in our midst even in time of peace, as a result of this increase of industry, I feel certain that the subject will be adequately dealt with at the coming regular session of the Congress.

Let me set forth the present paradox of the existing legislation in its simplest terms. If, prior to 1935, a general war had broken out in Europe, the United States would have sold to and bought from belligerent nations such goods and prolucts of all kinds as the belligerent nations, with their existing facilities and geographical situations, were able to buy from us or sell to us. This would have been the normal practice under the age-old doctrines of international law. Our prior position accepted the facts of geography and of conditions of land power and sea power alike as they existed in all parts of the world. If a war in Europe had broken out prior to 1935, there would have been no difference, for example, between our exports of sheets of aluminum and airplane wings; today there is an artifical legal difference. Before 1935 there would have been no difference between the export of cotton and the export of gun cotton. Today there is. Before 1935 there would have been no difference between the shipment of brass tubing in pipe form and brass tubing in shell form. Today there is. Before 1935 there would have been no difference between the export of a motor truck and an armored motor truck. Today there is.

Let us be factual and recognize that a belligerent nation often needs wheat and lard and cotton for the survival of its population just as much as it needs anti-aircraft guns and anti-submarine depth-charges. Let those who seek to retain the present embargo position be wholly consistent and seek new legislation cut off cloth and copper and meat and wheat and a thousand other articles from all of the nations at war.

I seek a greater consistency through the repeal of the embargo provisions, and a return to international law. I seek reenactment of the historic and traditional American policy which, except for the disastrous interlude of the embargo and non-intercouse acts, has served us well for nearly a century and a half.

It has been erroneously said that return to that policy might bring us nearer to war. I give to you my deep and unalterable conviction, based on years of experience as a worker in that field of international peace, that by the repeal of the embargo the United-ed States will more probably remain at peace than if the law remains as it stands today. I say this because with the repeal of the embargo this Government clearly and definitely will insist that American citizens and American ships keep away from the immediate perils of the actual zones of conflict.

Repeal of the embargo and a return to international law are the crux of this issue.

The enactment of the embargo provisions did more than merely reverse our traditional policy. It had the effect of putting land powers on the same footing as naval powers, so far as sea-borne commerce was concerned. A land power which threatened war a war in Europe had broke out prior could thus feel assured in advance that any prospective sea-power antagonist would be weakened through denial of its ancient right to buy anything, anywhere. This, four years ago, gave a definite advantage to one belligerent as against another, not through his own strength or geopraphic position, but through an affirmative act of ours. Removal of the embargo is merely reverting to the sounder international practice, and pursuing in time of war as in time of peace or ordinary trade policies. This will be liked by some and disliked by others, depending on the view they take of the present war, but that is not the issue. The step I recommend is to put this country back on the solid footing of real and traditional neutrality.

When and if repeal of the embargo is accomplished, certain other phases of policy reinforcing American safety should be considered. While nearly all of us are in agreement on their objectives, the only question relates to method.

I believe that American merchant vessels should, so far as possible, be restricted from entering danger zones. War zones may change so swiftly and frequently in the days to come, that it is impossible to fix them permanently by act of Congress: Specific legislation may prevent adjustment to constant and quick change. It seems, therefore, more practical to delimit them through action of the State Department and administrative agencies. The objective of restricting American ships from entering such zones may be attained by prohibiting such entry by the Congress; or the result can be substantially achieved by executive proclamation that all such voyages are solely at the risk of the American owners themselves.

The second objective is to prevent American citizens from traveling on belligerent vessels, or in danger areas. This can also be accomplished either by legislation, through continuance in force of certain provisions of existing law, or by proclamation making it clear to all Americans that any such travel is at their own risk.

The third objective, requiring the foreign buyer to take transfer of title in this country to commodities purchased by belligerents, is also a result which can be attained by legislation or substantially achieved through due notice by proclamation.

The fourth objective is the preventing of war credits to belligerents. This can be accomplished by maintaining in force existing provisions of law, or by proclamation making it clear that if credits are granted by American citizens to belligerents our Government will take no steps in the futures to relieve them of risk or loss. The result of these last two will be to require all purchases to be made in cash and cargoes to be carried in the purchasers' own risk.

Two other objectives have been amply attained by existing law, namely, regulating collection of funds in this country for belligerents, and the maintenance of a license system covering import and export of arms, ammunition and implements of war. Under present enactments, such arms can not be carried to belligerent countries on American vessels, and this provision should not be disturbed.

The Congress, of course, should make its own choice of the method by which these safeguards are to be attained, so long as the method chosen will meet the needs of new and changing day to day situations and dangers.

To those who say that this program would involve a step toward war on our part, I reply that it offers far greater safeguards than we now possess or have ever possessed to protect American lives and property from danger. It is a positive program for giving safety. This means less likelihood of incidents and controversies which tend to draw us into conflict, as they did in the last World War. There lies the road to peace!

The position of the executive bran of the government is that the age and time-honored doctrine of intern tional law, coupled with these positi safeguards, is better calculated than a other means to keep us out of this w

In respect to our own defense, y are aware that I have issued a pro lamation setting forth "a nation emergency in connection with the o servance, safeguarding, and enforc ment of neutrality and the strengthe ing of the national defense within t peace-time authoirzations." This w done solely to make wholly consti tional and legal certain obviously ne essary measures. I have authorized i creases in the personnel of the arm navy, marine corps and coast gua which will bring all four to a total s below peace-time strength as author ed by the Congress.

I have authorized the State Depa ment to use, for the repa..bN Americans caught in the war zo $500,000 already authorized by t Congress.

I have authorized the addition of hundred and fifty persons to the D partment of Justice to be used in t protection of the United States agai subversive foreign activities within borders.

At this time I ask for no other a thority from the Congress. At this ti I see no need for further executi action under the proclamation of lim ed national emergency.

Therefore I see no valid reason the consideration of other legslation this extraordinary session of the Co gress.

It is, of course, possible that in months to come unforseen needs

SYNOPSIS

Beautiful, young Kay Forrest has been employed by Christine Maynard, photographer, to pose for a series of pictures, the background of which will be exquisite Cathedral Gardens, famous Southern resort. Unknown to them, one Jeff Butler, mean, unscrupulous "swamp angel," has led a friend to spy on the two women. Kay, of necessity, is scantily clad while posing for the camera studies. Kay frequently stays with Mrs. Ruth Hamilton, her son Barney, of whom Kay is very fond, and her daughter Margaret. Mrs. Hamilton, a remarkable woman, conceived the idea of the Gardens following the death of her husband. One night, after a local dance, Kirk Reynolds, a ne'er-do-well gambler of Beverly, a resort town, and Kay go for a ride. Kirk's car collides with that of Harvey Jackson, and during the ensuing argument Kirk whips out a gun and kills the young, popular engineer. Kirk threatens to drag her into the thing if she tells even her father. Terror-stricken, she agrees to remain silent. However, the next time she goes out with Barney, he realizes something is wrong. She tries to reassure him, but tells him nothing. Mrs. Emma Forrest, Kay's mother, is firm, positive and demanding. Her father is exactly the opposite, kindly and unassuming. While at home Kirk Reynolds calls for her, and she is forced to go with him despite her family's protests. He tells her the circumstances make it necessary for her to marry him, so she cannot be forced to testify against him if he is accused of Jackson's murder. They drive to a neighboring town and are married. The next time they are together Kay tells Barney she loves him, but is married to Reynolds. She refuses to tell him why she married the gambler, but he promises to try to understand.

The resident of Beverly had not yet recovered from the shock of Miss Henkel, nor quite allayed their resentment.

This resentment had been, at first, a purely commercial thing emanating from the second-floor beauty-salon owned and operated by a maiden lady named Trelane. Ethel Trelane. Miss Trelane had a permanent-waving machine and other impressive accessories and ever since the commencement of the era in which ladies ceased to keep secret their quest for additional pulchritude, Miss Trelane and her shop had been regarded as the ultimate of Beverly urbanity.

But with the opening of Cathedral Gardens and the sudden and bewildering influx of tourists, Miss Sonia Henkel had come. Mr. Robbie Morse, proprietor of the hotel, was reputed to have made the entirely uncivic remark that Ethel's handiwork might be good enough for these here local dames who never was accustomed to nothin' better, but female tourists had got to have class.

Shortly after being ushered into the world some twenty-five years since in Brooklyn, New York, Miss Henkel's very poor and rather honest parents had christened her Sadie. That name had irked the juvenile Miss Henkel until the first year of high school—whereupon she had abandoned high school and all that went with it, including the name Sadie.

Sadie Henkel left home without particular regrets on either side. The following day Miss Sonia Henkel applied for—and obtained—a position as cash girl in a New York department store. Thereafter, her career was interesting, if not totally immaculate. She acquired gentleman friends, the nickname of Babe, an intriguing dance technique and an intimacy with life which completed her education in an exceedingly practical way.

Thereafter she had been many things to many persons. Cash girl, Seventh Avenue dress model, customers' party girl, manicurist, student at a beauty school—and finally a full-fledged and rather expert beautician. And in the course of her travels she acquired an interesting sophistication, a certain exotic beauty, a husky voice and the protective friendship of Kirk Reynolds.

Kirk and Babe were excellent friends.

As a matter of fact, Babe Henkel was very deeply in love with Mr. Reynolds. She admired his virtues and his vices; she adored him for what he was—no matter what. She had come to Beverly to relieve his boredom; she did not permit soggy sentiment to intrude upon their friendship.

This afternoon she had been busy, but the last customer had departed when the telephone rang. It was Kirk: his words close-clipped as usual, his tone authoritative.

"Busy?"

"No."

"Come up."

Babe inspected herself in the mirror. She saw a woman slightly above medium height; well and firmly rounded. Her face was oval and framed by sleek black hair brushed tightly against her head. Her eyebrows were commas, her mouth wide but well shaped: an interesting mouth with a frame of scarlet lips. She closed and locked the door, walked up to the second floor—not unconscious of admiring masculine glances—and knocked on the door of Kirk's room.

He passively accepted the kiss she bestowed upon him. He said, "Sit down, Babe."

She settled her figure into a chair opposite.

"What's on your mind, Kirk?"

"Plenty. Can you take it?"

Two tiny, vertical lines appeared briefly on her forehead. She said, "Let's have it."

He said, "I'm married."

Dark lashes, lashes which were heavy with mascara, rose swiftly from black eyes.

"You're kidding . . ."

"No."

That was all. Curt. Abrupt. Cruel, even.

Miss Henkel's eyes were steady. Dangerous. Her voice matched Kirk's in coldness. She asked, "When?"

"This afternoon."

"Who to?"

"Kay Forrest."

Babe said, "You're a fine louse."

"You think so?"

"I know it."

"Smart girl, ain't you?"

She stared at him. "So what does this make me?" she inquired.

"Anything you want."

"I'm expected to take it sitting down?"

"I don't particularly care."

She was thinking aloud. "So you did kill Harvey Jackson."

He spoke acidly. "Pipe down on that."

"She was with you that night."

"What of it?"

"Plenty. Now get this, Kirk, and get it straight. I don't give a hang what you do with other women, but when you throw the harpoon into me, I get sore."

"So what?"

"So plenty. I know why you married this girl. And there are some things I'm not standing for. This is one of them."

"You're not threatening me, I hope."

"Take it any way you want. Where is she now?"

"None of your business. It just happens I don't mind telling you that she went out to the Gardens with that Hamilton kid."

"Making you look sappy, eh?" Her voice cut into him.

He shrugged. "If that doesn't suit you—"

"It suits me all right. What doesn't suit me is that you didn't tell me what you had up your sleeve."

"Since when did I start shooting off my mouth to you? Now grab this, Babe, I'm in a tough spot, and you might as well know it."

"Okay."

"In this State," he said flatly, "a wife cannot be made to testify against her husband."

She said, "You did kill him, didn't you?"

"I'm telling you for the last time! Lay off that! I'm not talkin' to anybody, see, not even you."

"I'd like to help . . ."

"Then keep your trap closed. I'm saying nothing. Let the saps talk if they want. But don't you join in the chorus." He looked up at her. "And don't go soft on me."

"I won't. I've played around with you a pretty long time, you know."

"Yeh, I know. You're on the level . . . and I'm glad you're not doing a run-out. Though if you feel that way—go to it."

She said, "I don't though. It's just that this marriage of yours ain't easy to swallow all of a sudden."

He took her hand with what was, for him, a great demonstration of affection. "You're not so bad yourself, Babe. So snap out of it."

"I will." She waved and went out the door.

"So he ditches me for a country kid." Her fists clenched. "Well, he can't get away with it."

CHAPTER VI

The Lotus Gardens were nearing completion. It was understood that they would be ready for the public as soon as the azalea season had passed its peak. More reclaimed swamp, greater and more bewildering beauty. More tourists. Business men were delighted, non-business persons didn't quite know how to accept it . . . and godly souls who lived in the very rural districts considered it a disgrace. Country preachers declaimed against this imported iniquity from the pulpits of cross-roads churches, hands were held high in horror, the name of the Devil was bandied freely and with unction. And—town and country alike—the people pointed unwaveringly at what had occurred since the completion of Ruth Hamilton's scheme to beautify ugly swampland and at the same time earn a fair income for herself and her two children.

There had been, for instance, the murder of Harvey Jackson on a lonely country road.

The Harvey Jackson Mystery. It was called that at supper-tables, at club-meetings, at church socials. It was thus dubbed in front-yard conversations and at gathering places like the Fair Play Store and the Bon Ton Pool Room. It was denounced as a shame and disgrace, and the public inquired frequently and vehemently why Gabe Dixon didn't do something about it.

Mr. Dixon was Solicitor of the Seventh Judicial Circuit, of which Beauregard County was a part. He was a resident of the town of Beverly: a man who was tall, lean and nervous. He had misty, shifty eyes and large, restless fingers and feet. He was addicted to stiff white collars and ridiculous little white wash-ties. In times of stress his emotional reactions were betrayed by an excited bobbing of his collar-button beneath a prominent Adam's apple. He was a keen politician and a member of a family which controlled at least half the votes in Beauregard County.

urther legislation may develop but hey are not imperative today.

These perilous days demand cooperaion between us without trace of paranship. Our acts must be guided by e single hard-headed thought—keep America out of this war. In that . I am asking leaders of the two parties in the Senate and in the ouse of Representatives to remain in Vashington between the close of this xtraordinary session and the beginning f the regular session on January 3. They have assured me that they will o so, and I expect to consult with hem at frequent intervals on the course f events in foreign affairs and on the eed for future action in this field, whether it be executive or legislative ction.

Further, in the event of any future anger to the security of the United States or in the event of need for any new legislation of importance, I will mmediately reconvene the Congress in nother extraordinary session.

I should like to be able to offer the ope that the shadow over the world night swiftly pass. I can not. The facts ompel my stating, with candor, that arker period may be ahead. The disster is not of our making; no act of urs engendered the forces which assault the foundations of civilization. Yet e find ourselves affected to the core; ur currents of commerce are changing ur minds are filled with new problems, our position in world affairs has lready been altered.

In such circumstances our policy ust be to appreciate in the deepest ense the true American interest. Rightly considered, this interest is not elfish. Destiny first made us, with ur sister nation on this hemisphere, oint heirs of European culture. Fate eems now to compel us to assume the ask of helping to maintain in the stern world a citadel wherein that ivilization may be kept alive. The e. the integrity and the safety of Americas—these must be kept and serene. In a period when it metimes said that free discussion longer compatible with national aety, may you by your deeds show he world that we of the United States re one people, of one mind, one spirit, ne clear resolution, walking before God in the light of the living.

If your gladioli bulbs are in the ground, the top dry and dead, dig them up and cure them, leaving them out in the sun for a few days. That old bulb on the base of the new bulb is called old core. Pull it off and save your bulbets for next season. They will come up but will not bloom the first year, but will the second year. The thrill of it is to watch this little bulblet grow to the jumbo size in tmie to come.

Plan on buying good healthy roses. Plant the graft union about level with the graft, in prepared leaf-clay-fertilized soil, leveled to allow uniform watering and afternoon shade. Do not cut roses back for the winter, gather and burn all spotted leaves and keep roses healthy to control black-leaf. Climbing roses require no top cover in this area. Have you planned to build a new lily pool? If you are planning to have it hold about three feet of water, that is as it should be. Leave the water in over winter and fish will survive if three feet of water is provided. Lilies of hardy types winter easily, blooming in the spring. Set the pool in full sun. There will be no mosquitoes if fish are in the water. Snails keep the water clear.

If there are bare places in your lawn it will repay you to repair these spots before planting winter grass, if this work is put off until next spring you will not be able to locate them until the winter grass dies away.

At this time it is fair time, regardless of whether it is a local county fair or a State fair, so if you miss one of them try and visit the other, as all fairs are not alike. You get new ideas and way about how this display is made by others. The Alabama State Fair is featuring "Alabama On Parade," the grounds have been re-landscaped, more beds of flowers have been adled to this park. Do not fail to see the "Gardens On Parade" at the flower building. This building has been expanded to the entrance of the old swimming pool which has been remodeled. The poultry will be on exhibit on one side and the other agriculture under the supervision of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute of Auburn. This new type of agricultural display will take the place of the County exhibits formerly shown. This year the Alabama State Fair has opened its doors to all garden and other clubs throughout the State of Alabama. The building has been filled several months and from the way entries are coming in the new management under the direction of Mr. J. Warren Leach as Executive Vice-President and Mr. D. K. Baldwin, the manager, will have to build a new building or add more space for future fairs to come.

The writer will again be Superintendent of flowers and Mrs. Edward Bialas will be his secretary as in the past. The flower building has been re-decorated with bright white and red colored paint and the decorations in the building are very brilliant colors to match the flowers.

The shadow boxes, which will be a special feature this year at the flower building, will set on a special built stage with artistic lighting to make this display somethng that will not be forgotten for time to come. More money has been added to this year's premium list, and do not fail to see the second annual Southern Dahlia Show in the Flower Building under the rules and classification of the American Dahlia Society will be used as in other Dahlia shows in this or other countries, is used.

These statistics are obtained from the records of the County Health Department and are published for the purpose of promoting better registration of births and deaths. Filing of a certificate within five days after the birth rests on the physician or midwife in attendance; undertakers or persons in charge of burials are required by law to obtain a burial permit before the body is interred. Such permits are obtainable only on the presentation of a completed death certificate to the registrar in the beat in which the death occurred.

Anyone having knowledge of births or deaths occurring during August and not included in the above list should report this matter to the County Health Office immediately.

New Chevrolets Coming Soon

—o—

Chevrolet's new 1940 models will make their public bow on October 14, W. E. Holler, general sales manager has announced. The cars, he said, will be shown simultaeously at the National Automobile Show in Grand Central Palace—where, as volume leader in the industry. Chevrolet again had first choice of space—at the General Motors special showing in the Waldorf-Astoria at several important local auto shows, and in dealers' salesrooms throughout the country.

In line with the company's experience in recent years, Mr. Holler said an important part of Chevrolet's announcement advertising has been scheduled in newspapers. Some 6,800 daily and weekly papers from coast to coast are on the schedule, other media being used to supplement and round out this effort. Pre-Announcement advertising has already begun to appear, and space will be increased as the new car introduction date approaches.

Formal presentation of its new product, and the selling program for 1940 will be made to Chevrolet's wholsesale field organization and the Central Office sales department staff at the annual national sales convention scheduled to open in Detroit today, September 28. The sessions will last two days, and will be attended by about 350 key members of the organization.

Congregational Church News

There will be regular services at the Congregational Church on Sunday, October 1. The topic for the morning service will be "Behold, I Bring You Glad Tidings Of Great Joy."

Rev. John B. Gonzales, D.D., expects to take up his work as pastor of the Thorsby Congregational Church this week, arriving in Thorsby on September 27. Rev. Gonzales was born in Iowa. He attended the Grinnell Academy and College and in the fall of 1892 he entered the Christian Workers Training School, graduating in 1894. This school was later affiliated with Hartford Seminary under the corporate name of the School of Religious Education under the Hartford Foundation.

The winter of 1894 and 1895 was spent as Assistant Pastor of Plymouth Congregational Church in Detroit Michigan. In 1902 he turned his face southward to become pastor of a group in Jennings, Louisiana. Later he became Home Missionary Superintendent of Texas, Louisiana and Arkansas. He reorganized the Church at Port Arthur, Texas, of which he became pastor in 1910. From Texas he was called to the Compton Hill Church, St.. Louis, and later returned to Texas for a five-year pastorate with the Central Church of Dallas. As president of the Texas Christian Endeavor Union, he spread his smile all over the state. The war found him directing the religious program of the Y.M.C.A. in Camp Bowie in the negihboring city of Fort Worth. Early in 1920 he followed his manifest destiny back into the superintendency, this time in Kansas, where he has worked for the past twenty or more years. Rev. and Mrs. Gonzales will occupy the Congregational parsonage.

Rev. Hubert A. Bahr, who has served the church as pastor since March 1, left on Monday, September 25, to continue his studies at Vanderbilt University in Nashville, Tennessee.

Christian Endeavor News

The Christian Endeavor group had a very interesting trip to the Eastview Church last Thursday night. They conducted a Christian Endeavor program for the people of that community. The title of the program was "The Hill Of Life."

Sunday evening Miss Jones had charge of the Christian Endeavor program. Her program was a consecrational worship progam, at which Rev. and Mrs. Bahr spoke some words of farewell to the Christian Endeavor.

Following the program a business meeting was held at which time the new officers of the Christian Endeavor, who were nominated at the Executive Committee meeting held in the afternoon, were elected. They were as follows: President, Inez Duke; Vice-President, Sarah Nell Collins; Treasurer, Jack Petersen; Secretary, Frances Wood; Corresponding Secretary Lucile McCain; Organist, Ruth Higgins; Choirster, Fred Blankenship; Chairman Prayer Meeting Committee. Hazel Pate; Chairman, Good Literature Committee, Ruth Duke; Lookout Committee, Leslie Huggins; What-So-Ever Committee, John Davis; Press Committee, Lucile McCain; Music Committee, Howard Lambert; Recreational Committee, Fred Blankenship. It was decided to wait until the arrival of the new pastor before electing a sponsor.

Next Saturday night the Christian Endeavor has planned its monthly social to be held on the hill by the boys' dormitory.

A. B. Foshee Writes To County Voters

—o—

To The Voters:

The recent Legislature by Local Law created an Inferior Court for the County with the Judge to be elected at a Special Election October 24 next. This new Court is given only limited civil and criminal jurisdiction of the large number of smaller cases to be disposed of monthly.

I fully realize the sacredness of holding any public office, and especially one in which judgment is to be passed from time to time on the rights and privileges of our fellowmen. After careful consideration, I am offering myself as a candidate for this office both because of the solicitation of friends, and because I want the office and feel competent of holding it.

I have never before at any time offered myself as a candidate for any public office, and my name will have its first appearance on a ballot at this election.

I am a product of your County, born and raised in the County, of Chilton County parents. After attending the County schools, I finished the five-year Law Course at the State University in four and one-half years. For the past seven years I have been in the active practice of law in the County.

I have always aspired to the higher things in life in spite of adversities, and have always wanted in some small way to be of greater service to my fellowmen, community and County; and this office, if won by me, will in part answer that ambition and that desire.

Your vote will be greatly appreciated.

Most respectfully,
A. B. (Buster) FOSHEE.

MISS MADERA ADAMS TO OPEN DANCING SCHOOL HERE OCT. 3

—o—

Miss Madera Adams, who has long been associated with leading dancing studios in Montgomery, will open her studio of dancing in Clanton on October third.

Miss Adams will teach in the studio formerly occupied by Elizabeth Carter Garrett. Her work will consist of many dances created by Madam Sonia Serova, Edna Lucille Baum, and other noted teachers who were associated with the Dancing Masters Of America in New York City this past summer.

Miss Adams was extremely popular in Notasulga last year where she taught dancing in the school. Her ability to hanlle small chidren made her class large and successful. She will have classes in tap, balet, toe and ballroom, and will specialize in small children's classes.

Registration will be on Friday afternoon, September 29, and classes will begin on Tuesday, October 3rd.

Thorsby Independent Basketball Team

—o—

On Thursday night, September 28, the Thorsby Independent Basketball Teams, both boys and girls, will meet at the Junior High School building at 7:00 o'clock to draft rules and regulations for the forthcoming basketball season. Any young man for young lady who is athletically inclined, and would like to try for a place on the respective teams above will meet tonight with the group.

The Thorsby Independents are hoping to place a strong aggregation on the floor this season as they are making bids to meet some of the strongest basketball talent in Central Alabama.

The boys team will be built around the following veteran players: Ralph Pate, Arnold (Bull) Littleton, C. D. Hayes, "Greenie" Littleton, Jess Cofer, Wendall Hayes and Jack Littleton.

Among those composing the girls team will be such familiar basketeers as Trix Goodgame, Lois Williams, Merle Martin, Gladys Hicks.

A schedule will be mapped out, announcing opponent, place of game and date played.

The Youth in Business

By C. E. Johnston

Dean, Schools of Business International Correspondence Schools

WHEN the last United States census was taken it was found that there were over 4,000,000 people employed in clerical or office work of one kind or another. The number of bookkeepers, cashiers, and accountants increased from 486,700 in 1910 to 930,648 in 1930. There were 316,963 stenographers and typists in the United States in 1910. In 1930 the number was 811,190.

Office work is an attractive field for the young man or woman about to enter business. The number of persons employed in offices increases from year to year. Hours of work are short, working conditions good, and salaries generally satisfactory. Machines and special equipment have largely done away with office drudgery and in future will make the office an even more pleasant place in which to work.

Nevertheless, let no one get the idea that it is easy for the young man or woman who has some general education but no specific training to obtain an office position today. The modern office must be operated economically. Applicants for positions before they are given consideration must be able to answer such questions as—What can you do? What service can you perform that this office needs? Persons, however, who have some training in bookkeeping and accounting, in secretarial studies, in typing, in stenography, in the methods of operating various types of office machines, or in the indexing and filing of correspondence and company records, can seek employment confident that their applications will be given respectful attention.

MALARIA!

If you are run-down and "no good" due to Malaria, try Wintersmith's Tonic! Thousands of people all over the South "swear by it"—millions of people, for over 70 years, have said it's the thing for Malaria. . . . The small bottle costs only 50 cents—yet may convince you that it's what you need. TRY Wintersmith's. That's all we ask.

LISTER HILL

Senator Lister Hill believes that the time has come when the long cherished dream of the canalization of the Coosa River to provide both waterpower and navigation will come true and he recently attended a meeting in Gadsden at which the project was pushed.

It is the idea of Senator Hill that the Federal Government, the Alabama Power Company, and cities adjacent to the Coosa can get together and will get together and that something can and will be accomplished.

Senator Hill believes that locks and dams on the Coosa will not only provide for navigation to Rome, Georgia, but will provide all of the electricity needed in the Alabama industrial section for the next 25 to 40 years. And he is working upon the proposal with might and main and has the help of Senator Bankhead and the entire Alabama congressional delegation in his undertaking.—Atticus Mullin in Montgomery Advertiser.

CHEVROLET'S SERVICE AND MECHANICAL DEPT. UNIQUE

Detroit—Chevrolet's service and mechanical department this week set in motion machinery which will furnish more than 27,000 Chevrolet service mechanics, all over the United States, with complete knowledge of the company's new 1940 product before the latter's introduction to the public next month.

The program, believed to be unique in several respects, opens with the schooling of nine product representatives by the service department personnel and the Chevrolet engineering staff. This initial phase of the operation is now in progress, and will last eight days. It takes place here in Flint, and covers not only every detail of the new models' design, but the whole field of servicing and adjustment, with emphasis on special equipment available for proper servicing of the cars.

The second phase of the program opens with these men's return to their respective territories, which each will hold a two-day training session for the zone service personnel. The latter will then conduct meetings with a still larger total attendance, covering, among them, the entire field of dealer service managers. Finally, the service managers will return to their dealerships and school their respective service shop personnel.

Training of the countrywide service organization through a series of progressive steps, each class of "graduates" dispersing to train a much larger group in the field, will enable Chevrolet to accomplish in one month a program of tremendous scope, Ed Hedner, national service and mechanical manager, pointed out. Every dealer's service mechanics will be familiar with the car from bumper to bumper before a single unit reaches the public's hands.

MORAL ECHOES

D. W. Haskew

One morning I was sitting by the window to my study and a little wren came down on a picket post nearby. Her feathers were all fluffed up and of distress. I saw nothing and asked: she was screaming and chirping notes "Little birdie, why are you so agitated?" Beyond the pickets grass and weeds hid everything from view. For half hour that poor little bird fairly sceramed as she bounced up and down the picket tops. After so long I saw an old mother cat as she came around the end of the picket fence. That mother wren had a brood of little ones in a nest nearby, and knowing that a prowling cat made them to be in great danger she let the welkin ring with her notes of distress. I must say that the little wren showed more concern for her little ones than is shown by many human parents. Is it not a fact that some mothers will not even allow one of her brood to ride away at night in a car with a "Tom Cat?"

Little Martha had gone to Church, and on her return home her mother asked her how she liked the singing. "Oh, I liked it all right," she replied, "but all the other people thought that it was bad." The mother asked, "Why, Martha, I am surprised; Why do you suppose they thought that it was so bad?" "Oh, I don't know," replied Martha, "it kinda made me sick when it was all over and everybody knelt and began to mourn, 'Lord have mercy upon us miserable singers.' " Have you not been impressed with the fact that many a congregation should pray in fealty, "Lord have mercy upon us miserable singers."

I have just read about a pastor in England who received a letter from a good woman in his audience. In the letter she had written a confession that for years she had been attending his church and that invariably she had slept the sermon through. She felt guilty and asked that the preacher accept the enclosed five dollars as conscience money. Whereupon the pastor read the letter to his congregation and announced that any member could sleep on the same term, and that if anyone before him was likely guilty that he would please forward five dollars for every nap taken. I would just like to know how much "conscience money" that preacher did receive.

licenses are the same—$1.10. Clerks in the office of Frabte Judge J. Lee Smith stated Monday of this week that they have been authorized to take applications for drivers licenses for those holding 1939 licenses, following which the applicant is given a receipt for his money. This receipt is also a temporary drivers permit, good for only 45 days. Within that period of time the applicant should receive his official license from Montgomery, mailed direct to him, if his applicaton is accepted. The 1939 licenses expire September 30. In case license is not received within 20 days, applicant is askd to see the Probate Judge who issced the receipt or write directly to the Department of Public Safety, Drivers License Division, Montgomery, giving the information regarding his application.

There has been some talk that those failng to make application by October first would be required to stand some sort of rigid examination before being issued a license, however the local Probate office stated that it had received no notice to that effect. It is understood, however, that those who do not hold the 1939 license will be required to stand a physical and mental examination. The local office stated it had no definite information regarding this procedure.

selected as the consultant. The teachers are fortunate in securing the services of this able leader. Dr. Tidwell is in charge of the curriculum program offered at the University, as residence and extension work.

Dr. Tidwell is well known in Chilton County, being a former State Superintendent of Education and at one time a teacher in this county.

The second meeting of the curriculum committee was held on Saturday, September 23, at which time the committee outlined objectives for the year. Dr. Tidwell was present to assist the local leaders with plans. The plans called for the extension and development of the work Chilton County has been doing for the past few years. The work of the Elementary group is hinged around child study. Special emphasis will be placed on the welfare of the child, physically, emotionally, socially, morally and intellectually. In the Junior and Senior High School group efforts will be made to fit the school program to the needs of the community. Emphasis will be placed on guidance of the individual child.

The County school program is supported by teachers of the county. Each teacher contributes $5.00 of his salary during the year. This money is used to pay the membership fee to the local association, to the Alabama Educational Association, to the National Educational Association, to help support the professional county library, and to pay the curriculum consultant. Chilton County has the honor of being the first county in the state where the teachers joined the National Educational Association one hundred per cent.

Officers in charge of the county organization are: J. R. Ekblad, President; Ralph D. Grant, Vice-President; Madeline Heflin, Secretary.

The following people compose the Curriculum Steering Committee: Supt. H. R. Maddox, Elsie Schurter, J. A. Peterson, Patterson Hicks, W. C. DuBose, H. G. Daniel, U. H. Abrams, Mrs. Dorothy Daniel, Mrs. Frances Camp, Mrs. W. O. Bradley, Mrs. J.P. Payne, Mrs. Edna Kinney.

COURT MINUTES

tion of the Court House in said County, it appears from the returns of said election that Clanton and Benson in said County were the two highest places voted for in said election. It is therefore ordered that those two places be put in nomination for a second election for the same purpose, on the last Saturday in April, 1871.—M. Roberson, Judge of Probate, Anderson Baker, Sr., A. J. Cooper, G. W. Culp, Commissioners."

By this we see that if Benson located near where Isabella now is, had received the most votes in the run-off election Clanton would probably not have been the City it is today.

Further on in these minutes, recordings show that one of the Commissioners, A. J. Cooper, was awarded the contract for the erection of this Court House, which was to be brick, at a bid of five thousand dollars. Old timers tell us, however, that Mr. Cooper did not erect this structure, being prevented by law to do so because he was a member of the Commissioners Court.

It is noticeable that at nearly every session of the Court during those days, the matter of establishing or attempting to establish, roads was the primary business. Esablishment of ferrys across the Coosa River and the building of bridges over the Mulberry Creek, were also mentioned.

There is an air of mystery surrounding the change of the name of this County from Baker to Chilton, according to this book. The book records on page 149, under the date of November 2nd, 1874, the last session of the Court under the name of 'Baker County.' In recording this session no mention was made of the change that was to be made in the County's name. M. Roberson was Judge at that time. As if to signify a change of some sort, two pages were left blank before the next session was recorded. This session was under the date of February 8th, 1875, and heading 'Chilton County,' but no mention was made of the change in the name of the County.

On one occasion we find that in granting B. F. Higgins a license to operate a ferry under the date of February 8, 1875, the following rates for ferrage were set: "For a 4-horse ox or mule team, $1.00; for a 2-horse or ox team, 50c; for a one-ox or horse team or man and horse, 25c; for a man or woman, 10c; stock, single head, 10c . . . ."

It appears that Bibb County sued Baker County for something or other and the settlement was made by Chilon County after the name was changed. This took place in 1875, for under the date of April 12, 1875, we find in one place the following: "Be it ordered by the Court that the following claim be passed and allowed; Doster & Jones, defending County in case of Bibb County vs. Baker County, $200 . ."

First Newspaper

An interesting article in the Union-Banner some time ago stated in part: " . . . the first paper in Clanton, the Chilton County Courier, came out on February 4, 1875, which was volume 1, number 1 . . .'

This writer does not wish to contradict the Banner's statement, but it appears that the Chilton County Courier was the first newspaper in 'Chilton' County, after the name was changed from 'Baker,' but was not the first paper in Clanton. In this book an order by the Commissioners Court is recorded as follows: "Regular session of Commissioners Court, November 2nd 1874. It is ordered that Wm. A. Collier, editor 'Baker County Record', be allowed forty-eight dollars for advertising general election, Senatorial election, and appointments of Sheriff of deputies at different precincts in said County."

By this it appears that three months prior to the time Editor Collier published his 'Chilton County Courier,' he operated the 'Baker County Record' at Clanton, and when the name of the County was changed Editor Collier changed the name of his paper, and started out anew with number 1, volume 1.

Yes, sir, there's some interesting things recorded in this 70-year-old book.

e Pay Again—

We suppose it is only more "proof the pudding" that we have an onomizing State administration, but uto driver has again been saddled th more taxes. Instead of sixty cents ito owners and thirty cents for owners, everybody pays $1.10 for enses good for two years. They can't it and take it yearly any more; it's o years at a whack now, and let's a little figuring: If a man owned auto in 1939 and his wife drives o, the licenses for the two was '90 its. For the next year this couple will $1.10. If there are two non-owners the family the comparison will be 55 in 1940 to $1.20 in 1939, and so on. is hiring and firing in the Highway trol Department evidently caused a ficit, and of course the autoist will ve to make it up. The formal opening of the Chilton nty schools this week is an event t touches this entire county in ond of common interest. The teach- are all here and are being cordially comed, for it is these teachers who doing the greatest piece of work the world for our children.

here is an old, old story that pays ute to their far-reaching influence which is as timely in this year as in the past:

A king, wishing to reward the man had done the most outstanding k in the kingdom, called his sub- s before him. He first called a phy- an and asked 'what have you done' answer was 'I have discovered a m that has saved the lives of lit- children and I have helped to keep city clean and healthy and happy.' the king said 'well done.'

Then he called a business man and ed 'what have you done for the gdom?' And the business man an- red 'I have sent a fleet of ships on seven seas and I have helped to e the country prosper.' And the said 'well done.'

COUNTY FAIR WAS SUCCESS THIS YEAR

OVER $600 PAID TO EXHIBITORS AND OVER SEVEN THOUSAND VISIT FAIRGROUNDS

Chilton County's third annual Fair came to a close last Saturday night, and has been termed a decided success from almost every standpoint.

Opening under overcast skies, the Fair got underway, with the crowds growing each day, although inclement weather prevailed the greater part of the week. Officials of the Fair stated that over seven thousand men, women and children passed through the gates into the enclosure during the five days. Comments heard among those who attended was that this was perhaps the most interesting and beneficial undertaking of the Fair Association.

The many exhibits, group, individual and commercial, were viewed by the citizens of the County. These displays were informative and beneficial to the County's citizenship, especially the agricultural department, under the supervision of Mr. Howard R. Oden, who asked the News to convey his deep appreciation to the farmers of the County for their splendid cooperation and manifestation of interest during the Fair.

Association Secretary J. Mell Martin made the following statement Monday of this week: "We are well pleased with the interest and cooperation displayed in the staging of this third annual Fair for the people of our county. We feel that much good has been derived through the showing off of Chilton County products. May I, speaking for the officials of the Fair and the Clanton Kiwanis Club, sincerely thank the citizens of the County and all

Lions To Meet Friday Night At 7:30

Clanton Lions will hold their bi-monthly meeting Friday night at 7:30 oclock' Instead of meeting at the First Methodist Church, which is their regular custom, the meeting will be held at the Tourist Cafe, five miles south of Clanton on the Clanton-Montgomery Highway.

As there are five Friday nights in September, there has not been a meeting of the club in three weeks, local Lions meeting only first and third Fridays.

An interesting program has been planned for the meeting tomorrow night and all members are urged to be present for this meeting.

The Leader Observes Twentieth Anniversary

Twenty years in business in Clanton is the distinction The Leader Store holds, for beginning Friday morning this store is placing their complete stock of quality merchandise on their counters at greatly reduced prices, commemorating their twentieth anniversary

The Leader has, since its beginning, been rated as one of Clanton's leading dry goods stores, and the advent of this sale will be heralded by announcement of reduced prices for the buying public's benefit in this County. This huge sale is an expression of The Leader's appreciation for the splendid business they have enjoyed throughout these twenty years, and will be well received throughout this section. A 4-page advertisement appears in this issue of the News, loaded down with money-saving prices, which one may take advantage of when the doors of The Leader swing open' on Friday morning of this week.

Clanton-Isabella Tie In Game Friday

Last Friday afternoon the Chilton County High School Tigers met one of their bitterest rivals on the local field when they faced the strong Isabella team. These fighting groups gave nor asked quarters and when the final whistle blew the score was 6-6.

Both teams showed a splendid spirit of sportsmanship during the course of the game, and the final score showed that they were evenly matched when it came to marching the pigskin across the lines.

The Tigers will meet the Maplesville team here next Friday afternoon at 3:00 P.M. This promises to be an interesting game packed with action.

Teachers Institute Convened Here Monday

The Chilton County Teachers Institute for white teachers of the county, was held Monday of this week at the courthouse.

The 176 teachers of the County heard A. R. Meadows, as the main speaker of the day, at 11:00 o'clock. Mr. Meadows is head of the Research and Survey division of the State Department of Education. An education survey will be made in this county, and Mr. Meadow's talk was along this line.

The rest of the program for the day called for the usual routine of business prior to the opening of all county schools, which was Tuesday of this week. Departmental meetings were held in the afternoon.

The institute for Negro teachers was held last Saturday.

BAPTIST TRAINING UNION TO MEET AT OAK GROVE

The Quarterly Baptist Training Union meeting of the Chilton Association will be held Sunday afternoon, October 9, at Oak Grove Baptst Church at 2:00 o'clock. We want each church in the Association represented at this meeting and especially do we want the officers present.

CITY WPA PAYROLL REACHES $205 PER DAY ON SEWER WORK

Mayor C. Fenn Jones tells us this week that the WPA payroll for workers on the sewer project is now $205 per day, and that the work is going forward rapidly.

Without a doubt this is a big help to the City and County, this increased payroll, and we are told that the present project will consume about one year's time.

MAPLESVILLE REVIVAL TO BEGIN NEXT SUNDAY NIGHT

The revival meeting will begin at the Maplesville Methodist Church Sunday night, October 8. Services will be held each night through the following week at 7:00 o'clock. The pastor of the Church, Rev. Charles H. Hildreth, cordially invites the public to attend these services.

FIRE DESTROYS QUANTITY OF LUMBER TUESDAY THIS WEEK

The dry kiln belonging to Mr. H. S. Shaw, located back of the site of the Chilton County High School, touched off a quantity of lumber last Tuesday about noon, and a goodly quantity of lumber was damaged or consumed by the flames before the Clanton Volunteer Firemen could extinguish the blaze.

Mrs. T. W. Bryan returned Monday from a visit in Selma and Montgomery.

DRIVING TESTS WILL BE GIVEN BY OFFICERS

TWO HIGHWAY PATROLMEN WILL BE IN CLANTON EACH WEDNESDAY GIVING TESTS

The office of the Judge of Probate of this county announced this week that two members of Alabama's Highway Patrol would be in Clanton each Wednesday for the purpose of conducting driving tests for those who wish to secure drivers license for 1940, but who failed to possess a 1939 license. This test will be given other persons who require examination before being issued a permit for the coming year.

Highway Patrolmen have been assigned to give these tests in all counties over the State, and although the names of the two assigned to Chilton was not learned, it is presumed that the two will be here next Wednesday. They will be stationed at the Courthouse, it was learned, and those persons who will require the test are asked to keep this in mind and cooperate with the officers.

COUNTY BUILDING NEW ROAD LAEDING FROM THE AIRPORT

Work has been underway for several days on building a new road from the Airport to connect with what is known as the Temple Road. This new road connects with the stretch built by the County from the Lay Dam Road to the airport, over a year ago, and continues for about a quarter of a mile to intersect the Temple road. This stretch under construction runs through the low bottom land southeast of the airport. A need for this vital connection is doubled when functions which attract large crowds are held at the airport, as it gives another outlet and inlet for the flow of traffic.

Virgil Headley Gets Long Term Sentence

A Chilton County jury found Virgil Headley guilty of murder during the regular Fall term of Circuit Court here last week. A sentence of twenty years years was imposed by Circuit Judge Arthur Glover. Headley was found guilty of killing Lorenza D. Mims, farmer of the Pleasant Grove community, with a 12-guage shotgun last July. He immediately filed an appeal.

Twenty-seven other cases were disposed of during the session. The case of Coleman Reed, negro, charged with the murder of another negro at Lomax last Spring, was transferred to Juvenile Court. Both Dewey Price and Zadie Bell Smith were each found guilty of Carnal Knowledge of a g.

Carnal Knowledge and given six-year sentences. They also filed appeals.

The remainder of the twenty-seven cases were either nol-prossed or found guilty and were sentenced.

Clanton Motors To Show New Fords Friday

Clanton Motors, local Ford dealers of this city, has announced the showing of the 1940 model cars at their showroom Friday of this week, October 6, at which time the public is cordially invited to inspect these new cars.

Messrs. T. J. Littlejohn and Julius, (Rip) Burnett, operators of this agency, stated this week that the new model Fords present notable advances in styling, comfort, convenience and safety, and they are anxious that the people of this section be on hand to view them next Friday.

Two V-8 engines are available this year, an 85 horsepower engine in the Ford V-8 and the deluxe Ford V-8, with a 60 horsepower engine optional in the Ford V-8.

An advertisement in this issue of the News extends a cordial invitation to everyone to visit the Clanton Motors' showroom Friday, October 6, and inspect these modern cars.

New Officials Take Office Monday

Chilton Countys' new Tax Assessor, J. D. Rockett and Tax Collector, T.M. Taylor, took the oath of office and are now in charge since Monday of this week.

These gentlemen are this week making the usual Assessor's and Collectors' rounds over the County, and will be out of office for several days. Chief clerk in the office of the Tax Collector is Mrs. Genie Robinson, who was several years ago clerk in the office of the Tax Assessor. In the Assessors' offige is Mrs. U. L. Headley as chief clerk. These ladies are looking after the business of the two offices in the absence of the Collector and Assessor.

Registrars To Be In Session Soon

An announcement this week by the Chilton County Board of Registrars, namely, E. R. Piper, chairman, A. I. Lecroy, and W. W. Wingard is to effect that they will be in session at various places over the county beginning October 25. Their purpose will be to register those qualified under the law to register as electors

A notice appears in this issue of the Chilton County News, naming the places and dates they will be in session over the county through the month of December. Those who become of voting age and wish to become qualified voters of this County, or who wish to transact any business coming under this head, are asked to keep in mind the dates and places the Board will convene.

1940 HUNTING LICENSES ON SALE MONDAY THIS WEEK

Hunting licenses for 1940 went on sale at the office of Probate Judge J. Lee Smith Monday of this week. Clerks in the office were busy issuing the permits the early part of the week.

State licenses are $3.00 and County licenses are $1.00.

County Health Officer Pleads For Funds

Judge J. Lee Smith and chilton County's Commissioners were appealed to Monday, October 2, by Dr. S. D. Sturkie, County Health Officer, to increase the health department's appropriation to provide for the addition of one nurse to the staff

The Health offcial spoke at length on the need for a nurse, pointing out that one nurse cannot begin to meet the public health nursing needs of the County. A total of $1980 will be needed to finance the project, it was brought out.

Chilton County is one of 33 counties in Alabama now with only one nurse, Dr. Sturkie stated. Many of the counties with two nurses are counties with a total revenue not exceeding Chilton's. Evidence was presented that the per capita expenditure for public health in Chilton County is lower than that for any other county service including roads, welfare, education, and agriculture.

The Commissioners were also urged to continue their appropriations for syphilis control and tuberculosis control. The Health officer declared he was proud of the contrbutions the Court has made to these phases of the local health program.

Dr. Sturkie also spoke Monday to the County Teachers Institute. He told of new features of the school health program now being carried out in St. Louis, Mo. He pointed out that special sight conservation classes, classes for crippled children and the hard of hearing were possibilities that local school authorities should consider for the future in Chilton County. The teachers were urged to give their full cooperation to the health department.

DR. JOE EARL GOWAN OUT OF OFFICE FOR FEW DAYS

Dr. Joe Earl Gowan, who is a 1st Lieutenant Dental Reserve, will leave Saturday, October 7, for Mayo Clinic, in Rochester, Minn. for two week's active Army duty. He will be given a special course in oral surgery and will be back in his office by October 24.

FULL-BODIED PEACH AFTER ONE YEAR SAYS MR. JOHNSON

Mr. J. Matt Johnson, the News has been informed, enjoyed a luscious full-bodied peach from a young tree he set out last January, the peach being plucked in June of this year.

This was the Golden Jubilee variety of peach, and when Mr. Johnson planted the tree it was two to three feet tall, and was purchased from T.W. Bryan who represents the Concord Nurseries here.

Jemison F.F.A. Wages War On Rats

An abundance of pesky Argentine ants on the Jemison School campus has caused the Jemison F.F.A. Chapter to put on an ant riddance campaign under the leadership of Mr. H. H. Denson, teacher of Vocational Agriculture and through cooperation of Mr. Peterson and other teachers, noticeable success has been attained. At the present time only a few ants can be found in the building and on the campus.

About 125 cans were secured from homes in the community and were "loaded" with a bait made up of sugar, honey, benzoate of soda, tartaric acid, and sodium arsenate. The total cost was $1.80. About four and one-half gallons of poison bait were made.

Local Patrolmen Injured In Auto Crash

W. J. Williams and J. E. Is[illegible] were among the eight persons [illegible] in the collision [illegible] State H[illegible] Patrol car and a private automobile, Wednesday afternoon, Sept. 27, ten miles north of [illegible]. Williams and Isenhower are highway patrolmen stationed at Clanton.

Williams received a fractured ankle and lacerations and Isenhower received slight cuts and bruises. Occupants of the private car who received injuries were as follows: Jesse Ammons, 74, head and chest injuries; Buran Ammons, 36, back and head wounds; Emerson Ammons, 28, minor cuts; Mrs. Jesse Ammons, 59, cuts and bruises; Mrs. Nancy Sellers, 72, fractured arm and lacerations; and Nancy Sellers, 35, head injuries.

The Ammons family is said to be from Ponce de Leon, Fla., the Sellers from Tallassee.

Highway Patrol Captain N. W. Kimbrough, who made immediate investigation of the accident, said it occurred when the Ammons car, a 1933 model Ford turned into the highway from a side road and struck the patrol car, in the region of the right fender. Patrolman Isenhower, driving radio patrol car number 215, was approaching Montgomery.

RECEIVING APPLICATIONS

We have been requested to announce by Marvin Durbin, County FSA Supervisor, that his office is now receiving applications from farmers for rehabilitation loan under the Farm Security Administration.

Rehabilitation loans are made by the FCA to farmers to pay off chattel mortgages, purchase livestock, tools, feed, seed, fertilizer etc. under a five year plan.

Applications are now available at the FSA office in the Johnson Building, across the street from the County Agent's office.

The Worst Driver

Very nearly the worst driver of all, it seems to us, is the infantile one who wants to play. He finds youthful delight in blowing his horn loudly in underpasses just for the noise it makes. He loves to race people who are about to pass him. He practices the fine art of slowing up just enough between traffic lights to get by himself but make the man behind him miss. He likes to frighten approaching drivers by veering towards the middle of the road and back. He is a perfect cutup with his lights at night, dimming them in seeming courtesy and then turning them on full at a time when they can do the most damage. He feels that a speed of less than 80 miles an hour on the highway is a reflection on his manhood. He is sure that traffic signals and boulevard stop signs are just a game the cops are playing with him and that he wins if he violates all of them he can with impunity. His mental age is 5.—John Temple Graves III, in "This Morning"—Age Herald.

DeSoto And The Coosa

Come J. K. McEwen, Coosa County historian, with information that in 1540 DeSoto camped in the bend of Hatchette Creek in the northwest section of Coosa County.

A map of DeSoto's travels across the country, reports the historian, is still preserved in the archives of Valadolid, Spain. Dated 1541, the map was apparently drawn 30 years later. It locates with amazing accuracy the rivers of Alabama and Mississippi, but the only name today derived directly from original names of DeSoto's map is Coosa, which was listed "Cosa."

In the year 1939 it is interesting to know that nearly 500 years ago unknown geographers and historians labored to enlighten the world concerning this part of Alabama.—Anniston Times.

What's In A Name

The Huntsville Mercury calls attention to the fact that the Alabama Power Company does not sign any name to its ads. Neither does the TVA sign its name to any ads. (If you get what we mean.)—The Greene County Democrat.

Well, does anybody else have anything to say about the matter under consideration —Alexander City Outlook.

If there is a man, woman or child in Alabama, who is not acquainted with "Reddy Kilowatt," or who does not know that "Electricity is Cheap in Alabama," they are too ignorant for it to make any difference, anyway.

War Doings---And Other Devilment

Gathered from many exchanges and other sources:

Neutrality Law—

This country's neutrality act, when invoked by the president, puts the following restrictions into effect:

Americans are forbidden to sell, and American ships are forbidden to carry arms and implements of war to any warring power or to any other nation for trans-shipment to a belligerent.

American ships, however, may transport any other materials anywhere they choose. Foreign ships, including those of belligerents, may come to the United States and get cargoes other than actual arms and munitions.

Americans cannot make loans to warring nations except normal, short-term commercial credits and are forbidden to collect money for them or travel on their vessels.

American merchantmen trading with belligerents cannot arm themselves for protection against attack on the high seas.

The President may close United States harbors to submarines and armed merchantmen of belligerents if such action is deemed advisable to safeguard this country's neutrality or other interests.—A.P.

Laws on Enlistment—

A statute enacted in 1917 would make it illegal for American citizens to enlist in any European army for hostilities abroad.

A fine of not more than $1,000 and imprisonment of not more than three years are the penalties.

In addition, any American citizen who enlisted in a foreign army and took oath of allegiance to the government he was serving would lose his American citizenship.

In the past, the State Department has taken the position that citizens who enlist in the military services of foreign sates cannot expect to receive the protection which the United States ordinarily accords its citizens.

Numerous Americans were reported to have enlisted in the Spanish civil war, but available records here show no convictions on charges of violating the enlistment statute.—A.P.

Why Can't We?—

"We can't keep out of it."

Everywhere you hear it.

Sometimes it is said with fatalistic resignation.

Sometimes it is said with what seems a pleased excitement.

But, you will notice, it is seldom said with a calm, impressive recitation of the reasons why we can't keep out of it. And the explanation for that fact is that this feeling, this surrender, is mainly only a feeling—it is not a carefully analyzed and established conviction.

Usually, it is the other fellow who is going to drag us into the war. It is not ourselves.

No, we are capable of controlling our emotions and keeping our heads.

But the other fellow?

Well, he's not such a superior fellow. He's likely to go off half-cocked. And there is such a multitude of these "other fellows."

As strong as is our own self-control, as cool as are our tempers, as penetrating as is our vision, we can't be sure that we will be able to control these other fellows. They are pretty sure to get the best of us.

So we fall into line, we sink into the pit of helplessness and resignation, we ourselves, however reluctantly, take up the refrain, "We can't keep out of it."

Well, why can't we?

If you really believe that America, that even Britain and France and that the world as a whole will, in the long run, best be served by keeping inviolate in this nation an area of peace, good will and liberty, why, then, demand a bill of particulars of yourself and of anybody else who is repeating this slogan of despair.

Get hard with yourself first of all.

And then put the question squarely up to the other fellows.

For this feeling that we can't avoid war is itself the greatest threat of all to our peace.

If we are going to surrender peace without a real struggle if we are going to appease the defeatists and the interventionists without resistance, why, of course, we increase tremendously the risk of "yielding" to war, of "betraying" peace, of toppling over the precipice.

America does not have to enter this war!

It does not have to be subject to a fatalistic, unexamined feeling.

It can rise above its emotions. It can maintain peace—for America and peace in America, at least, for the rest of the world.

But it will take the will to do so. It will take courage. It will take clear-eyed reason.

It will take a fight to save the peace. And it is an ominous fact that many seem, in large measure, to have surrendered before that fight has gotten well started.

That makes the task of the battlers for peace all the more urgent.—Age-Herald.

MORAL ECHOES

D. W. Haskew

An old Indian Chief came to the white man in search of the trail to happiness. He was taken to the best night clubs, heard the swing of orchestras, looked in on their drinking parties and in many ways he was shown how the white man had his fun. After he had been rushed from place to place and given a taste of modern life the old Indian stood erect in the beauty of his eagle plumes and this is what he had to say: "White man must be unhappy; works so hard for to have a good time—no have a good time at all." The old Indian found more joy and happiness in watching the sun go down every evening as his ancestors had done, than in rushing here and there, as the white man does. Would that man of today could learn that there is much peace and happiness in the quiet things of life. Our souls will ever grow larger as we watch the setting sun, as we behold the rippling waves, the glowing embers of an open fire, as we look up at the twinkling stars and as we sit in the moonlight and meditate upon the great things of time and eternity. That is what produces real happiness.

People from America, and the rest of the world, are treking their way to the Worlds Fair in New York. Undoubtedly it is a great sight. I have talked to many who have gone and come. They speak fluently of foreign buildings, of manufactured machinery, of flaring lights and waterfalls, but as yet I have not heard one visitor to the Fair say one word about the religious atmosphere that should be there. That leads me to say that materially and humanly speaking, the Worlds Fair is a wonderful success, but religiously it is a flop. Human achievement and human wickedness sit on the throne, In the world of tomorrow pray tell me where will God be?

Have you not seen some people who met accidents and trouble all the way of life? Adolphe Sax, the inventor of the Saxophone, was one of that type. At the age of ten he fell down a stairway and seriously bruised himself. Shortly after that he swallowed a pin that came near taking his life. Then followed another severe burn, the drinking of poison. At the age of twenty-one he was near a powder dump in Paris when it suddenly exploded. Sax picked himself up many yards from the explosion almost minus clothing but he lived through it. In 1851 rifles were leveled at him to take his life because it was thought that he had shot into the ranks of Louis Napoleon's army. Thus went along life. One accident after another. But Adolphe did not live in vain. He invented the Saxophone. It is a small consolation to think today that there are some people who would have shot him to keep him from inventing the Saxophone.

I have at last found a name for a man who makes debts and does not try to pay them. He is a man who goes through life trying to get something for nothing. He is all the time cheating others because he is too dishonest to pay for what he gets. No one trusts him. The next time you meet a man of that kind, speak to him saying: "Good morning, Mr. Deadbeat." You will doubtless have a fight on your hands but you will be on the side of truth. Any man who cheats his way is a "dead-beat."

* * *

Just let me give to you an insight into the trouble of the world today. It is all coming about because the calibre of production is out of kilter. At Washington, in England, over in Germany and Italy, they have decided to increase the calibre of war guns, fighting ships, flying planes and trained armies They are increasing the calibre for fighting. At the same time they are decreasing the calibre of men. If the nations would change their production and would make the calibre of their guns smaller, and the calibre of their men larger, there would be less danger of war. Men who lead a nation into war are men with small calibre. Brother, this is the God's truth.

"Build-Up": Way to Ease Women's Pain

Many weak, run-down women are in a vicious circle. Their undernourishment often leads to what is called functional dysmenorrhea and its symptoms—headaches, nervousness, irritability, intermittent cramp-like pains—from which many women suffer. Surest way to break the vicious circle is by building strength and energy, which so many find may be done with the help of CARDUI. It stimulates appetite, aids digestion, and thus helps in this "build-up" of physical resistance. Women also report that, if taken just before and during "the time," CARDUI helps to ease the pain and discomfort of the period.

Alabama State Fair Is Being Well Received

o

Birmintham, Ala. — The Alabama State Fair, enjoying the thousands of congratulations pouring in from all over the State because of the wonderful exposition given the people this year because of the modernness of the entire set-up, will really close out the week in a blaze of glory and with two bursts of speed, one Friday and one Saturday afternoon. The semi-finals of the greatest auto race meet ever held in the South will be fought out over the race track Friday afternoon and then again on Saturday afternoon the Alabama Sweepstakes will be decided. At that time the champion of the meet will be declared and presented with a trophy and his lion's share of the purse money.

The size of the purses this year had something to do with attracting the largest field of drivers from all over America that ever came to an auto race meet in the South. Of course, it looks like final arguments for chief laurels of the meet will be decided between Emory Collins, who grabbed off the American dirt track Championship last year, and "Mad Gus" Shrader, who is known to race fans over two continents. They were the chief record-smashers at the initial race meet Tuesday. They will be whirling down the stretches and crashing around the turns Friday and Saturday in efforts to hang up new track records, new State records, and even new marks for the South.

Other luminaries will be crowding them, however, and Bobby Sall will be in there giving them the battle of their lives, as well as Bayliss Leverette, Ben Shaw, the Veteran of Indianapolis Speedway meets, Dåve Champrau, others who thrilled the crowds

In all, there will be over thirty ers competing in the two meets day and Saturday afternoons, dri some of the fastest race creation America.

Saturday night the curtain wil rung down on the greatest State in Alabama's history.

SYNOPSIS

Beautiful, young Kay Forrest has been employed by Christine Maynard, photographer, to pose for a series of pictures, the background of which will be exquisite Cathedral Gardens, famous Southern resort. Unknown to them, one Jeff Butler, mean, unscrupulous "swamp angel," has led a friend to spy on the two women. Kay, of necessity, is scantily clad while posing for the camera studies. Kay frequently stays with Mrs. Ruth Hamilton, her son Barney, of whom Kay is very fond, and her daughter Margaret. Mrs. Hamilton, a remarkable woman, conceived the idea of the Gardens following the death of her husband. One night, after a local dance, Kirk Reynolds, a ne'er-do-well gambler of Beverly, a resort town, and Kay go for a ride. Kirk's car collides with that of Harvey Jackson, and during the ensuing argument Kirk whips out a gun and kills the young, popular engineer. Kirk threatens to drag her into the thing if she tells even her father. Terror-stricken, she agrees to remain silent. However, the next time she goes out with Barney, he realizes something is wrong. She tries to reassure him, but tells him nothing. Mrs. Emma Forrest, Kay's mother, is firm, positive and demanding. Her father is exactly the opposite, kindly and unassuming. While at home Kirk Reynolds calls for her, and she is forced to go with him despite her family's protests. He tells her the circumstances make it necessary for her to marry him, so she cannot be forced to testify against him if he is accused of Jackson's murder. They drive to a neighboring town and are married. The next time they are together Kay tells Barney she loves him, but is married to Reynolds. She refuses to tell him why she married the gambler, but he promises to try to understand. Meanwhile, Miss Sonia ("Babe") Henkel, Beverly beauty operator of questionable morals, and intimate friend of Kirk Reynolds, berates him for marrying Kay, feeling that he has overlooked a responsibility to her.

Mr. Dixon was shrewd and conscientious . . . whenever and wherever conscientiousness was not calculated to deprive him of votes. In a court-room, his very awkwardness made him effective, and he held the reins of office tightly, doing the major portion of his job with astonishing efficiency.

For instance, he was genuinely anxious to find and convict the killer of Harvey Jackson. That, he felt, would be an excellent move. Harvey Jackson had been one of the most popular young men in Beverly, son of ultra-respectable middle-class parents, an able young engineer and a man highly regarded by maidens and others. And because Mr. Dixon was sincere in his desire to convict, he—at first—said nothing about the odd little compact which had been found on the road beside Harvey Jackson's dead body. Of course, the whole town knew about the compact, and discussed it avidly. The man who had found it failed to keep the secret.

Solicitor Dixon investigated shrewdly, endeavoring to make sound evidence of that compact. He learned that it possibly belonged to Katherine Forrest—daughter of Andrew Forrest. He couldn't prove it, of course—not then—because he understood that it was a type of compact which could be purchased in any of several New York cosmetic shops; the sort of compact that touring ladies might have carried. Then he discovered that on the night of Harvey Jackson's demise, Kay Forrest had gone riding with Kirk Reynolds. The evidence was still too circumstantial, but it indicated several things to Mr. Dixon. He believed that Reynolds had killed Jackson and that Kay Forrest had witnessed the affair.

Beverly's hard common sense, plus verbose interpretation by Solicitor Dixon, gave a fairly proper picture of the tragedy. Mr. Dixon was quizzed.

"You reckon Kirk Reynolds killed him, Gabe?"

"He might have."

"Then why don't you have him arrested?"

"No chance of convictin' him. Not on what we've got."

"You knew all the time that was Kay Forrest's compact. Why didn't you light on him befo'?"

"Lots of gadgets like that. Any of these tourists might have lost one similar."

"But you could have tried him, couldn't you?"

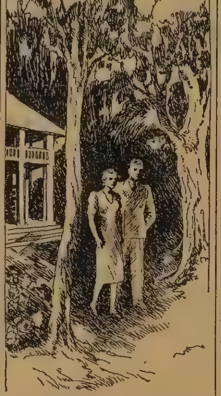
"That wouldn't have been smart. He'd have been acquitted, and then he couldn't be touched again."

"Well"—with a hopeless gesture—"Look what he's done now. He's gone and married her."

"He sho' has. And I cain't make her testify against him. Smart boy, this Reynolds."

"Smarter'n you, eh, Gabe?"

Mr. Dixon was unperturbed. "No-o, I wouldn't be sayin' that. This here marriage—with them not even livin' together—tells us plenty. It's just about the same as sayin' that Kirk killed Jackson and Kay Forrest saw him do it. They might's well have advertised in the Gazette. And listen, when you know a man has done a crime, when you know it, mind you, it's just a question of time befo' you git the evidence to convict him with."



A young man and a girl left the house.

Cathedral Gardens was bathed in silver glow. Moonlight limned the old house sympathetically. A sign, tacked to a pine at the entrance to the Gardens, announced that inasmuch as this was the last night of the full moon, no tourists would be admitted on succeeding days after seven o'clock.

A young man and a girl left the house and walked toward the water. The young man was tall and straight and broad of shoulder. He walked slowly and gazed through the almost unearthly beauty of the Gardens with pardonable pride.

Jim Owenby, landscape engineer, had designed and built Cathedral Gardens. To a Beverly man had been given the distinction of having created this beauty spot. Working from Mrs. Hamilton's original idea, fired by youthful ambition and possessing great technical skill, he had planned and supervised.

Margaret Hamilton was young, slender and unobtrusively beautiful. Her hair was ash-blond, and she wore it close against her small, perfectly shaped head. Her eyes were gray, like those of her brother. At the moment they were soft and gentle, perhaps because her hand rested confidently on the muscular arm of the young man at her side.

He helped her into a little bateau which was tied informally to a stake. He seated himself beside her, and handed her a paddle.

A boat came out of the darkness and purled gently past them. A woman's voice, freighted with a sigh for the things that might have been, came to their ears. The voice said, "Did you see that young couple? It must be wonderful to be young—and to be here in the moonlight."

Margaret Hamilton touched the hand of the young man. The place was overpowering in its beauty. Unbelievable. Tiny islands, flaming with blossoms, seemed vague and unreal. There were no dimensions.

Jim Owenby propelled the little craft into a sheltered bayou. Here they were sheltered by a midnight blackness, and his arms went about the girl. He said nothing. He did not kiss her. Here was a communion which transcended the desire for demonstration and caresses, and if their bodies were vitally alive—if they were acutely conscious of each other—that was because they were very young and very much in love.

And then he said, gently, "I thought we could talk out here . . ."

"I understand. Let's go back, because we must talk."

They found a seat in an arbor which was mantled with wisteria, and Margaret said, "Now we can talk."

He took her hand. "It's about Kay Forrest," he said.

Margaret nodded. "I knew that."

"I'm sorry for her. Sorry as hell."

"So are we all."

Jim Owenby hesitated. "I've always known Kay. Since she was a kid. She's pretty swell."

"Barney thinks so."

"Well, he's right." Jim changed the subject slightly. "You know, Barney has stuff I didn't think he had. I thought he'd go under when Kay married this Reynolds . . . but during the past week he's been taking it on the chin like a man."

She nodded. "We've been watching him, too, Mother and I. It's tough on him, but perhaps it's what he needed. A sort of tempering of the steel that we know is in him. I'm terribly sorry for him."

Jim shook his head. "Why did Kay marry Kirk Reynolds?"

Margaret said, "You tell me."

"Right . . . and I'll only be telling you what everybody in Beverly is saying. She was forced to marry him so that she couldn't testify against him if he happened to be tried for Harvey Jackson's murder."

"Of course."

"She was with Reynolds that night. She saw what happened."

"Do you blame her for being afraid of him?"

"No. She's just a kid. And to see a murder . . . She's in a rotten spot, but that doesn't alter the fact that—unless we're wrong about everything—Kirk Reynolds murdered Harvey, and Harvey was my best friend."

"I see . . . And so?"

"And so," he said bitterly, "I can't let matters stand where they are. I want to talk to Kay—want to see if she'll tell me the truth."

Margaret pressed his hand. She said quickly, "You mustn't."

"Why?"

"It isn't fair. Kay came here to get away from the nasty gossip in Beverly. She's our guest . . ."

"But suppose she knew that she was going to be protected?"

"She couldn't know that. She'd only know that you'd be willing to do your best."

He said gravely, "In this State a woman may testify against her husband. The law merely says that she cannot be compelled to."

"You mustn't, Jim."

"But I must."

"Why?"

"Because Harvey was my best friend, that's reason number one. Secondly, I'm fond of Kay."

Margaret was staring off into the night. She hoped that her voice was steady. "Suppose you knew that Kirk killed Harvey. What would you do?"

"I'm not sure." He paused briefly. Then, "Listen, dear—and try to understand. A man can't just sit back and do nothing. I can't . . . and neither can Barney."

"Barney?"

"Of course. He's all shot by this marriage of Kay's."

ALABAMA COLLEGE TO OBSERVE FOUNDERS DAY

Plans are now going forward at Alabama College for the observance, on October 12, of Founders Day. Homecoming for alumnae, usually held in connection with Founders Day, has been postponed and will instead be a feature College Night on the Montevallo campus next February.

Founders Day this year will be a restaging of many of the program features which characterized the first Founders Day in 1896.

The alumnae association has charge of the program, reminiscent of the Gay Nineties when the institution was founded after years of agitation by noted feminists, headed by Miss Julia Tutwiler. The "auld lang syne" note, looking backward half a century, stresses the secene as it was in the late Victorian days when the college was launched.

The first Founders Day which this event commemorates was held in Reynolds Hall, oldest building on the present campus. Reynolds Hall, still in use, is being converted, with P.W.A. assistance, into a modern College Union Building, where campus social life will center and student organization have their offices.

The alumnae association is engaged in raising $4000 with which to furnish Reynolds Hall. More than half of this sum has been raised already, according to Miss Fraces Ribble, alumnae secretary.

Regular School Attendance Vital

(From Office of Attendance Supervisor)

We, in America, are proud of our system of Democracy which guarantees us so many rights which are denied most of the people of the world. We are deeply interested in protecting these rights and privileges.

In order to do this we must see that the mass of our people are educated. No small group can progress very far ahead of the average. It should be the duty of every citizen to be concerned about the education of all the children of all the people. Children who are in school are retarded by those who are in and out. When they are absent for some time it takes extra time on the part of the teacher to help these children catch up with the class.

The crowded condition of the school room is due partly to the fact that the number of teachers employed depend upon the average daily attendance of the pupils rather than the total enrollment. A large part of the school money is based on the average daily attendance rather than the total school population. When a child stays out of school and has to repeat the grade the time of the child and teacher is wasted and it makes for added cost.

We believe that a system of compulsory school attendance is essential if a well rounded school program is to be worked out. Every citizen should be interested in helping to see that all the children of all the people take advantage of our free public schools.

SINGING AT JEMISON SEPT. 23-24 ENJOYED BY LARGE CROWDS

The Saturday night session of the singing at Jemison opened with song by chairman. Prayer by Rev. S. E. Goodgame of Panacea, Florida. Directors were Cobern Cofer, Curtis Bean, A. H. Glasscock, Prof. S. S. Poraro of Florida, Prof. J. M. Henson and Prof. Tarrant of Atlanta, Ga.

The business session resulted in the election of Akins I. Colliss as chairman for another year. Pianists were Eason Maddox, Prof. Henson. A large crowd attended. The session was closed with prayer by Rev. Maurice Hodgens.

The Sunday morning session opened with song by chairman. Prayer by Prof. J. M. Henson. Welcome address by Rev. Maurice Hodgens, which was very inspiring. Response was by Prof. Howard Roper, which was also very inspiring.

Directors were E. L. Glasscock, Prof. Tarrant of Atlanta, Jasper Jones, Prof. Poraro of Florida, J. M. Henson, Prof. Lowler of Pea Ridge, Jessie Jones, A. H. Glasscock, O. L. Devaughn, L. T. Grant, Ellis Martin, Cobern Cofer. The Clanton Four rendered several numbers which were very enjoyable. The Bailey Quartet also rendered some numbers.

A bountiful dinner was served in the Vocational building with Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Denson in charge, assisted by Mrs. Dezzie Littlejohn and Mrs. Bertie Johnson and others. The dinner was just grand and enjoyed immensely by the large crowd that partook of it. Many thanks to the ladies of the town who so liberaly contributed to this worthy cause.

Afternoon Sessios

Called to order by the chairman, (2 song). Cobern Cofer, Mr. Tarrant, Jesse Jones, Mr. Lawler, A. O. Boswell, Lee Grant Prof. J. M. Henson, Prof. L. T. Grant. Prof. Henson and Tarrant sang a duet. Mr. A. B. Stanley of Mitchell Dam, Ellis Martin, Burl Martin, Dock Harris, O. L. Devaughn, Dewey Hughes Velpo Mims. Mr. Pararo and Mr. Jasper Robinson gave their time to Mr. Henson. There were many other good directors present that time would not permit us to call upon. Pianists for the day were Messrs. J. M. Henson, Lee Grant, Eason Maddox, Mrs. Howard Roper, Mrs. Bailey, Mrs. Bertie Johnson.

The Lawley Quartet, composed of three little girls, and one little boy, rendered several numbers which were enjoyed by all. The Bailey Quartet from Siluria and the Clanton Four, rendered several numbers which were enjoyed very much by all present. The closing song was sung by the young Mr. Melton of Liberty Hill. Prayer was offered by Mr. Pararo, thus ending one of the most inspiring conventions ever held in this section. It was said by many to be one of the best singings they had ever attended and expressed themselves as being anxious to hear the call to attend another occasion of this kind.

We appreciate the help of all visitors and local singers who contributed in any way in helping to make this convention the success that it was. We invite you and your friends and fellow singers to come back and enjoy another occasion of this kind a year from now.—E. L. Glasscock, chairman; A. H. Glascock, Akins I. Collins, Cobern Cofer, Committee.

The song that says "You must be a football hero to get along with the beautiful girls" seems to hold true this year as in the case of hero Bub Higgins with all the Junior High School. Not only does he rate in football but according to a certain young lady, he'd rate with her if he had never seen a football.

Incidentally, talking about football; if any of you folks have any objections to our parades on that day of the game—we'd like to know. The only thing that worries us is this. If we can't parade, and we know we can't have pep meetings in the church, just what suggestion has someone to offer regardng the subject?

A LETTER IN BEHALF OF A. B FOSHEE

To the People of Chilton County:

I cannot help but say something in behalf of Buster Foshee, who is running for Judge of the Inferior Law Court, as I have known him all of my life, and we grew up in the same community in this County.

To those of you who do not know it. he has gone on crutches since childhood because of infantile paralysis, which he had when two years old. In spite of this handicap he has gone ahead and made something of himself of which I am proud and of which I know his friends who know him are proud. It would have been a lots easier for him to sit down and do nothing as a lot of people in similar condition have done, and maybe today be living on relief.

He has practiced law in Clanton for some five or six years to my own knowledge and in my judgment he is well qualified and fitted to hold the office which he asks of the voters. If he is not deserving of our help and support I don't know of anyone who would be.

I want you to show by your vote on election day, October 24, that he is competent to hold the place, and this is a non-political issue, and should be a vote for the man.

Yours truly,

—J. P. CULVER.

Fred H. Buckelew, County Sanitation Officer, left September 23 for a three-months scholarship at Vanderbilt University.

Plans are practically complete for setting up a venereal disease clinic in Maplesville.

Four cases of diphtheria for one case of scarlet fever were reported in the County during August.

Chilton County ranks sixth in a group of seven Central Alabama counties in the amount of money spent for public health in proportion to the wealth of the county.

The P.-T. A.'s of four Chilton County Schools have agreed to sponsor a hot lunch W.P.A. project.

Plans are practically complete for setting up a venereal disease clinic in Maplesville.

For each person in the County, Chilton County spends $3.80 for roads, $2.60 for education, 40c for public welfare, 20c for the Farm Unit and 16c for Public Health.

Chilton County is one of a small group of rural counties in Alabama now with only one public health nurse.

Chilton County's total Christmas Seal Sale in 1938 was the largest per capita of any of the smaller and strictly rural counties in Alabama.

Health Topic For The Month

Cancer

There is perhaps no greater widespread fear of any disease by the masses than that associated with cancer. In the lay mind, no diagnosis carries with it such a pronouncement of hopelessness and inevitable death as does cancer. The average person looks upon the disease as utterly incurable and there can be little wonder that this sense of doom makes the cancer patient a ready victim for the smooth tongue of the quack. It is high time then that everyone should know the truth about the disease. Time indeed that public knowledge regarding real cancer acts should parallel the advances that have been made in the treatment of this insidious malady.

Cancer as a health problem is becoming increasingly great. "Cancer deaths occur in the United States at the average rate of one every three and one-half minutes," says Dr. J. N. Baker, Alabama State Health Officer. The death rate from Cancer in the U. S. increased from 102.2 per 100,000 population in 1933 to 112 per 100,000 for 1937. Whether this is a real increase or an apparent increase makes little difference. In the U. S. Cancer is now second only to heart disease as a cause of death. It kills more people than all the forms of tuberculosis.

The cause of the disease is still in the realm of unproven theory. We think that it is not caused by a germ and is not contagious. There is probably more than one cause. We do know that chronic irritation or chronic inflammation may lead to the development of cancer. The rubbing of certain chemicals in coal tar on the skin will produce skin cancer. Girls engaged in painting luminous water dials by dampening their lips and swallowing the radioactive substance may later develop cancer of the bone. Irritation caused by pipe smoking may finally produce cancer of the lip. Ulcers of long standing may develop into cancer, as for example ulcer of the stomach or an ulcerated cervix (neck of the womb) in a woman.

Not every tumor is cancerous. Some growths consist of an aggregation of cells within a capsule; these are known as benign tumors. While there ma be enlargement of this type, the cell do not penetrate the capsule. In others however, the growth spreads and invades the surrounding tissues or o This is a true Cancer.

Removal of a section of tissue growth and examination with th croscope is necessary to dete whether or not the condition is ca ous. Cancers have a tendency to pread to parts of the body far removed the primary site; for example, can the prostate gland in a man ma tend to the hip bones. Cancer breast may spread to the lymph ands in the arm pit.

Early in the development of ncer there may be but few symptom small painless ulcer in the mouth, a lump in the breast, chronic vaginal discharge in a woman, chronic in tion, the passage of blood in the stools, all may herald the beginning of an cer. Cancer at the onset is not ful. Every person past 45 years with such symptoms should not hesita in consulting a physician regarding these or any chronic complaints.

Cancer is curable. On an attestation to this fact we have a record of 30. 000 cures in the files of the Am College of Surgeons through 193 In New York City a cured cancer has been formed; the oldest member is 83. These cures were wrought b of three accepted methods: su x-ray, and radium. Often these ma be combined to accomplish a cure. Tl sease does reach an incurable stage and treatment to be effective must b administered early. Even the lives called inoperable cases may be pr ed as much as five years, by ray therapy. Let no one deceive you quacks, such as Norman Baker, we hear much on the radio and now under indictment for using the mails to defraud, has nothing of the weapons devised by m science to offer the cancer patie

While medical science, public workers, and lay groups mobilize the resources of modern medicine to an earnest battle against the disea us accumulate and disseminate the truth about cancer.

ANNUAL MEETING OF STATE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE 19TH

Calling attention to the rapid strides Alabama has made during the past year, J. Mell Martin, director of the Alabama State Chamber of Commerce for Chilton County, today issued a statement urging business, agricultural and civic leaders from this county to attend the annual meeting of the State Chamber in Birmingham on October 19.

The annual meeting at Birmingham will be devoted to an all-Alabama review of progress during the last 12 months and will map the State Chamber's program for the coming year.

"Under the stimulus of the State Chamber's campaign for a better balanced economy, Alabama has moved forward along many fronts during the past year," the statement said. "Many new plants have been established, improved agricultural practices have been more widely adopted and a nation-wide publicity campaign to advertise Alabama's opportunities has been outlined.

"All of these advances will be reviewed at the annual meeting at a program on which Alabama notables will speak. Our decision to use only Alabama speakers was in line with the State Chamber contention that unless Alabamians build their own state, no one else will do it."

The State Chamber official stressed the fact that the meeting at Birmingham will be the most representative group of agricultural and industrial leaders, both large and small, ever held in the state and predicted that the program to be adopted for the next 12 months would result in even broader advances in 1940.

TRUTH about ADVERTISING

By CHARLES B. ROTH

OF WHAT CAN A MAN BE PROUD?

ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON, a gentle and a good man, asked, in dedicating one of his books to a friend, a question which has but one answer. He asked: "Of what can a man be proud if not of his friends?"

Friendship is the finest thing in human experience, but it is not confined to the narrow limits of one person to another person.

Charles Roth

There are friendships of different kinds. For example, there are the friendships of business, and they are surely the finest part of business. Just as a man values his personal friends above almost everything else in life, so does a business value its business friendships.

The way a business wins friends is the same way that an individual wins them: by deserving them.

First the business must give its friends value for their money. Second it must keep its word. Third it must not neglect them, else they will leave.

"Friendship," said wise and candid old Doctor Samuel Johnson, "must be kept in repair."

Merchants and manufacturers, realizing this, keep their friendships in repair by going out of the way to give value and service and also by proclaiming their regard for their friends on frequent occasions.

The form of these proclamations is advertising, which appears in the newspaper and tells of the values being offered, of the service available and of reasons why you can become and remain their customers to your profit and satisfaction.

Business men who advertise realize that friendship is a pleasure—and that it is also a responsibility.

Whenever a business man advertises it is a sign that he is seeking the friendship of persons and that he is willing to assume the responsibility of being a good friend.

His advertising is a warranty that he will do his best to be worthy of his friend's confidence by providing the best and the most economical goods. You can't keep friends if you cheat or overcharge.

His advertising is a proof that he values their friendship and intends to be worthy of it. You can't keep friends unless you are willing to live up to your highest ideals, not only for the present, but also for the future.

The advertising in the newspaper is much more than so many commercial announcements. It is an overture toward friendship by a man or a product which means to be worthy of your friendship.

BRILL'S DISEASE

Less than one-tenth of last year's reported cases of endemic typhus fever (Brill's disease) occurred among Negroes, according to records of the Bureau of Preventable Diseases of the State Department of Health.

Of the 341 cases reported during the year, 307 occurred among white persons and only 30 among Negroes, while four cases were unclassified as to race or sex.

The 30 cases reported among Negroes were divided almost equally between males and females, with 14 among the former and 16 among the latter. The cases reported among white males, however, outnumbered those reported among white females by 199 to 108.

More cases of the disease were reported among those between 15 and 24 years of age, inclusive, than among those of any other age period of similar length.

The Youth in Business

By C. E. Johnston

Dean, Schools of Business International Correspondence Schools

THERE has been much loose talk in this country about the effect of the continued mechanization of the business office on employment. It is frequently asserted that machines are replacing men and women in American offices. The young person who is about to choose a career should know the facts. The invention, manufacture, and use of office equipment has not only stimulated industrial activity, but has resulted in an enormous increase in the number of office employees.

The first practical typewriter was marketed in 1867 and in 1870 there were still only 174 stenographers and typists in the country. The first cash register was sold in 1879 and the first successful adding machine in 1888. The Hollerith tabulating machine was used to compute census figures in 1890. The addressograph was invented in 1892 and the mimeograph about the same time. Bookkeeping machines, calculating machines, dictating machines, automatic addressing machines, etc., were ultimately invented and greatly improved as time went on. It was years after these machines were first placed on the market that they were commonly employed in offices. By 1930, however, automatic office machinery was generally in use.

Let us now examine the figures respecting office employment as reported in the United States Census Reports.

Year	Number of Office Employees	Total Population
1870	74,291	38,558,000
1900	1,000,089	75,964,000
1930	4,025,324	122,775,000

What caused this enormous increase in the number of office employees between 1870 and the present day? The answer is clear. The use of office machines made it possible to obtain figures valuable to management at so little cost that it is today profitable to employ great numbers of men and women in the preparation and interpretation of figures and reports, and in the supervision of persons so employed.

A&P's policy will remain unchanged. That policy is simply this: A&P will provide good foods at the lowest prices possible. As always we will operate our stores and markets with the interests of our customers constantly in mind. We know the hardships that increased food prices can bring to countless families, therefore, our prices will be adjusted only to the extent that is absolutely necesary. If, owing to the laws of supply and demand, the prices for foods we purchase move upward, obviously we will have to pay the higher cost and change retail prices accordingly.

You have our assurances, however, that A&P's margin of profit will continue to be very small, and normal in every respect. Thus we pledge to you and our six million loyal customers, the best efforts of our widespread organization to keep our prices as low as sound business judgment will permit.

We repeat, A&P's policy will be unchanged—good foods at lowest possible prices.

Thorsby Institute News

The school is offering to have an expression class for women this year, under the direction of Miss Jones. It will help one to speak in public, teach one how to preside at meetings, etc. There will be no charge for the class other than each one would pay for materials she might need for the class work. Also it would be expected that before the year is over the group would give a play to which admission would be charged and the proceeds would go to the Institute.

Anyone interested should see Miss Jones or Miss Jenkins. The group would meet Monday or Thursday night at 7:00 or 7:30 according to the desire of the majoriy.

Mr. Erskine Campbell, a graduate of Piedmont College, Demorest, Ga., a teacher of experience, will begin teaching at Thorsby Institute Tuesday, October 3. He will teach Social Science and coach athletics. He has had experience with the latter. Mr. Adair, however, will coach the basketball. A schedule of a few games with outside schools in basketball is being prepared.

Mr. Campbell's father is a Congregational Minister in Connecticut, but was at one time a Presbyterian minister at Centreville, Alabama. Mr. Campbell will room at Mrs. J. O. Johnson's and take his meals at the Dining Hall until his wife and family join him, probably at Christmas. As two of his children have started to grammar school elsewhere he does not think it best to break into their schooling before that time. They expect to live in the house where the Maddoxes are now.

The Helen Keller Literary Society held its first business meeting for the year 1939-40 in the Thorsby Institute auditorium at 2:45 P.M. Friday, September 29. The following officers were elected for the first semester: Elaine Burdette, President; Howard Minor, Vice-Presilent; Kathleen Honeycutt Secretary.

—o—

Miss Mildred Jeffries, a graduate of Thorsby Insttute in the Class of 1932, because of her outstanding work in biology, has been called to teach at the Alabama Polytechnic Practice School. Miss Jeffries took work at the University of Virginia Camp this summer.

—o—

A week from Saturday night the Helen Keller Literary Society will present a play and musical program at 7:30 P.M. in the Thorsby Institute auditorium. The public is invited. Admission will be ten cents.

Select Seed Corn For Higher Yields

There is always a scarcity of good seed corn at planting time, but good farmers solve this problem by selecting from the field each fall a two-year supply of seed, says County Agent J.W. Fant. This insures an ample supply of seed corn even following a bad crop year.

The time to insure next year's corn crop by this field selection of seed corn is rapidly passing, Mr. Fant states, offering the assistance of his office regarding field selection.

The best method, according to the county agent, is mass selection in the field as soon as the crop is matured. He alvises ears from vigorous upright stalks, selected for uniformity, trueness to type and variety, prolificacy; ears from a medium height on stalk, pointing downward on stalk, and well covered with a close-fitting shuck.

"After selecting seed corn in the field, it is important that it be properly dried and protected from mice and weevils," Mr. Fant says. "A. wire hanger of some sort is a cheap and practical means of drying-out a limited amount seed cron, provided the corn is not dry when harvested. If weevils show on the corn, it should be placed in tight containers and treated with carbon bisulphide."

COLLECTION OF PINE CONES

The area Forester has allotted to Camp SCS-7, Clanton, Alabama, the task of collecting 3500 bushels of loblolly pine cones in Chilton County.

In the past the citizens of this section have cooperated very generously in giving permission to the camp for collecting cones on their property, and this has been highly appreciated

Two methods are used in procuring cones: one is to follow logging operation and gather the cones from fresh cut tops. The other is to climb small trees with ladders, and clip the cones off.

In either case precautions are taken to avoid any injury to private property.

These cones are turned over to the Nursery section for treating and planting. After a seasons growth the young pines are harvested and transplanted to land being retired to forest in Alabama.

When you permit the Camp staff to collect cones on your property, you are assisting your community, your state, and your government to revive Alabama's forests.

Master William DuBose, son of Prof. and Mrs. W. J. DuBose of Verbena, spent Monday as the guest of Mrs. C. D. Hughes and Mrs. Bonnie Hand. His parents were attending the Teachers' Institute here.

groups who aided in this undertaking."

The first prize in the Agricultural exhibits went to the Jemison F.F.A. The prize was fifty dollars in cash. Second prize was awarded to the Clanton F.F.A., and was forty dollars. Third prize, thirty dollars, went to the Mulberry group and fourth prize of twenty dollars in cash fell to the Isabella exhibitors.

Although space will not permit the listing of all the winners of prizes, a few other winners are as follows: First prize for the individual displays was awarded Mr. D. B. Lowe of Clanton Route Five. Second prize went to Mrs. J. H. Wells and third to Mr. Renfro Veazey.

In the school exhibits, first prize fell to the Jemison High School; second prize to Clanton Elementary and third to Maplesville High. In the colored schools first prize went to the Chilton County Training School of Clanton and second to the Clanton City Elementary.

Wednesday. School Day, was the banner day for attendance. On this day 2,408 persons, the majority being school students, attended the Fair. Saturday followed closely when 2,340 persons passed through the gates on paid admission.

Every department of the Chilton County Fair was most interesting, putting it mildly. and the entire county should begin now making preparations for the 1940 "Chilton County On Parade."

BILLINGSLEY HOME EC. CLASS STUDIES FOOD PRESERVATION

The Home Economics II Class of Billingsley High School has been studying food preservation. During this study, we put to practice the principles of food preservation learned by canning in class We also planned year-round garden and made canning budgets for each individual's family. Each of us plan to use these as guides for the coming year.

We thing that "all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy," so we decided to take a trip over to see Zelma Wilkin's canning project. She is a member of the class. The entire class thinks that she did a nice job of canning 173 quarts of home-grown food.

The girls who enjoyed, and were benefited by the trip are:

Lillian Adams, Annie Eliza Culp, Beatrice Deramus, Annie Lee Donohoo, Pauline Lee, Ola Mae Nummy, Irene Patrick, Wilnetta Roberts, Dixie Smoot, Mary Alice Wyatt, Zelma Wilkins, Willodene Traywick, Kathryn Herrod, Woodard Herrod and Miss Lansdon, instructor.

A CORRECTION

In an article last week regarding certification of men for WPA work, the News stated that the office of the County Department of Public Welfare had recently certified 100 men for one months work under the WPA. This was an error and should have been 150 men the office certified for the work. We regret this error, for we believe that credit is due the Welfare Department for what they really did.

"Bad Guessers"—

A story in The Montgomery Adver-iser by Atticus Mullin Wednesday norning states that if a tabulation was nade, it would be found that perhaps rom 30 to 40 per cent of the old employees of the State who made a "bad uess' when they voted in the last gu-ernatorial election, had been retained y this administartion. Perhaps the resent administration is the "bad uesser" in the case of guessing how hese employees voted. Since the Gov-rnor is such a merit system man and etests the power to hire and fire, what ifference should it make to him, any-vay?

Profiteering—

Whenever the war scare hit this ountry, prices on commodities soared o unwarranted heights. On down the ine somewhere, somebody has been lty of profiteering. Streamlined way robbery without a gun. In act, we think the use of a gun to st from the people their hard-earned ney when they go to buy the ne-ities of life, would measure closer o being Americanism than the way has been done within the past few veeks. May these profiteers be the rst to feel the pangs of hunger should ar really cause a shortage of these ecessities.

New Autos A-Plenty—

'Tis said that a salesman for a well nown make of automobile in Clanton, at he was riding to the city with a iend who owned another make of ve-icle. This salesman, naturally, "turn-d on the heat" for his make of car l the way to town, and on entering e city asked of the friend: "Let's o by the ———Agency and I'll show ou just what I mean when I say it s everything." Replied the friend: Not a chance, my friend: after listen-g to you all this time I dare not do you ask. I'm satisfied with the one have only as long as I keep my mind f your make and myself in my car." nd so it is with all these new models aking their debut over town. If you t yourself go—you're gone.

oming Soon—

Not far away is the annual Red oss Roll. Call. Of course you plan answer. The call is stronger this ar, and let our response be equally strong.

Here's Your Drivers License"—

And isn't that a good portrait of the overnor in the enclosed pamphlet? e licenses are so small this year (and thought because they cost more 'd be twice as big as usual) until began wondering if we had re-ived a Roebuck catalog instead of the ense, when we discovered the neces-y slip of paper. But you know, that mphlet contains food for thought, d should be digested by all.

Miss Frances Mims Chosen College Beauty

Miss Frances Mims. a Thorsby girl, was chosen by Maltby Sykes, a famous Southern artist, as one of the Alabama College beauties for the 1939-1940 school year. Mr. Sykes, whose portrait work has made him nationally known, spent three days on the Montevallo campus where he saw the girls at their studies in the College library, in their classrooms ,at meals. and on the tennis courts.

In his strolls about the campus the artist could see the girls as they are every day, and not dressed up for his inspection.

To some eighty girls who struck his fancy he gave "subpoenas" requesting that they meet him later at the fixed time for the finals. In the finals Miss Mims was chosen. She will be presented formally at Elite Night, Nov. 10, when the College and public will meet this year's beauties at this annual affair which is under auspices of The Technala, Alabama College yearbook

FIDDLERS CONVENTION AT UNION GROVE OCTOBER 21

The News has been requested to announce that there will be a fiddlers Convention at the Union Grove School on Saturday night, October 21.

According to J. C. White, Principal, all fiddlers are cordially invited to be on hand and participate in the program, and the public is urged to be present and enjoy the evening.

HEALTH OFFICER JAILS NEGRO

One negro syphilis patient was placed in the City jail this week on the order of the County Health Officer, according to a weekly bulletin. The negro, a boy about sixteen years of age. had failed to attend the local venereal disease clinic for treatment during the last month. Field visits made by the Health Officer to warn the youth had been ineffective, according to the report.

"This case should serve as a warning to other venereal disease patients," stated Dr. Sturkie. "It is our purpose, however, to help the victims of syphillis and gonorrhea not to impose a hardship. For this reason, we use the law only in those cases where education fails." he added.

The law making treatment of venereal disease compulsory has recently been strengthened by an amendment, according to the local health official. It is now within the power of the County Health Officer to place any persons in jail who refuse treatment.

The health permits of eight Chilton County eating establishments are being withheld pending certain improvements in the sanitation which must be effected. Failure on the part of these operators to comply by November 1st will result in the closing of these establishments by the Health Department.

Old Chilton County High School Gym. Takes A Trip West

The old frame gymnasium of the Chilton County High School has moved its place of residence.

The new address of this large structure which has sheltered many cage battles, and which was left standing when the Chilton County High School burned, is Isabella.

Now that erection of the new Chilton County High School is underway. and a new gmynasium is to be included, the Board of Education has moved the old one to the Isabella High School where it will continue to render service.

Such is the life of a gymnasium.

lanton Kiwanians Attend District Banquet At elma Monday Night Near 100 Per Cent Strong

The Alabama District State Kiwanis nvention was held October 8-10 in ma, the city of Southern hospitality, was attended by hundreds of Ki-nians from over the State. This was twenty-first annual convention of bama Kiwanians.

The Clanton Club was ably represent-throughout the convention and on Monday night the annual banquet l ball was held at the Selma Country b. The Clanton Club attended near hundred per cent strong, and many the members were accompanied by ir wives and friends. Since the Sel-Club organized the Clanton Club, vanians here have always held a rm place in their hearts for the ma group, and when this city play-the perfect host to the State, Clan-Kiwanians were on hand.

The program for the evening was st delightful. and was truly a gala ir. Hon. Chauncey Sparks of Eufaula was the speaker of the evening, and his subject was "Building A Modern Alabama." The ball that followed the talk was the climax of the evening's entertainment.

District Governor Theodore Jackson of Dothan presided over the three-day session of Kiwanis. Many outstanding Kiwanians and noted speakers from over the Nation and Canada were in attendance.

Henry C. Meador, of Montgomery, for years an outstanding Kiwanian of the State, was unanimously elected District Governor for the coming year.

STAMPS-BAXTER HAPPY HITTERS AT BILLINGSLEY

The Stamps-Baxter Happy Hitters will be in a musical concert at the Billingsley High School Friday night, October 13, we have been requested to announce. The program will begin at eight o'clock, with everyobdy invited.

STAPP TO HEAD ROLL CALL OF RED CROSS

DRIVE TO OPEN NOV. 11TH AND CONTINUE UNTIL THANKS-GIVING; QUOTA INCREASED

Cohen E. Stapp has been named to head this year's annual Red Cross Roll Call which will open on Armistice Day, November 11, and last until Thanksgiving. Chilton County's quota has been increased from $450 last year to $800 this year, but officials of the Chilton County Chapter have let it be known that the sky is the limit this year due to the increased suffering caused by the wars.

Mr. Stapp will replace J. Mell Martin as head of the Roll Call this year. Mr. Martin has ably served in this capacity for the past four years. He is secretary-treasurer of the Chilton County Chapter, and will remain as Disaster Chairman of the Chapter also. Dr. C. O. Lawrence is Chairman of the Chilton County Chapter. Mr. Stapp will be assisted in the roll call by Miss Margaret Rumley, County Health Nurse. Both are expecting the cooperation of the entire citizenship of the county, and the slogan "give until it hurts" will be in effect.

Mrs. Madeline Blalock, special representative from Red Cross headquarters in Washington, has been here in the interest of the coming Roll Call. and she is confident that Chilton County will not fall behind when the call comes to a close on Thanksgiving day. This county raised a neat sum for the cause last year, and an even greater response is hoped for this year.

PILOT CLUB THANKS PEOPLE FOR FAIR COOPERATION

The Clanton Pilot Club wishes to express their appreciation to everyone who, in any way. was responsible for making their booth at the County Fair a success.

The Club especially wishes to thank the Kiwanians who were so gracious, and Mrs. Jim Parrish who worked so faithfully.

To Give Terracing Demonstrations

There will be terracing demonstrations at the following places for the purpose of demonstrating a method of changing ridge type terraces to Nichols type terraces.

The Soil Conservation Service is cooperating in conducting these demonstrations:

Thursday, October 19 — Houston Jones (Dr. Parrish's farm) 9 A.M.; Mrs. Ola Edwards, 1:30 P.M.

Friday, October 20—Allen Waldrop, 9 A.M.; E. B. Tucker, 9 A.M.; L. G. Miller, 2 P.M.

MRS. E. J. GORE

Mrs. E. J. Gore of Clanton Route 2 passed away Tuesday, October 10,at 2:30 A.M., at a Selma hospital.

Funeral services were held from the New Salem Church at 2:00 P.M. Wednesday. Interment was in the New Salem cemetery.

She is survived by her husband, six children, Millie, Ruth. Roy Hugh. Curtis and Earl, also a baby just a few hours old; two sisters, Mrs. Josie Gore of Clanton, Miss Ollie Lawrence of Clanton.

Spigener Funeral Home was in charge of interment.

School Bus Drivers Should Read This

This week one of our local Highway patrolmen asked the News to inform all operators of school buses that they must equip ther trucks with flags and flares, to be used in case trouble necessitating roadside parking, should arise.

The law regarding this specifically states that these buses must be equipped with the flags and flares, and the importance of this may easily be seen. so if you are to drive a school bus this year, or any year, be sure to comply.

Local Patrolmen also ask that autoists observe the stop law at road intersections, and stated that violators will be apprehended.

Miss Edith Newell visited wth relatives and friends in Montgomery last week end.

Lions To Observe "Ladies Night" With Banquet At Blue Creek

Tonight (Thursday) Clanton Lions will honor their wives and sweethearts with a banquet and dance at beautiful Blue Creek Lodge on the Coosa River.

With dinner at eight and after that dance until midnight. will be the order of the evening. Most all members have planned to be present for this get-together and not a few invited guests will be on hand.

This is the first "Ladies Night" that the Lions have given since organizing last June when Charter night was held and over three hundred members and visitors attended from all over the State.

CONVICT CAMP LOCATED NEAR VERBENA

WILL LODGE OVER HUNDRED NEGRO CONVICTS FOR WORK ON HIGHWAY PROJECT

Chilton County has a negro convict camp, which appears to be ready for occupancy. Although no official statement was received by the News regarding the operation of this camp, the News has been reliably informed that this camp, which is located just off the Highway 31 on the Mitchell Dam Road near Verbena, will be occupied by something over one hundred and fifty negro convicts to be used for work on widening of Highway 31, which is underway in this county at this time

The camp is similar to the one on the Montevallo road near Calera in Shelby County. The camp is composed of four or five wings from a main hall. These wings will be sleeping and eating quarters for the convicts. Several acres of land have been leased by the State of Alabama, it is understood. near the site of the camp. Just who will be warden was not learned.

Hargrove And Tatum To Test Drivers

Would-be auto drivers who must submit to the driving test under the new drivers law, will be given the test by Patrolmen Will Tatum and Allen Hargrove, the News learned from the office of the Judge of Probate this week.

These two patrolmen will conduct the driving tests each Wednesday, it has been announced. and will be stationed at the courthouse. Those who for any reason must stand this test before being issued a license, are asked to cooperate with these two gentlemen.

PATROLMAN WILLIAMS IMPROVING FROM INJURIES

Patrolman Williams, who has been stationed at Clanton for the past several weeks, is rapidly improving from injuries sustained in an auto accdent near Prattville some time ago. Mr. Williams sustained a broken ankle when the Patrol car occupied by he and Patrolman Isenhower was struck by another auto occupied by several people, causing several to be injured. Patrolman Isenhower was not injured.

Isabella Football News

The Isabella Mustangs played Prattville Friday, September 6. The score was 12-0 in favor of Prattville.

In this game Claude Atchinson and Earl Clenner did most of the tackling, with Ralph Evans, Roy Davis and C.B. Lenoir carrying the ball.

Although the boys lost this game. they all remembered their sportsmanship and are getting ready for the game with Billingsley Friday. October 13, on their own field.

ANNOUNCEMENT

There will be an all day singing at the Church of God in the Highland, community (col.), Sunday, October 15. Visiting singers of Clanton will be present (white), and will be in a class by themselves. Everyone invited.—Samuel Bryant, Instructor and Clinton Darby, President.

MRS. EMILY FINLEY

Mrs. Emily Finley, age 96. died in a Birmingham hospital September 29. She had been a resident of Clanton for several years, but was making her home in Birmingham with a grandson at the time of her death.

Funeral services were held at Spigener Chapel Saturday, September 30, at 11 A.M., conducted by the Rev. Tingley of Birmingham. Interment was in the Clanton cemetery. Spigener Funeral Home in charge.

DR. J. D. EILAND NOW HAS OFFICE IN CLANTON

Dr. J. D. Eiland, well known physician of Verbena, who has been for the past year connected with one of Alabama's largest optical departments in Montgomery, has opened an office in the building with the C. E. Stapp, General Insurance Agency, next to the First National Bank, where he stated he would be each day during the hours from nine A.M., until three P.M.

Dr. Eiland will fit glasses, repair and remake frames, etc., and also treat diseases of the ear, nose and throat.

SINGING AT NEW SALEM

Reynolds Suggests Plan To Aid Farmers Of This Section

"Chilton County News
"Clanton, Alabama:

"My business has carried me to different parts of the County in the last few days, and I find the farmers of this County have almost made a failure in crops, both in corn and cotton. Many farmers the cotton will not pay for fertilizer. in fact, I cannot see how the farmers can get by unless they can get some help and a lot of extension on their debts.

"If there is any class of people that ought to be helped when in need it is the farmers. They have worked the crops in this County as best they could, but weather conditions were awful bad, and of course this they had no control of.

"I would suggest that our County Agent, together with the County Agents of four or five counties near us call a meeting at Clanton and get Mr. Davis, at Auburn, and Senator Bankhead, if we can get him to hold a meeting here with the several counties. and see what can be done to help the farmers financially in the distressed condition which they are now in.

"I heard one busness man say that the farmers were too extravagant; I believe I know the condition of the farmers of Chilton County as well as anyone else, and for the last few years they have cut down expenses, left off nearly all luxuries and in fact some farmers in this County are living more economically than some people I know on relief rolls of the County.

"I hope we can have this meeting right away, however, if anyone has a better suggestion, I hope they will express themselves, and I hope both county papers will take this matter up and see if something cannot be done to help the situation.

"L. H. REYNOLDS."

Miss Mary Newell and Morris Popwell spent last Wednesday in Birmingham attending the fair.

Mr. Dub Huddleston, who has been in New York City for some time, has returned.

Miss Hazel Enfinger and Mr. Ray Enfinger attended the Bird-Roberts wedding in Georgiana last Saturday night.

Native Verbena Couple Return Home For Visit After Two Years In China And The Phillippines

Returning Sunday to their native town and County after an absence of two years spent in and near war-torn China and the Phillippines, Lt. and Mrs. Gleeson Howard are of one accord when they say that "Chilton County sure looks good."

For the past two years Lt. Howard has been an officer on the destroyer "Alden", stationed near the China coast and the Phillippine Islands, During this time Mrs. Howard has lived in the norther section of China near Chefoo, where she was an eye-witness to fighting between the Japanese and Chinese. Leaving Chefoo she made her home in Manilla, in the Phillippines.

Both these young people are natives of Verbena, and are being heartily welcomed back home this week after their stay abroad. Lt. Howard was graduated with honors from Annapolis in June 1933. He received his diploma from President Roosevelt and a commission in the U. S. Navy. Ensign Howard ranked at the head of his class, and made a record that Chilton may well be proud of. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. O. A. Howard of Verbena, a graduate of the Verbena High School and studied at Auburn prior to receiving the Annapolis appointment from Senator Hugo Black in 1929.

Mrs. Howard is the former Miss Kathryn Gaines, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Gaines of Verbena. She is a graduate of the Verbena High School and attended the Alabama College, Montevallo. She and Lt. Howard were married in California where he was stationed at that time.

In April, 1937, the couple visited here prior to sailing for China. On September 8th, this year, they left Mainilla bound for the States, and arrived in Los Angeles on October 2. They arrived in Verbena last Sunday. October 8.

Conditions in China as related by Lt. and Mrs. Howard are far worse than the average American can imagine. During her stay in China Mrs. Howard was within a short distance, at times, of fighting that has been going on there for many months. She witnessed an air battle near her home. and a blockade by the Japanese at times rendered conditions unpleasant in Chefoo.

When asked what impressed her most in this stricken country, Mrs. Howard replied that the destruction of Shanghai was to her the most impressive. Her first visit to this city was before fghting became fierce and on her return the destruction was appalling. To witness this destruction and the suffering that it has caused is an unpleasant experience, she stated. She was impressed with the loyalty of the Chinese to their country.

On his return to duty Lt. Howard will be an officer on the destroyer "Medusa" off the coast of California. They will return to San Pedro when. Lt. How[illegible] has expired. He will not return to Cl[illegible]

Why Not?

Few people in Chilton County, or Alabama for that matter, know that one of, if not the very last, battle of the Civil War started right here in Chilton County.

It is a fact, although history sheds very little light on the subject.

Under command of General Wilson, six crack Ohio regiments were ordered to Alabama to destroy the arsenal at Selma, where gunboats were being built and cannon moulded and mounted on them. They were then carried down the Alabama to Pensacola where they were manned.

Nathan Bedford Forrest and his horsemen who were operatng in Mississippi were notified that "Wilson's Raiders" were marching south through the center of Alabama. pillaging everything they could find to eat, and everything they could carry along with them.

While the "raiders" were encamped at Randolph in Bibb County, Gen. Forrest and his famous calvary were riding post haste out of Mississippi to intercept them. Wilson's men had struck camp and were following the Range Line Road. They destroyed a saw mill two miles south of Randolph that was being operated by Clarke, Wasson and Tarleton, refugees from New Orleans, who were furnishing lumber and timber to the arsenal at Selma. This mill was burned and the mules, horses and slaves were taken along by the Yankees.

At Ebeneezer Church, two or three miles southwest of Maplesville near the present town of Stanton, Forrest and his men suddenly appeared on Wilson's right flank. coming out of the wilderness and a running fight followed all the way to Selma about 30 miles distant.

Forrest and his cavalry reached Selma ahead of the raiders and joined the home guard inside the "breastworks" of the city, (plainly visible at this late day). Two days of hard fighting followed, but it was impossible for Selma. even with the aid of Forrest's men, to hold out against such odds, so Selma surrendered the same day that Lee surrendered at Appomattox.

Not so Nathan Bedford Forrest. Late in the evening he and his men started out on the Selma and Montgomery road as if to go to Montgomery; they left the road at Beech Creek and followed the stream to Blue Girth Swamp to the Selma and Burnsville Road, and on back into Mississippi.

Nothing could be more appropriate than to name the Clanton-Maplesville-Plantersville-Selma Highway. The "Bedford Forrest Boulevard."

Has Man Forgotten God?

It seems only yesterady that there existed a nation called by the name of Czecho-Slovakia. Today these energetic and aggressive people have been subdued and crushed beyond recognition.

Today Poland has practically ceased to exist. Her borders have been overrun both from the west and east by hordes of plunderers and murderers. Innocent people—old men, defenseless women and childen—by the thousands, have been ushered into eternity at the word of beasts in human form.

Rumania is likely to be next in line for this bath of blood at the hands of those who seem to know not the dividing line between right and wrong.

The whole of Europe is facing the brink of destruction. And before the whole thing is over European civilization will be very nearly exterminated. Generations yet unborn will be paying the enormous bill for this folly of man —WAR!

Since man was created tribes and nations have been waring against each other. Almost without exception no one ever wins a war.

What is it all about What is there to gain? Isn't it possible that men and nations dwell together in peace on this earth?

We have come to the conclusion that if man ever knew or believed there was a God, he has surely forgotten!—Geneva Reaper.

BILLY SMITH'S PERFUME

It's a good bet that WPA publicity man, Billy Smith, an ex-newspaper man from Clanton, goes back into the paper business some day.

While calling on The Mercury some days ago, one of the boys, after noting Smith's interest in running presses, asked him to shut his eyes and placed a proof roller to his nose and asked him to guess what it was.

He did not say "ink," he said "the sweetest perfume in the world."—Huntsville Mercury.

Keep Your Head

Rarely in our history has it been so necessary for Amercans to keep their heads as it is today.

The most ghastly of all tragedies has engulfed Europe. It is the burning hope of the vast majority of our people that we may escape the holocaust of destruction. We have not forgotten the World War. It sowed the seeds for the years of social discontent and depression that followed. We have not forgotten that thousands of American lives and untold billions in American wealth and resources were sacrificed. Only history will eventually reveal what good, if any, came from that war.

The President has said that as long as it remains within his power, there shall be no "blackout of peace" in this nation. In that he echoes the minds and hearts of all of us. But the mere wish is not enough. Hysterial, passion, fanaticism, mistaken idealism — these things can be the producers of ruin and horror. American neutrality is dependent upon America keeping its head

No one knows when the war will end, or who will be the "victor." But certainly there is justified fear that all that is best in Europe may be lost to that continent for many years after hostilities have stopped. War means that the arts of peace must be ruthlessly dropped in order that the arts of death and destruction may be advanced. The preservation of liberties which have been won through centuries, are threatened in a warring world.—Industrial News Review.

If Uncle Sam had collected his European debts occasioned by the last World War, he wouldn't now be worrying about what to do. There wouldn't be any war.

Alabama is to spend $10,000 for the purpose of bringing visitors to the State. We imagine when the visitor arrives at one of our State parks, and a uniformed highway man sticks his hand out for a dime for parking, said visitor's good impression of Alabama will suddenly vanish, and he will feel more like saying, "oh, hell!" than looking at the scenery.

"Hope springs eternal to the human breast." If it were not so, the Alabama down-trodden farmer—ruthlessly crushed economically by an unequal and unfair monetary profit system, would have despaired long ago.

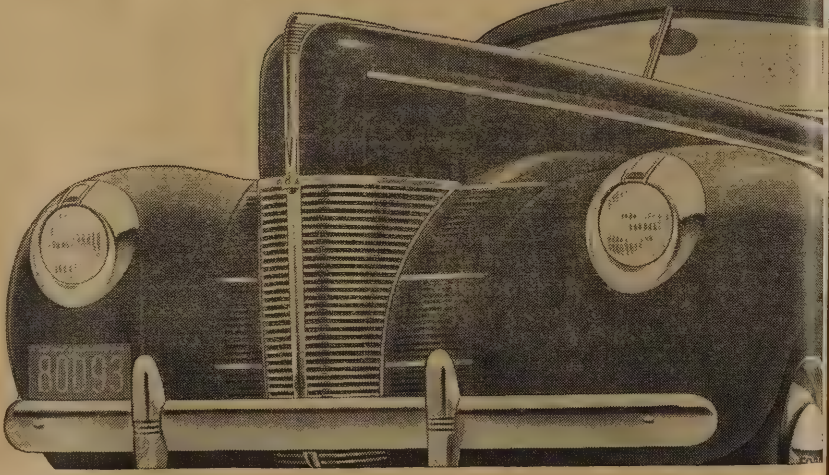
THE NEW
FORD CARS FOR 1940



22 important improvements, added to fundamental Ford features, represent the most advanced engineering in the low-price field

WHAT do the Ford cars for 1940 offer to match their brilliant new beauty? New comfort, convenience, quiet, safety—and the roomiest, richest interiors ever designed for a Ford car.

They have a host of interesting new features. Finger-Tip Gearshift on the steering post. An improved transmission, unusually easy to shift. New Controlled Ventilation. Improved shock absorbers. Softer springs, improved spring suspension and a new ride-stabilizer.*

A combination of new features makes the new cars quieter in operation. They have big, powerful hydraulic brakes. They have new Sealed-Beam Headlamps that are safer, stronger and stay bright longer. They have the famous Ford V-8 engine (85 hp in the De Luxe Ford. Choice of 85 or 60 hp in the Ford) —which blends 8-cylinder smoothness with economy.

You've never seen cars with so much performance, style and comfort at such a low price. Get acquainted. You'll enjoy the experience!

Women: "Build-Up" To Relieve Pain

A weak, run-down, undernourished condition calls for attention!

Such a condition often enables functional dysmenorrhea to get its foothold. That's one thing which leads to much of women's suffering from headaches, nervousness, those cramp-like pains. A good way to relieve such pains, women by thousands have found, is by the proper use of CARDUI. It stimulates a lagging appetite, assists digestion and assimilation; thus helps build physical resistance to periodic pain. Taken just before and during "the time," many women also report that CARDUI helps to ease the pain and discomfort of the period.

SYNOPSIS

Beautiful, young Kay Forrest has been employed by Christine Maynard, photographer, to pose for a series of pictures, the background of which will be exquisite Cathedral Gardens, famous Southern resort. Unknown to them, one Jeff Butler, mean, unscrupulous "swamp angel," has led a friend to spy on the two women. Kay, of necessity, is scantily clad while posing for the camera studies. Kay frequently stays with Mrs. Ruth Hamilton, her son Barney, of whom Kay is very fond, and her daughter Margaret. Mrs. Hamilton, a remarkable woman, conceived the idea of the Gardens following the death of her husband. One night, after a local dance, Kirk Reynolds, a ne'er-do-well gambler of Beverly, a resort town, and Kay go for a ride. Kirk's car collides with that of Harvey Jackson, and during the ensuing argument Kirk whips out a gun and kills the young, popular engineer. Kirk threatens to drag her into the thing if she tells even her father. Terror-stricken, she agrees to remain silent. Barney realizes something is wrong. She tries to reassure him, but tells him nothing. Mrs. Emma Forrest, Kay's mother, is firm, positive and demanding. Her father is exactly the opposite, kindly and unassuming. While at home Kirk Reynolds calls for her, and she is forced to go with him despite her family's protests. He tells her the circumstances make it necessary for her to marry him, so she cannot be forced to testify against him if he is accused of Jackson's murder. They drive to a neighboring town and are married. The next time they are together Kay tells Barney she loves him, but is married to Reynolds. Meanwhile, Miss Sonia ("Babe") Henkel, Beverly beauty operator of questionable morals, and intimate friend of Kirk Reynolds, berates him for marrying Kay. Jim Owenby, landscape engineer in love with Margaret Hamilton, discusses the affair with her. He is sure Kirk has married Kay so she cannot be brought into the case.

—14—

"You and Barney have been discussing Kay's marriage, haven't you, Jim?" asked Margaret.

"Of course. As a matter of fact, we haven't talked about much else."

"And so?"

"We feel like a couple of prime saps. Or perhaps that sounds more flippant than I intend. What I'm driving at is that—for everybody's sake—we don't intend to let Reynolds get away with this."

"You know he's dangerous."

"What of it?"

"This, Jim . . . and I'm trying not to be selfish. The past few years haven't been easy for us. You didn't know Dad—so you can't understand what his death really meant. Then the financial collapse and the sympathy of our friends—which was the wrong kind of sympathy. And Mother's worry over Barney which led to our coming down here so he could get away from wealthy friends who were too kind."

She paused and he touched her hand reassuringly.

"I know. Plenty tough sledding."

"It is. Beverly has done a lot for all of us. I've been happy—maybe because I found you. But whatever the cause, I'm jealous of my happiness. I don't want it destroyed."

CHAPTER VII

Barney said, "I'm proud of you, Kay. My mother is proud of you. Margaret is proud of you. The cook is proud of you."

Kay laughed in spite of herself. "The third waffle?" she inquired.

"Plus grits and shrimp and what have you."

The girl rose from the breakfast-table and joined Mrs. Hamilton on the veranda. The morning was brilliant; pleasantly cool and crystal clear. Dozens of tiny bateaus were waiting patiently for passengers, and already several could be seen nosing quietly through the placid lagoons.

Barney came from the house and joined his mother and Kay.

Kay looked up into the clean-cut, boyish face. "Going into town?" she asked.

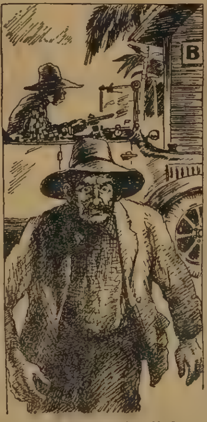
"Needs must. Heavy business."

There was a shadow of apprehension in her eyes. "Shopping?"

"Yes. For Mother." Strong fingers closed about her arm. "And that's all, Chica. My word of honor."

Kay followed him into the house, leaving Mrs. Hamilton alone on the veranda.

A bateau approached the shore, navigating an eccentric course. In the double, high-backed seat amidships, Mrs. Hamilton saw an elderly couple, and even at this distance it was apparent that the woman was more than a trifle nervous. The boatman was white, a long, angular individual who paddled the little craft viciously, to the further discomfort of his passengers. Mrs. Hamilton recognized the man. Jeff Butler, she remembered—and she had never liked him. He had seemed a sullen and resentful person. She knew instinctively that something was wrong, and this suspicion became certainty when Jeff drove the nose of the boat far up on the sloping bank with a last powerful stroke of his paddle.



Jeff Butler let himself down without a thank-you at the depot.

Mrs. Hamilton rose to greet them. "Anything wrong?" she inquired.

"Yes." The man spoke in a high, excited voice. "Who's in charge around here?"

"I am. Why?"

"That fellow who had us in his boat . . ." He gestured toward the lagoon. "He was drunk."

Ruth Hamilton's eyes narrowed. "I'm terribly sorry . . ."

"I was so frightened," interjected the little woman. "I didn't know what was going to happen. I thought every minute he might drown us."

"That wouldn't be likely. The water is very shallow in most places. But that doesn't rectify matters. Sit down . . ." She designated chairs. "Tell me just what happened."

"He acted queer right from the beginning. And when we got into the boat, he was ugly—"

"—And insulting, wasn't he, Arthur?"

"Quite. He kept paddling us, fast, when we wanted to stop and look at things. He wouldn't do what we wanted—"

"And he had liquor on his breath."

"Then he got very angry when we told him to bring us in. Now, we're not complaining . . ."

"But you have every right to complain. I know the man and I don't like him. I'm glad of this definite excuse to let him go."

The woman softened. "We don't want anybody to lose his job . . ."

"I can't have that sort of man around here." Ruth Hamilton looked up at Barney who had come from the house and had caught the end of the conversation. "My son," she explained, not without pride.

Barney said, "It's about time, Mother. I'll go down and pay him off."

The idle white boatmen were reclining against the wall of their cabin, awaiting calls. They were a lackadaisical lot, notable for their inertia.

Two or three of them nodded to Barney, but without waste of effort . . . though their eyes narrowed slightly when he inquired for Jeff Butler. They indicated direction with lazy jerks of their heads.

Mr. Butler looked up sullenly from the foot of a live oak. His watery eyes were clouded with liquor, his attitude sullen and resentful. Barney's voice was pitched low. He said, "You've been drinking again, Jeff."

"Well, what if I have?"

"You know that doesn't go around here."

The man's voice was whiney. "You-all ain't got no right tellin' a feller what he can an' cain't do."

"I suppose not. But we can tell him whether he's got a job here. And you haven't."

"What?" Mr. Jefferson Butler uncoiled himself. His bony figure towered over Barney's adequate height, and his voice took on an unpleasant edge. "You ain't firin' me?"

"No? Here's the money I owe you. Now—get out."

Mr. Butler's dignity had been ruffled. He suspected that his companions on the other side of the log-cabin could hear the conversation. He said, "I'll git out when I'm good an' ready."

"So?" Barney's laugh was hard. "You'll get out damned quick."

"And if I don't?"

The young man's gray eyes were cold. "I'm advising you to get out, Jeff. That's all."

So far as being deprived of the privilege of daily labor, Jeff did not really mind. He had for some time resented the necessity of reporting for work every day, of being subjected to the task of paddling awe-stricken tourists through glades which were to them incredibly beautiful, but which—to him—were a lot of dawg-gone foolishment. For one thing, his role placed him (or so he thought) on a definitely lower social plane, and Jeff was fond of declaring (though not actually believing) that he was as good as anybody that walked.

Now he was fired. Cast out. Discharged. He had been spoken to sternly by that no-'count kid . . . that uppity Barney Hamilton. He had been insulted, degraded and otherwise rendered more than slightly ridiculous. His resentment mounted as he traversed the miles into Beverly. It became deep and bitter after he had borrowed a ride from a colored man who was driving a battered old flivver and who was afraid to refuse Jeff's request.

Arriving in Beverly, Jeff Butler let himself down without a thank-you at the depot. There he encountered a friend of his, a gentleman of similar ilk, to whom he related his troubles. It appeared, according to Jeff, that he had personally built Cathedral Gardens, and that he had been pitched out without rhyme or reason.

Two other denizens of Big Moccasin Swamp joined the group, ostensibly to sympathize with Jeff's woes, but actually to share his corn liquor. Throughout the balance of the morning and well into the afternoon they discussed the affair. Occasionally Jeff went off into a portentous silence. On each such occasion he made gestures and announced that if he wanted to tell everything he knew, the whole dawg-bit county would be tore up by the roots. He said this so frequently and so earnestly that he was eventually (though not immediately) believed. His cronies urged him to divulge this devastating information, and Jeff—being instinctively a lover of the dramatic—withheld his tidings . . . and so successfully that his three companions pooled their cash resources and invested in another quart of corn, price fifty cents.

A REMARKABLE HOME

—o—

In Council Bluffs, Iowa, is located one of the most remarkable institutions in our nation. This institution is the Christian Home Orphanage, founded fifty-seven years ago this next December.

This Home for nearly fiftyseven years, has given continuous service in behalf of homeless and destitute children. During these long years, the doors of the home have never been closed, day or night. This Home has been a refuge for thousands of little children from all parts of the country. These children have been tenderly cared for, trained and educated and placed in fine private families, and in every way they have been given the opportunity to grow up into outstanding Christian men and women.

The Christian Home Orphanage, during all these years, has been carried on and built up to its present great size, by the free-will offerings of good people from all sections of the country

The Christian Home offers to everyone, eevrywhere, the opportunity to cooperate in the greatest of all works in the training and education of homeless and orphan children. If all would cooperate by giving as they could afford, the financial burdens of the Home would be well met. We ask that every reader of this article mail to the Christian Home Orphanage at Council Bluffs, Iowa, a donation for the Thanksgiving offering, in keeping with the blessings God has given you. We know that you will be blest by so doing, and that you will have a more enjoyable Thanksgiving day yourself in the realization that you are one of a great company of friends throughout the United States who are giving of their means to enable the Christian Home to give love and Christian training to homeless boys and girls.

Please send all contributions to the Christian Home Orphanage. Council Bluffs, Iowa. The same will be duly acknowledged and credited in the official publication of the Institution, a copy of which will be mailed you.

WINTERSMITH'S TONIC

What's the Square Thing to Do?

WHEN railroads were the only major form of transportation, regulating interstate commerce meant regulating the railroads and nothing else.

But today, when railroads are only part of a transportation industry, there is before Congress a carefully worked out legislative program designed to correct some of the existing inequalities in that industry.

The general attitude of Congress has been constructive. So has the general attitude of railroad employes. One of the nation's largest farm organizations has gone on record in favor of these laws.

The opposition has come largely from groups with special interests, who contend that the changes proposed would be unfair to other forms of transportation.

Now let's see about that:

What is unfair about asking a whole industry to abide by the same rules?

The railroads paid for the building of their own "superhighways" of steel—they pay out of their own pockets to maintain them—and they pay taxes on them.

What other form of transportation does these three things?

River barges and boats operate over channels provided for them with taxpayers' money at a cost of from $100,000 to a quarter of a million dollars per mile—several times what it costs a railroad to build an average mile of line.

And these channels are maintained at an annual cost to taxpayers which far exceeds the cost to railroads of maintaining an average mile of railroad. Barges and boats pay nothing for the use of these channels.

Commercial carriers on the highways do pay something toward the cost of the roads they use—but they use the same roads as 25,000,000 passenger cars whose owners pay most of the cost of building and maintaining the highways.

This is said not in criticism but as a fact which has a bearing on the competition the railroads are called on to meet.

So we come back to the basic question: Is it fair to ask part of an industry to work under rules which do not apply to all parts alike?

Thorsby Jr. High School News

—o—

The Grammar School Department opened on Tuesday, October 3. with an enrollment of approximately 225. The Jr. High Department had been in session since September. This latter department having an enrollment of 56 which is somewhat larger than that of all last year.

Hon. Percy M. Pitts, popular state representative from this county, was the principal speaker for the above opening exercise. He had chosen as his theme subject, "Education, A Worthwhile Investment." For twenty minutes the entire student body and large group of parents listened with rapt attention as he vividly painted a word-picture of the possibilities and opportunities open to those young men and women who are willing to pay the price of education and training. We gladly extend to Mr. Pitts a cordial invitation to visit our school any tme he may conveniently do so and discuss topics and matters of educational concern.

Our school almost hit the hundred per cent mark on attendance to the County Fair week before last. Out of an enrollment of 56, there were 54 who joined the happy procession to the fairgrounds. Everyone reported having a most enjoyable time. along with the youngsters from the various other schools over the county.

The reception for the public school teachers at the Jr. High auditorium last Friday night was well attended. Well over 100 parents, friends, children and teachers were present. The welcome address was given by Mrs. Blickensderfer.

Following the program came a number of lively games and contests, presided over by Miss Williams. Next came the refreshments served by members of our local P.-T.A.

Among those of our school who attended the State Fair at Birmingham last week were Miss Arra B. Jones and Peggy Franklin.

The auditorium is being set into shape for the approaching basketball season. Our basketball teams (both boys and girls) will be composed of small, young and inexperienced players. Virtually none of the players have ever played in a match game, hence we can't reasonably expect to offer much competition to our neighboring Junior High Schools whose teams are built up of larger, older. and more experienced players. Nevertheless our teams are going to strike out for as good a mark as they can possibly attain.

Miss Schurter was a visitor to our school last week.

The road machines have done a lot of work in preparing our athletic fields but have not yet put the finishing touches. We trust that they get this completed before the winter rains set in.

Among the visitors attending our faculty reception last Friday night was Prof. G. C. Weldon, Jr., principal of Mt. Pleasant Jr. High School, and son of our genial principal, G. C. Weldon, Sr.

Hallowe'en is not so far away now. Remember we are planning to have a big party that night. A program is being arranged by our P.-T. A. program committee. More about that later.

We were glad to have our friend and former classmate. Thomas Kincaid, visit our school last Monday. Many of us remember Thomas as one of our popular basketball players who starred year before last in winning the Gold Medal Championship at Calera. He is now a student at Phillips High School in Birmingham.

Work is moving along nicely in arranging for our lunch room. We are hoping to have everything in readiness for serving by next Monday.

Mrs. Williams visited in Birmingham and Mrs. Miller visited in Montgomery last week end.

About the most interesting and exciting episode happening thus far on our campus this year was a boxing exhibition by two of the Junior High School girls. Now friends, these fair young maidens really waded into each other, borrowing the boys' gloves for a few minutes, they showed them how by all rights it should be done. Those uppercuts were something to really behold.

Our attendance was 98 per cent the first month.

The Junior One Class went on a field trip the first period last Friday afternoon. A nice collection of rocks of the varied kinds in this vicinty have already been assembled.

We wish to thank the many friends for their contributions of dishes, etc., to the lunch room shower last week.

An order is being placed soon for additional playground equipment. All students are required to participate in some physical activity unless excused for some good reason.

We are happy to announce that one of our public-spirited patrons has offered a suitable prize to some worthy boy and girl. Mr. Rollins, cashier of the local bank. is giving a $2.50 award to some boy and the same to some outstanding girl of this school at the end of the school term. The awards will go to that boy and girl rendering the greatest service during the school term. They will be scored on the following points:

Scholarship, 25 per cent.

Citizenship, 25 per cent.

General ability of usefulness, 50 per cent.

Don't forget, parents, we are looking for you to visit your school soon.

Clanton Methodist Church

Church School each Sunday at 9:45 A.M., L. J. Stewart, General Superintendent.

Morning Worship service, 11:00 A.M. with sermon by the pastor.

Young Peoples meeting, 6:45 P.M. in the sub-auditorium of the Church.

Evening Worship service, 7:30 P.M. in the sub-tuditorium of the Church. Sermon by the pastor.

The records show that improvement is being made in our Church School and Worship service attendance and interest. May we with our thoughts deeds, prayers and efforts cooperate with the leaders who have recently been elected as well as the ones who have been re-elected in our Church and win victories for our Church and our Lord's Kingdom throughout this Church year.

PELLEGRA IN STATE SHOWS DECIDED DECLINE THIS YEAR

Montgomery.—Less than one-third as many cases of pellagara were reported during the first eight months of this year as were reported during the same period last year, the State Department of Health announced today.

Cases reported prior to September 1 of this year totaled only 159, compared with a total of 479 for the same period last year. Every month of the eight-month period showed a substantial drop in the number of reported cases this year, as compared with the same month in 1938. The largest decrease was shown in June, when only 23 cases were reported, or less than one-fifth as many as were reported in June of last year.

NO PRICE INCREASE ON CHILEAN NATURAL NITRATE

Chilean Nitrate Sales Corporation has definitely announced that there will be no increase in the present price of Natural Chilean Nitrate of Soda during the coming season which ends June 30 of next year. Simultaneously it is stated that arrangements have been made assuring ample supplies of Natural Chilean Nitrate in this country to meet everybody's needs.

This assurance to farmers and to fertilizer agents, J. A. Woods, President, of Chilean Nitrate Sales Corporation points out, eliminates all uncertainty concerning both price and supply arising from war in Europe. Cargoes of Natural Nitrate are moving steadily from Chile to the United States. Larger supply than is usual at this date is already in American ports, and in anticipation of greater demand, Mr. Woods declares that arrangements have been made to bring in extra supplies.

Financing Wars

By C. M. Mauldin

During the World War we sold the products of our labor from both farm and factory to the Allies and took in exchange their promises to pay. When the war was over and the time for settlement came both debtor and creditor nations were caught in a snarl with the unalterable law of economics—that the products of labor can be paid for only with other products of labor. And we learned by experience that money serves only as a convenience in exchanging wealth.

The debtor nations wanted to pay us. in the only way it was possible for them to pay, with the products of their labor. They wanted to ship commodities to us. But at that time a majority of the members of Congress thought it better for their constituents to work and produce their own goods than to collect them on debts that could not otherwise be paid. So a tariff on imports was placed so high that the so-called war debts are yet in default.

This time we plan to sell for cash, or think we do. And to facilitate the exchange the Allies, as you know, have gold now with us, and more to be placed with us, that will be valued in dollars at the American price of gold. Currency will be issued against the dollar value of this gold bullion and the commodities bought will be paid for with that currency. Some call that selling for cash. For the individual factory or farmer who sells it—it can be so called, as no immediate harm will be done him economically.

But for the nation there is a vast difference. When the war is over we shall have a large amount of yellow metal on our hands. This metal will not be a commodity intended for consumption. It will be valuable only as it can be exchanged for goods—the products of labor. If the Congress then keeps a high tariff on imports, the debtor nations cannot be able to deliver to us commodities (the products of their labor and)take back this gold. Until they can do this and complete the transaction of giving us their labor for ours, we shall not have been paid for our labor—our commodities. Until this is done, the gold in our possession will be very similar to the promises to pay of the World War which we still hold. For value will attach to this gold only as it is redeemed or exchanged somewhere, somehow for the products of labor—commodities, goods.

And there is another contingency deserving more than passing attention. Our country now holds approximately sixty per cent of the world supply of monetary gold. If we get possession of too great a part of this gold, other nations now on the gold basis may decide it wise and necessary to go off the gold standard. Then who will hold an empty bag? Who will have financed the war?

Men who are planning business ahead should expect inflation followed by deflation similar to that experienced from the effects of the World War.

TRAMPS GALORE!

"Tramp. tramp, tramp, the tramps are marching; cheer up comrades here they come."

Everyone wondered where all the tramps came from last Wednesday evening. Well, here's the answer:

Our Intermediate G. A.'s dressed as tramps, took grub and started to—nobody knew where. Speaking of tramps well, Edna Ruth Lowe took the prize! She was dressed in patched overalls, ragged shirt. big shoes, red socks and to top this off an old ragged straw hat. She had a cob pipe and carried a walking stick which added the finishing touches.

This group hiked about a mile west of the old High School and stopped in a pasture to prepare supper. A campfire was built and songs were sung until the fire was ready. Hot dogs were enjoyed by all, even if they did use their fingers for forks in the kraut.

A higher class of tramp, Brother Oscar Davis, proved to be very helpful in fixing the fire for toasting marshmallows.

After an evening of fun together this group decided to tramp back to town. The following tramps were along, Kathleen Armstrong, Dorothy Arnold, Katherine Bell, Elizabeth Dennis, Malinda Dennis, Berniece Lowe, Edna Ruth Lowe, Joan Atkinson, Mary Frances Griffin, Mary Ellen Higgins, Sarah Nell Sessions, Sybil Littlejohn, Juanita Miller, Essie White, Bess Hayes Joyce Varden, Mrs. Oscar A. Davis, Mrs. Reese G. Mullins and Mrs. Edwin Mullins enjoyed this affair.

OUR Many Services
ARE PLANNED FOR INDIVIDUAL FAMILY NEEDS !

An important reason for sending your laundry to us lies in the number of different services we offer. These have been planned for your convenience and your family's needs. Among them is at least one which should meet your exact requirements.

It may be most practical for you to have the entire laundry returned finished, ready to use and wear. Or you may prefer to have only certain articles finished and iron the rest yourself. When our routeman calls, merely specify how much of the work you wish us to do, and let him advise the service you should have. There is one to fit your needs and your budget.

We Observe

By BONNIE HAND

learing The Way—

Houses along the Birmingham-Iontgomery Highway, north of Clan- n are rapidly being shoved back from e present road for several feet. From horsby to Clanton almost every house ithin thirty or forty feet from the ad has been jacked up and rolled ckward, to make way for His High- ss, Mr. Motorist. This important ar- ry is certainly being streamlined, and though it seems regretable that all the ork of moving the houses has to be ne, it's all part of the wheels of ogress. We remember only a few ars back when this road was built d the larger majority of these houses ere erected. If, back then, we could ve seen that within a few years this odern road (at that time) would have be made wider, a great deal of ex- ense and trouble could have been ved. No one, at that time, even ough it has been only a short time o, could forsee the rapid strides of e automobile transportation indus- y. We wouldn't be suprised should is have to be done all over again in out fifteen more years.

st Around The Corner—

Just around the corner is dear old 40. Now that all the '40 model cars e out, where's some of those '40 can- dates?

ext Tuesday—

But Chiltonians don't have to wait til 1940 to vote. An election to select judge for the new Inferior Court being held next Tuesday, and there e three fine men in the race. A voter n't go wrong by making the X by e name of either of these gentlemen.

ut Don't Fret—

Speaking of 1940 candidates, we say et not, dear readers—there's always lull before the storm.

portant Offices—

Not that the 1940 elections in Chil- n County will be so stormy, but one s to remember that there's some portant offices to be filled.

ill "Bad Guesses"—

In reprinting our paragraph on "Bad uessers", carried in this column last ck, the Selma Times-Journal in Sun- y edition added comment as fol- s. "Despite the guessing that might ve taken place, we think that it would a safe guess to say that this is a cord in State politics . . . ." And we y to that esteemed daily that if it is record in State politics that forty r cent of the employees under the rmer administration have been re- ned, it is also a record of "bad [illegible]" on the part of the present ad- ration.

. Edgar's Bobcat—

We didn't ask Dr. J. E. Edgar if was hunting bobcats when he bag- d a four-footer in Hale County last onday morning, but we're inclined to lieve he was out after squirrels or ier game of the less fierce species. yway, Doc was displaying this animal town Monday afternoon, and believe u us when we say that we hope we ver meet one of these babies while uirrel hunting. And someone had gall ough to query the Doc as to the son he didn't "bring him back alive."

ally An Inspiration—

When Marvin Rankin introduced n. Chauncey Sparks as "the next vernor of Alabama" at the Kiwanis strict banquet the other night, we l that he knew he was making a d statement, and we feel that the aker was of the opinion that he was ting it pretty strong this far in ad- ice, but this must have been a fiery piration to the "next Governor," for really made a speech that was worth ening to.

her Inspirations—

No political-patriotic speeches wer de at the Lions' "Ladies Night" ban- et at Blue Creek Lodge last Thurs- evening, but plenty of "inspira- ns" were on hand. These inspira- ns were the ladies, for the local ns honored the fair ones on that ht, and "Ladies Night" is always an oyable occasion for Lions and Ki- nians.

A session of the Chilton County Circuit Court is being held here this week with civil cases on the docket. Judge Arthur Glover is presiding, and cases have been set through Thursday of this week, but will probably continue throughout the entire week.

REV. S. J. EZELL CONDUCTING REVIVAL MEETING IN SELMA

The Rev. S. J. Ezell, former pastor of the Clanton Baptist Church, and now Superintendent of Evangelism in Alabama, is this week and next conducting a revival meeting at the Central Baptist Church in Selma, Alabama.

Many of the people of Clanton will probably want to hear Rev. Ezell and drive over at least one evening during the revival.

Play At Baptist Church Morning And Evening

Sunday morning at the 11 o'clock hour a Stewardship play will be given by representatives of the six circles of the W.M.U.

The play was written by Mrs. Carter Wright, Southwide Stewardship Chairman of the W. M. U., and should be witnessed by every Baptist Church member.

The cast includes Mesdames Reid Mullins, Houston Nivens, W. C. Golden, Joe Ben Downs, Jr., Edwin Mullins, Grady Heflin, Miss Dorothy Arnold from the Intermediate G. A. and Mrs. K. D. Melton will also be on the program.

At the evening service Stewardship Church Night will be observed with members of the Sunbeam Band G. A., R. A., and Y.W.A. in charge of the program. At the close a very interesting playlet will be given by the Y.W.A. and Intermediate R.A. The characters are Annie Cordelia Smith, Charles Thomas, Aileen Popwell, James Duke Heflin, Janie Beth ohnston, and Williar Adams. The public is cordially invited to be present at both morning and evening presentations.

A. B. Foshee Asks Voters For Support

"To the Voters of Chilton County:'

"On next Tuesday, October 24, you will go to the polls to vote for a Judge of the Inferior Law Court recently created for this County by the Legislature.

"I have seen many of the voters in the County, and I appreciate the kind reception given me on your part and the many words of encouragement extended me in my race for this office. I appreciate the many friendships that I have made and whether elected to that office or not, I will ever treasure those personal friendships.

"To those whom I have not seen, it has been because of lack of time and I sincerely trust that you may see fit to vote for me whether called upon or not. I have made a clean race for this office and with he one thing in mind of getting the office at the hands of the voters of the entire County, so that if elected I would be the Judge of all of the people of the County. I am a firm believer in the principles advocated by Thomas Jefferson: 'A government of the people, by the people, and for the people.'

"To those of you whom I have seen and to those whom I have not seen, I especially urge you to go to the polls on election day and vote for the person of your choice, and I trust that will be myself, Buster Foshee.

"Most respectfully yours,
"A. B. (Buster) FOSHEE."

TWELVE COMMITTED TO JAIL DURING THE PAST WEEK

CLANTON WILL HAVE A NEW THEATRE

ANNOUNCEMENT MADE THAT NEW MOTION PICTURE THEATRE TO LOCATE HERE

Announcement was made here this week that Clanton will have a new motion picture theatre, within the near future.

This announcement was made by Earl Young, local young man who has had considerable experience in the motion picture business. Mr. Young stated that he will be manager of this new theatre, and that although plans for the building, which will be modern in every respect, have not been completed, nor the location been definitely decided.

It is understood that Mr. Young will have the backing of a well known motion picture theatre chain, which plans to spare no expense to give the people of this section the most modern and up-to-date theatre that can be expected of any city the size of Clanton, or even much larger.

Details of this proposed new enterprise will be carried at a later date, but it is understood that Clanton will definitely have another new and modern motion picture theatre.

Clanton To Play Sylacauga Friday

Tomorrow night, Friday, October 20, the Chilton County High School Tigers will face the strong Sylacauga High School football team on the lighted field there. This game is expected to draw a large crowd, as both teams have met on the field of battle several times in the past, and both strong teams. Last year the Sylacauga boys defeated the locals, but the game tomorrow night might tell a different story.

The Tigers defeated the Siluria High School team on the local field last Friday afternoon by a score of 6-0. This was an interesting battle, and both teams showed real teamwork adn sportsmanship.

SOCK SUPPER AND ENTERTAINMENT AT FAIRVIEW

There will be a sock supper and plenty of entertainment at Fairview Schoolhouse, nine miles southwest of Clanton Friday night, October 20. Everyone who wants to, bring a sock, and share in the fun."

This entertainment is being sponsored by the Home Demonstration Club and no admission will be charged.

CLAUD CONWAY OPERATING FRUIT, VEGETABLE STAND HERE

Claude Conway, well known insurance salesman of Clanton, has recently opened up a fruit and vegetable stand across the street from the News office. "Curb Market—Fresh Fruits and Vegetables," reads the sign over this new establishment, and a most complete line of fruits and produce is on display.

TUESDAY IS DAY SET TO ELECT COURT JUDGE

CANDIDATES ENTERING HOME STRETCH WITH CAMPAIGNS FOR JUDGE OF LAW COURT

Three prominent Clanton attorneys are bringing their campaigns for election as Judge of Chilton's newly-cleated Inferior Law Court into the home stretch as Tuesday, October 24, is the day set for the election.

Announcing simultaneously that they would be candidates for this office, created by the recent session of the Alabama Legislature, was A. B. Foshee, who has practiced law in Clanton for several years, and Raymond Mims, who has also practiced in Clanton for some time. Announcing one week later was J. B. Atkinson, widely known Clanton attorney, and former mayor of Clanton.

After a little more than one month in which to campaign, these gentlemen await the voice of the qualified voters of the County on next Tuesday. Leters from all three of the candidates may be found on this page of the News.

The Chilton County News wishes to take this opportunity to urge the voters to go to the polls next Tuesday and cast their vote, as this office is an important one, and all should have a voice in naming the person to hold the office as judge over the Inferior Law Court of Chilton County.

Kiwanians To Hear Industrial Program

An interesting program has been planned for the regular weekly luncheon of the Clanton Kiwanis Club at the Thomason Hotel tonight at 7:30.

Kiwanian Homer Roberts will have charge of the program which will be based on "Industrial Interests In Central Alabama.". A tour through the local Alabama Mills will be one of the features of the program. Kiwanian Roberts is superintendent of this unit of Alabama Mills. This wil be an interesting program and every Kiwanian is asked to be present.

J. B. Atkinson Writes To The Voters

"To The Voters of Chilton County:

"I wish to take this means of thanking those of you who have promised your support in the coming election Tuesday, October 24. It is the duty of every good citizen to vote his convictions. I only hope that you will weigh the qualifications and experience of each candidate before you cast your vote.

"Due to cases in court, I have been unable to see all of the voters of the County but let me assure you that should you see fit to honor me with this important office I will at all times strive to serve to the best interests of all the people.

"Respectfully,
"J. B. ATKINSON."

Clanton Lions Club Observes First "Ladies Night" At Blue Creek Lodge Friday Night

"Ladies Night" was appropriately observed by the Clanton Lions on last Thursday night when they gathered at the Blue Creek Lodge on beautiful Lake Mitchell.

On this night members of the Club honored their wives, sweethearts and friends, at a banquet in the spacious lodge hall. A plate heaped high with delicious fried chicken and all the trimmings was served to the twenty-two couples in attendance. This banquet was prepared by the efficient staff of chefs at the lodge.

President Leroy (Pewee) Martin presided over the gathering, and presented Miss Kathryn Foss, who rendered several vocal and piano selections. This was enjoyed by those present, as Miss Foss' singing is always a treat to any gathering.

Following the banquet dancing was enjoyed in the lodge hall and to say that the occasion was a success in every respect would be putting it mildly. "Ladies Night" will be observed from time to time by the Lions.

Plant Oats, Legumes, Say Business Men

In this issue of the Chilton County News appears a full-page advertisement, or statement from the County Agent, and endorsed by many business houses of the County, which urges the farmers of Chilton County to plant oats, a feed crop that is vital in bringing the horses and mules through the making of next year's crop. This page also stresses the importance of planting winter legumes for soil building and erosion control.

If this practice had not proven profitable in the past these merchants and business men would never have endorsed such, and County Agent J. W. Fant would not be advising the farmers to do this. We ask that the farmers and everybody read this message from these men who have the interests of the farmer at heart. They are spending their money to urge the farmers to plant these crops extensively this Fall.

Farm Meeting Over County To Start Tues

J. Hollis Jackson, teacher of vocational agriculture at the Chilton County High School, has announced a farm meeting at Concord Tuesday night, October 24 at 7:00 o'clock.

Mr. Jackson stated that this was the beginning of a series of meetings over the County, with the purpose of discussing the needs of the farm and the wishes of the group.

A cordial invitation is extended to those interested to attend, and join in the program.

A Letter To The Voters From Raymond Mims

"To the Voters of Chilton County:

"On next Tuesday the voters of this county will elect a judge for the newly-created Inferior Law Court of Chilton County. The Judge thus selected will hold office until January, 1945.

"I am asking you for this office only on the grounds of my ability and fitness to serve you in this capacity. My life is an open book, and I ask one and all to look in and see for yourselves what I am

"My purpose in life has been to deal fairly and squarely with my fellow-man, and if I am elected to this office I promise you here and now that it will be my purpose to continue to deal justly with my fellow-man. I will be under no obligation to render s[illegible] favors to any man. It shall be my pose to serve all the people and give no just cause for anyone to regret having voted for me.

Work Progressing On New School

Work on the new Chilton County High School is going forward at a lively pace, with the laying of the foundation almost completed. This new building will cover considerably more ground than did the one which burned last December.

P. S. Duckworth, Cullman, Alabama, contractor holds the contract for the building. His bid was $89,250.

FIREMEN CALLED TWICE FRIDAY TO EXTINGUISH FLAMES

Clanton's efficient group of volunteer firemen were called forth by the siren on two separate occasions last Friday, to battle fires of minor natures.

One of the fires was at the home of Washie Mims near the High School where little roof damage was done before the blaze was extinguished. The other one was at a house near the home of Grady Harris in South Clanton. Who lived in this house was not learned, but the damage to the house was slight.

REINHARDT-MINOR

With all of this interesting history connected with the Clanton-Maplesville-Plantersville-Selma highway, Chilton County News argues that it should be called the "Bedford Forrest Boulevard," and we heartily agree. A great Southerner would be appropriately honored. Now if we could just get the Tuscaloosa-Centreville-Maplesville-Prattville-Montgimery road improved (this road crosses the Bedford Forrest Boulevard at Maplesville) and call it the University Highway, then everybody over in these parts would be happy.

If we could prevail on Editor Bruce Shelton, of The Tuscaloosa News, and Editor Jim Oakley, of The Centreville Press to come to Clanton, via Calera, and see the streamlining that is going on in Chilton County on the Bee Line Highway, we would then take them for six miles out on as pretty a paved highway as can be found in the State (all built and paid for while they have been talking about that University-Capitol Highway.) This new highway, when completed, will lead to the next County seat, Columbiana, in Shelby County—just as the law directs. We would then route them back toward their homes over a good paved highway as far as Maplesville.

We believe they would then be convinced that when Tuscaloosa-Centreville-Maplesville - Prattville-Montgomery Hghway reaches the western border of Chilton County that this County can be depended upon to do whatever is needful.

There is much-ado-about-nothing over the proposed hand-picking of a few members of the State Democratic Executive Committee. A far more serious problem is to prevent the "hand-picking" of millions of young men to pull some more of John Bull's chestnuts out of the fire.

Road To War

One disputed provision in the pending neutrality bill is that which permits extension of short term commercial credits—to a maximum of 90 days. (Since this was put into type, the 90-day clause has been dropped from the bill).

This provision stipulates however that credits which have run 90 days cannot be renewed. This may prevent a recurrence of what happened the last time. Here is the chronology:

1914—The war started. Wilson proclaimed neutrality. The French asked New York bankers to float a $100,000,000 loan in the United States. Secretary of State Bryan, acting for the President, announced that loans to belligerents would be "inconsistent with the true spirit of neutrality," declaring, "money is the worst of all contraband because it commands everything else."

New York bankers then asked if it would be all right to make arrangements so the French could buy American goods on credit. State Department Counselor Robert Lansing visited the White House and persuaded Wilson that though "loans" might be bad, "credits" were different. Wilson assented. The Allies started buying.

1915—In September, Lansing, by then Secretary of state, sent Wilson a confidential letter relating how "credits" had worked. For that current year, he said our excess of exports to Europe over our imports from Europe would be approximately two and one-half billion dollars. Europe, he said, didn't have the gold to pay off.

If payment were demanded, the result in Europe would be "a general state of bankruptcy," and in America "industrial depression, idle capital and idle labor, numerous failures, financial demoralization, and general unrest and suffering among the laboring classes."

The alternative, he said, was to reverse the "no loans" policy—"our financial institutions have the money to loan and wish to do so"—maintain the credit of the borrowing nations, and thereby continue our commerce "at its present volume . . . with the consequent employment of capital and labor and national prosperity."

"Can we afford," Lansing asked, "to let a declaration as to our conception of the 'true spirit of neutrality' made in the first days of the war stand in the way of our national interest which seems to be seriously threatened?"

Apparently Wilson agreed that it would not be discreet to do so. One month later the first $500,000,000 Anglo-French loan was floated by a syndicate headed by Morgan & Co.

1917—On March 5, Ambassador Page, from London, advised the State Department that a world financial crisis was imminent ,that the Allied governments had to have immediately more money than any private U. S. financial agency possibly could provide, and that unless the money was forthcoming the tremendous Allied purchases from the United States would "be reduced to the lowest minimum" and "there may be a world-wide panic for an indefinite period." Therefore, it seemed, the U. S. Government itself must step in and make loans to the Allies. To do so, Page admitted, would be tantamount to a declaration of war on Germany. But, he added, "perhaps our going to war is the only way in which our present pre-eminent trade position can be maintained and a panic averted."

On Aprl 6 we went into the war.—Birmingham Post.

The money that the United States is spending, and will spend on this war and the warring nations, before the whole hellish business cools down, would easily finance the Townsend Old Age Pension Plan. Yet, judging by the tone of those we read, the more influential daily newspapers in America prefer that the money be spent in destruction of everything it touches than relieving want, privation and misery right here in our own land. The fourteen billion dollars that same bunch owe us for what they burnt up 25 years ago would help out a lot.

SYNOPSIS

Beautifully, young Kay Forrest has been employed by Christine Maynard, photographer, to pose for a series of pictures, the background of which will be exquisite Cathedral Gardens, famous Southern resort. Unknown to them, one Jeff Butler, mean, unscrupulous "swamp angel," has led a friend to spy on the two women. Kay, of necessity, is scantily clad while posing for the camera studies. Kay frequently stays with Mrs. Ruth Hamilton, her son Barney, of whom Kay is very fond, and her daughter Margaret. Mrs. Hamilton, a remarkable woman, conceived the idea of the Gardens following the death of her husband. One night, after a local dance, Kirk Reynolds, a ne'er-do-well gambler of Beverly, a resort town, and Kay go for a ride. Kirk's car collides with that of Harvey Jackson, and during the ensuing argument Kirk whips out a gun and kills the young, popular engineer. Kirk threatens to drag her into the thing if she tells even her father. Terror-stricken, she agrees to remain silent. Barney realizes something is wrong. She tries to reassure him, but tells him nothing. Mrs. Emma Forrest, Kay's mother, is firm, positive and demanding. Her father is exactly the opposite, kindly and unassuming. While at home Kirk Reynolds calls for her, and she is forced to go with him despite her family's protests. He tells her the circumstances make it necessary for her to marry him, so she cannot be forced to testify against him if he is accused of Jackson's murder. They drive to a neighboring town and are married. The next time they are together Kay tells Barney she loves him, but is married to Reynolds. Meanwhile, Miss Sonia ("Babe") Henkel, Beverly beauty operator of questionable morals, and intimate friend of Kirk Reynolds, berates him for marrying Kay. Jim Owenby, landscape engineer in love with Margaret Hamilton, discusses the affair with her. He is sure Kirk has married Kay so she cannot be brought into the case. Barney is forced to discharge Jeff Butler for intoxication. Jeff resolves to get even.

The afternoon wore on. Jeff and his three friends sat on the railroad right of way and debated social problems.

Eventually the four gentlemen—all more or less intoxicated—became hungry. Jeff Butler, drunk and expansive, and having in the pockets of his ancient corduroy trousers the money which Barney Hamilton had given him . . . created a sensation by inviting those present to join him at Mac's Bar-B-Q place for sandwiches.

Mr. McCants was not particularly glad to see them. He observed that they were none too sober and risked insult by demanding cash with the order.

Mac's Bar-B-Q was a Beverly institution. It perched on the side of the street leading from the Square to the railroad station, and attracted all classes. Mr. McCants, a sad-appearing gentleman with a long face and melancholy eyes, at times resented the popularity enjoyed by his establishment. Customers demanded service and speed and effort, to none of which was Mac addicted.

The four swamp angels were conversing. The tall one, Jeff Butler, was doing most of the talking. Mac tried not to listen. Much gossip flowed across his counter and toward all of it he tried to maintain an attitude of professional aloofness.

"And this heah thing I been a-tellin' you about," Jeff Butler was stating, "it's turrible."

"Sho' is, Jeff. 'Splain it."

"It's all on account of them Gardens. They're the work of the Devil, sho' nuff."

"Uh-huh. An' what else, Jeff?"

"You wouldn't believe—not hardly."

"You tell us."

"Well," Jeff choked down the last colossal mouthful of hamburger. "What would you-all say was I to tell you that in the early mawnin's out yonder, they's wimmin runnin' around 'thout any clothes."

There were exclamations of shocked surprise and very considerable interest.

"No?"

"You ain't truthin'?"

"Yes I am. I seen it with my ve'y own eyes."

"How many?"

Jeff did some swift thinking. It would have been pleasant to exaggerate, but he feared to lose dramatic power. He said, "One!"

"Which one?"

"You wouldn't believe—"

"We sho' would, Jeff. Which lady is it?"

"Kay Forrest!"

Mac's face was red, but he said nothing. He heard indignant comment. "That gal!" . . . "She's a shame an' a disgrace" . . . . "Wouldn't put nothin' past her" . . . "All the things she's done! Married Kirk Reynolds . . . Most likely helped kill Harvey Jackson . . ." "Ought to be tarred an' feathered. That's what she ought" . . . "But she's a dawg-gone purty gal . . ."

Mr. Butler, vastly pleased by the interest he had aroused, elaborated on his story.

Then Jeff—not wishing to relinquish the spotlight—went into greater detail.

"Bet that gal sho' is pretty?" commented one man.

They were absorbed in their discussion, so absorbed that they did not see the door of the diner open, did not notice the startled look which appeared on the face of Jerry McCants. They heard — and Barney Hamilton heard—Jeff Butler's comment.

"Kay Forrest purty! Boy! She is! Mawnin' after mawnin' I seen her git out on one of them islands."

Jeff was jerked from his stool. He had a fleeting glimpse of a blond, boyish face . . . and a pair of eyes which were hot with fury.

Then Barney's fist exploded against Jeff's mouth. It wasn't a slap. It didn't invite hostilities. It started the battle formally and efficiently.

Mr. Butler crashed to the floor. His three friends rose, and Mr. McCants vaulted the counter brandishing a heavy iron poker. Mac said, "You-all keep out of this."

Jeff blinked, squirmed and looked up at the young man. Barney had not spoken. It was obvious that he did not intend to turn this affair into any part of a debate.

A great fury overcame Jeff Butler. He had been insulted, discharged and attacked. Corn liquor gave him a courage which he did not naturally possess. He said several very profane things, clambered to his feet, and lurched forward.

Again Barney's fist found his face, but this time Jeff was prepared. He wrapped long sinewy arms around the young man's body and they crashed to the floor together. Hands groped for holds, legs flailed; there were sighs and grunts and the heavy thud of fists on flesh.

It was a brief but epic battle. And when it was over Mr. Butler lay on the floor—more nearly sober than he had been in twenty-four hours, but with his countenance considerably the worse for wear. Barney Hamilton leaned against the counter, mouth open, left eye badly bruised. He still had not spoken, and he did not speak as the three swamp angels helped their fallen brother out into the street. Then Barney became articulate. He said, "Thanks, Mac."

Kay was frightened. From the window of her bedroom she had seen Barney approach the house from the parking-space. At first she had felt an inexplicable sense of relief at his return.

And then she felt herself grow cold. She saw now that he was walking none too steadily and that he was dabbing at the corner of his mouth with a handkerchief which was stained with blood. He circled the house and entered the front door Kay heard him mount the stairway; heard him pass the door. She was frightened. She stood motionless, still holding her negligee about her slim figure. Then, impulsively, she turned away and crossed the hall to Margaret's room. She needed someone to reassure her. Margaret was not there, and she sat down, emotionally exhausted.

She turned quickly as the door opened and closed again. But it was not Margaret. Instead, Barney stood there: Barney, coatless, his shirt open at the throat; Barney, tall and blond and reassuring; Barney, smiling crookedly and somewhat painfully with lips which were bruised and puffed. He was gay . . . making light of whatever it was that had happened to him. He said, "How now, honey?"

He crossed the room and she forgot everything save the fact of his presence. She moved to meet him and his arms were about her. She clung to him and tried—oh, so hard—not to cry. She heard him talking. Bantering . . . though with a nuance of seriousness which was gloriously unmistakable. And she was sobbing then and saying things which she had not meant to say. She was saying, "Oh! Barney, I was so frightened . . . and I love you so."

He pressed bruised lips against young eager ones. He looked down at her—infinitely feminine and appealing — beautifully young and youthfully beautiful. And because he, too, was trembling, he tried to be gay. He said, "Snap out of it, sugar."

"I—I'm trying . . ." She looked up at him. "What happened?"

"Oh, nothing."

"Please tell me." Her eyes widened. "Was it Kirk Reynolds?"

"No. Forget that lad, can't you?"

"But you were in a fight."

"An affair of sorts. But not romantic, my dear."

"You'd say that anyway. And I'm still scared."

"Don't be silly."

"I'm not." And she tried not to be. She said, "Dad came out here again today."

"What's unnatural about that? He's a pretty swell egg and he wants to be sure that you're happy."

"I know . . . But he's worried, too. He wants to do things."

"What sort of things?"

"He wants to see Kirk Reynolds."

"So do I."

"But you mustn't. I told Dad that, too. He's a grand person, Barney. And I've hurt him without wanting to. He talked to me for two hours. He thinks I'm just a silly kid because I won't tell him the truth."

"I'm complaining about the same thing."

"I can't tell anybody. If you knew . . . or if Dad knew . . ."

"Don't you think we do, honey?"

"You don't know! You can only guess."

"Check, honey. And I'm not going to intrude any more. When you're ready to tell me—or your Dad . . ."

THE KEY TO SUCCESSFUL FARMING

is able-bodied Work Animals. On them every good Farmer is dependent for the proper working of his crop . . . and healthy, well-fed animals will see him through the days when his crop demands his constant attention.

Insure their welfare by planting oats this fall. Take care of your work animals and they'll take care of you.

Dear Farmer:

Don't Starve Your Work Animals In Plow Time

PLANT OATS NOW TO AVOID THIS

1. Plant one acre for each work animal on your farm.
2. Drill, or sow, Two Bushels of Hastings' Hundred Bushel, or Texas Red Rust Proof Oats per acre.
3. Treat seed for Smut.
4. Graze from the time they will not "pull up" until March 1.
5. Top-Dress March 1 with 32 Pounds of Nitrogen---200 Pounds of Nitrate of Soda, or its equivalent.

All CHILTON COUNTY Farmers are urged to plant oats to avoid a serious feed shortage during the plowing season next Spring. The corn crop is very short this year, and because of the European War, feed prices may be "sky high" next year. FOLLOW THE INSTRUCTIONS OF YOUR COUNTY AGENT.

Plant Winter Legumes for Soil Conservation and Grazing

1. Plant 20 pounds of Vetch or 30 pounds of Austrian Peas NOW.
2. Fertilize with 300 pounds of Super Phosphate or 500 pounds of Basic Slag.
3. Experiment Station results show an increase of 15 to 20 bushels of corn per acre following winter legumes

Census report shows that 3,368 bales of cotton were ginned in Chilton County, Alabama, from the crop of 1939 prior to October 1, as compared with 5,301 bales for the crop of 1938, October 1.—V. C. McKee, Special Agent.

Christian Endeavor

The Christian Endeavor did not have a regular meeting Sunday night. Instead there was the installation of new officers for the coming months. The new officers stood in a half-circle in front of the pulpit while Rev. Gonzales spoke a few words to each one. After this he spoke briefly on the topic "What It Means To Be A Christian." He told of a twelve-year-old child who upon being asked what she thought being a Christian meant, replied: "Being a Christian means loving God with all your heart and behaving yourself."

The Executive Committee of the Christian Endeavor plans to meet on Sunday afternoon, October 29, at 4:00 o'clock.

Resolutions of Thorsby Lodge No. 759 A.F.&A.M., Approved Oct. 13, 1939

Be it resolved, that whereas God in his wisdom has seen fit to take from our midst our beloved friend and Brother, Brother Houston Price, and whereas, we have sustained a deep-felt loss in his death, he having been a member of our fraternity since the establishment of the local Lodge, being one of its Charter members; and, whereas, he was always faithful to its principles and gave it his loyal support, we will greatly miss him.

Be it further resolved, that, whereas, we wish to express to his mother, Mrs. Price, and family our sympathies, that a copy of this resolution be extended her expressing our heart-felt sympathy in our mutual loss.

Be it further resolved, that a copy be entered in the minutes of the Lodge as a permanent record, and

Be it further resolved, that copies be furnished to each of the local County newspapers for publication.

Respectfully submitted,
—J. D. Griffin, Chas. A. Peterson, Donald Merchant, Committee.

Isabella F. H. A. News

(Intended for Last Week)

On Wednesday, October 4, the Isabella Chapter of the F. H. A. held a meeting.

The meeting was called to order by the President, Margarette Russell. The pledge service was given to ten pledges, who, we hope, will strive hard to reach the first degree in F. H. A. by the end of the first semester of this school term.

The Club chose blue and white as its local chapter colors.

The chairman of the project com mittee gave a report concerning a project for our local chapter. The committee chose "Improving Our Home Economics Department," as a project.

The program committee was asked to decide on the programs the Chapter would give each meeting so that the programs could be put into booklet form and given to each member of the F. H. A.

Circle Five Met With Mrs. Hayes

Circle Number Five of the Clanton Baptist Church met at the home of Mrs. J. P. Hayes for a mission study on October 9, with twelve members present. One new member, Mrs. Hicks, of Montgomery, was present.

Mrs. Edwin Mullins gave a most interesting talk on the life of Mrs. Willie Kelly, missionary to China from Alabama.

Delicious refreshments were served.

Friends of Mrs. Charles Wade will be sorry to know that she is confined to her bed for several days.

Friends of Mrs. Horace Popwell, who is in the hospital in Mississippi, will be glad to hear that she was some better last week.

Homemakers Class To Meet

The Homemakers Class of the Clanton Baptist Church will meet next Friday afternoon at 2:30 at the home of Mrs. Gladys Teel.

Music Appreciation Club Meeting

Mrs. W. E. Huddleston was hostess to the Music Appreciation Club at her home Tuesday afternoon.

The living room was attractively arranged with fall flowers, dahlias, chrysanthemums and zinnias. Twelve members responded to the roll call with current events pertaining to music.

The business was presided over by the president, Mrs. Henry Stanley. A letter from the District President, Mrs. Verona C. Bebson, saying the district meeting is to be held on November 16 and that Mrs. J. Grely McGowin, the state president of the Music Federation Clubs of Alabama will be present, was read. Also Mrs. Stewart Washburn, publicity editor, will be at the meeting. The Clanton Club is to be host, and plans were discussed concerning program, luncheon and tea for this meeting.

Plans were discussed concerning the year's programs and everyone seemed very enthusiastic.

Mrs. W. A. Willis gave a very interesting paper on the "Life Of Fritz Kriesler." Miss Kathryn Foss gave two vocal solos, "The Last Rose Of Summer," and "In The Time of Roses." These numbers were beautifully rendered.

Mrs. John Deramus was elected to Club membership.

A delicious and attractive salad plate was served to the following: Mrs. Giles P. Walker of Hurtsboro, who was guest of the Club; Mesdames C. N. Parnell, George McCain, Reid Mullins, Joe Mullins, Percy Pitts, W. M. Polk, Henry Stanley, Grady Heflin, W. A. Willis, S. D. Sturkie, Miss Kathryn Foss and the hostess, Mrs. W. E. Huddleston.

Sub-Deb Club Meets

The Sub-Deb Club met with Mary Frances Atkinson last Friday night for a program of Installation of Officers.

After assembling in the room, elections were held for Reporter and Program Chairman. Reporter is Doris Newell and Program Chairman is Elizabeth Newell with her helper as Mary Frances Atkinson. The installation was carried out in the regular manner of officers repeating the Loyalty pledge over lighted candles after which the entire group, consisting of the above-named, and the following:

Annie Cordelia Smith, Aileen Popwell, Elizabeth Bryson, Annie Laura Bryson and Janie Martin, repeated the Sisterhood Pledge, also with lighted candles.

Immediately following the ceremony the girls enjoyed a delightful supper during which several contests were held with Elizabeth Newell winning the prize.

Don't Miss seeing Aileen Popwell play the part of Margaret Rogers, a young sophisticated college student, at First Baptist Church Sunday evening at 7:00 o'clock.

1940 Chevrolets Make Their Bow

Three series of passenger cars, re-designed in the new "Royal Clipper" styling, and embodying numerous mechanical improvements to assure greater safety and comfort as well as finer performance, comprise Chevrolet's new line for 1940, introduced today. All series are much larger, overall length being increased 4⅜ inches. The new exclusive vacuum power shift (lower left) is now regular equipment on all models of all series at no extra cost. Special De Luxe series, the Sport Sedan of which is shown at center, has a new T-spoke steering wheel with horn-blowing ring (upper right). Lower right, the 1940 Chevrolet six-cylinder valve-in-head engine, which has been improved for smoother, quieter operation, and extremely long life.

AROUND C. C .H .S

The Junior Ones are still wondering what it's all about. I mean, they're still wondering if, when having a test, the First Section is privileged to test the Second Section what the questions are, or not? It has them worried. Too, they want to know—why can't they make all A's in Hi as they did in Grammar school? Maybe we should have told them that it is very seldom that they can get what they make in a complicated High School. I've always heard that "A word to the wise is sufficient." This is it: Just as a tip, High School isn't always a bed of roses without the thorns—you'll get stuck plenty often.

Girls, girls, gather 'round We have, or rather the school has, three Clark Gables. So bring your autograph books along with you and mob the three gallant gentlemen who wear their mustache so gracefully, if that's the way you wear them. Nevertheless, as I was saying, we don't know which one will land a contract first, but Billy Maddox, James Carl Martin, and Ferrill Williamson are trying mighty hard to get a Talent Test and we're keeping our fingers crossed to see who wins. Who's your best bet?

The Seniors have ordered their rings and expect to receive them in the next month or so. We just hope they will turn out to be as pretty as they were when we looked them over and decided on them. It's all very exciting now, but when they come, everyone will be wishing they had not drank so many Coca-Colas this summer and saved their nickles and dimes for a "Ring Fund' Pity the Seniors—please

SCRAP-OF-NEWS: Elizabeth Bryson had not been in Clanton a week when the class elected her the prettiest—nice going . . . . Speaking of elections, if Frances Popwell didn't win best dressed, we don't know why. . . . . Betty Hollis let her tongue slip the other day and admitted that she was jealous of a certain black-eyed, black-headed, short, cut—or handsome young man about C.C.H.S. Hope she doesn't throw rocks accurately or I might get hit—eh, Betty? . . . . We're all wondering about the new young man in town. We don't know anything for certain, except what Willodene Stewart had to say the other day—ask her. . . . . Bobby Atchison is every girl's heart-throb this year. Look out, Demp, he'll steal your show yet.

AUTO ACCIDENTS SHOW INCREASE IN STATE IN SEPT.

Twenty-nine people were killed in the 216 motor accidents occurring in Alabama during September, that were investigated by officers of the State Highway Patrol. This was more than twice as many as the 14 who lost their lives in the 191 accidents investigated by the Patrolmen in August. The September toll of injured was 39 seriously and 180 slightly hurt—compared with 28 persons seriously and 145 slightly injured in August. Property damage resulting from motor traffic crashes recorded for September totalled $42,027.60, compared with $35,739.71.

Commenting on the figures for September, when he released the Patrol's operations report for that month, and comparing them with those recorded for August, Director T. Weller Smith of the State Department of Public Safety said the increases in September in totals of both accidents and fatalities, was explained to some extent by the fact that the ratio of fatalities from individual accidents was above normal, and more Patrolmen were on duty than in the preceding month, so that there were more accidents investigated.

In a single accident occurring in South Alabama, he cited as an example four persons were killed, compared with the normal average of one fatality per accident in those in which fatalities orcur at all. "Despite these facts, however," he said, "there are far too many highway traffic accidents in Alabama. That is why the safety legislation enacted by the present Legislature including the new drivers' license law now in effect, was introduced and passed, I confidently believe the wholesome results of this legislation will begin to manifest itself in a marked reduction in accidents and their atendant fatalities and injuries within a limited period of months."

Mr. and Mrs. Ira Cavin of Jacksonville, Florida, are the guests of his mother, Mrs. H. A. Askins and Mr. Askins.

Mrs. T. L. Patrick has returned from a visit with relatives in Birmingham.

Misses Dixie and Vida Smoot of White City spent the week end with Annie Lee Donohoo.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Deason and family spent Sunday with relatives and friends near Eoline.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Sikes of Booth, made a brief visit Sunday afternoon to Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Hughes.

Mrs. L. A. Marlar, Mrs. Ella Mae Simpson and children visited James Marlar in Montgomery Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Thompson and son, Tommie, of Prattville, were the Sunday guests of Mrs. Gandy.

Mrs. Curtis Fikes and baby are visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Tindal in the Concord community.

There will be services at the Baptist Church Wednesday night through Friday night of this week. Rev. Paul Dixon of Tallassee will preach. Everybody cordially invited. Let's make this a real Church revival.

THE IMPORTANCE OF TERRACE MAINTENANCE IS STRESSED

The importance of maintenance work on terraces previous to planting winter legumes and grain in this section is being stressed by Mr. James H. Wood, Superintendent of the Soil Conservation Service in the CCC Camp area near Clanton, Alabama.

A few suggestions regarding maintenance operations will aid farmers in performing this work satisfactorily and preparing terraces to withstand winter rains ahead, it is pointed out. These include:

Repairing all breaks and weak places before plowing is begun and plowing as wide a channel as the slope of land will permit, this ranges from 12 per cent slope to 20 feet on a 2 per cent slope. The wider the channel the more water a terrace will take care of, according to Mr. Wood, who further points out that the ordinary 2-horse turn plow will give satisfactory results.

In further explaining methods, farmers are advised to use the crest of the terrace and a line from 12 to 20 feet up the slope as boundaries of the channel and then treat the inside of these boundaries as a land and plow out completely until a dead furrow is reached.

JAMES S. SMITH, AGE 77, PASSED AWAY LAST FRIDAY

James S. Smith, age 77, died at the T.C.I. Hospital, Fairfield, Alabama, Friday afternoon, Oct. 13, at 1:30 P.M.

Funeral services were held from the Indian Grave Church at 10:30 Sunday morning with the Rev. T. L. Jenkins conducting. Interment was in the nearby cemetery with Spigener Funeral Home in charge.

Mr. Smith is survived by his widow, three sons, A. D. Smith of Clanton, W. G. and W. A. Smith of Birmingham; 3 daughters, Mrs. O. C. Moore, Birmingham, Mrs. Dovie Lambrick, Kansas City, Mo., Miss Mildred Smith, Birmingham.

HEALTH DEPARTMENT TO MAINTAIN NURSES REGISTER

A new service for the benefit of the doctors and the people of the County is to be inaugurated at an early date by the Health Department, it is learned from a weekly news source. A nurses register including both practical and graduate nurses will be kept in the local Health Office. The office expects to be able to furnish any doctor on request the names of all practical or graduate nurses available with their qualifications and the amount of their fee. Where it is possible for the nurse to communicate with the office, she will be asked to check in and out on calls.

The Health Officer does not want to give the impression that the Health Department is seeking to employ nurses. He does request, however, for the success of the register that all graduate and practical nurses residing in the County and particularly near Clanton, call at the Health Office so that the necessary information can be obtained with which to make the register.

YOUNG PEOPLES ASSOCIATIONAL MEETING HELD OCT. 8TH

The Young Peoples Associational meeting was held Sunday, October 8, at Billingsley Baptist Church.

The theme for the meeting was "Our All For Christ." The devotional was conducted by Miss Elizabeth Cobern. Following this we held an election if officers as follows:

Annie Cordelia Smith, president, Janie Beth Johnson, vice president; Dorothey Arnold, Sec.-Treas.; Pianist, Miss Molly Bell Ousley.

Business was then discussed and it was decided that the next meeting would be in January at Clanton. Installation of officers will be held at this time. The "Toot of Dimes" for the building of "House Beautiful" was discussed and plans were made so that all organizations might have a part in this.

The program was on Prayer, given by Mary Frances Duke.

Bible Study, Miss Molly Bell Ousley.

Giving, Annie Cordelia Smith.

Personal Giving, Aileen Popwell.

Missions, Jane Beth Johnson.

We then sang "Nothing Between."

Mrs. Davis gave a very interesting talk. She told of the goals of young peoples rally, and how many of these our association had met. During her talk we had a report from the various organizations on personal service.

Mrs. Davis read a very good poem on "House Beautiful."

A talk on "Stewardships" was given by Dorothy Arnold and a poem on "Stewardship" by Jean Donovan.

We all sang "My Jesus, I Love Thee," for our closing hymn.

We were then dismissed by Brother Oscar Davis.

Graves Sees War Bringing Farm-City Price Balance

"No Fear of Food Shortage Or Run-Away Prices." Declares Roosevelt Council Member

BIBB GRAVES

MONTGOMERY, Ala. War in Europe will help restore the balance between farm and city prices and bring about more normal business and employment, former Governor Bibb Graves, a member of President Roosevelt's Agricultural Advisory Council, said here Wednesday on his return from Washington where he attended [illegible] of the group.

"This council, composed of growers, processors and distributors of farm products and representatives of labor and the general public, pledged its fullest cooperation to the President and the Secretary of Agriculture in meeting the situation created by the outbreak in Europe," Governor Graves said.

"All Americans want to keep this country out of war. We are confident that the United States will remain at peace but we recognize the difficulties which foreign wars present to our domestic economy. This council has concerned itself with these difficulties.

"The war in Europe will strengthen farm prices here, but consumers need have no fear of shortage or runaway prices. Such advances in farm prices as may occur will tend to restore the balance between farm and city prices and help to bring about normal business and employment.

In Better Position

"Furthermore, we are in a much better all-around position than we were at the outbreak of the last war," said Governor Graves who saw active service in the last war. "From farm to kitchen, the whole process of producing, processing and distributing has been greatly simplified and improved.

"It is our belief that the Department of Agriculture, with the aid [illegible] of [illegible] represented on this council, is the [illegible] to deal with the [illegible] situation.

"[illegible] must be done through voluntary [illegible] recommendation. This should be directed toward securing and maintaining proper balance by means of fair prices for farm products, fair wages for labor and reasonable profits for business.

"It should be emphasized that the prices of most farm products are still low, despite some recent increases, and that justice to agriculture demands that the prices of farm products be raised to their proper relationship with other prices and wages.

"In order to help carry out the objectives of this council and the department," he continued, "we recommended the permanent organization of the council and the establishment of the necessary committees to present facts about the agricultural situation to the public and to assist in drafting specific programs which may become necessary to meet developments."

TRUTH about ADVERTISING

By CHARLES B. ROTH

AN EXPERIMENT IN HORSE-FEEDING

THERE'S an old story I have always liked. It is about the parsimonious Frenchman who rued the money he spent in feeding his horse.

After scheming and planning he hit upon an idea which would enable him to stop all that.

It was beautifully simple: Each day he would gradually cut down the amount of feed he gave the horse. He would cut it down so gradually, in fact, that the animal wouldn't ever realize he was being cheated.

Charles Roth

The horse would thus become used to getting along on less. Eventually he would need no feed at all. Think of the money that would save!

The French genius scientifically set about carrying on the experiment. Several months later he was telling about it with pride in his voice. Did it work? asked a friend.

"Work? Oh, yes, indeed, it did!" he exclaimed. "It worked perfectly. Beautifully. The only trouble was that just about the time my horse got used to going without feed, he died."

We laugh at the benighted condition of a man with an idea as foolish as this, but many business men try to stop feeding their business "horse" by eliminating or cutting down on their advertising.

The fact is that advertising is the feed which keeps their business in robust health and full of energy and strength.

Many examples can be cited of the inevitable result of stopping advertising. Two will do. Forty years ago there was a remedy on the market which was America's biggest seller. It was widely, intelligently, consistently advertised. Its name was a household word. Then the founder of the business died. His heirs decided to cut out advertising because "our product is so well known people will have to buy it." The product passed out of the picture entirely.

Another was a fine, honest, well-made, well-advertised toilet soap, with all the good will any product could possibly need. The management of the business changed. The advertising stopped. Soon the product was no longer on the market.

The reason why advertising must be a continuous process is that we human beings need constant reminding. We're not fickle. But we are so filled with our own ideas and plans and businesses that if a man who wants our trade doesn't ask for it regularly and often, we drift elsewhere to the man who does.

The advertiser is faced by the problem of asking his customers to buy from him, but he also has to consider the most economical way of extending his invitation.

He finds the answer to both parts of this problem in the newspaper. No other form of advertising has ever been discovered which will carry his message so effectively for so little cost.

We are very grateful to say that by God's blesssings and divine guidance we are having a splendid Sunday School and B.T.U. here. We want to thank each one who partakes of these blessings upon you, and ask that you continue coming and bring someone with you.

We are very thankful to say that Bro. C. P. Haggard, a fine young man of Maplesville, who by God's divine guidance is doing his duty in upholding the cause of Christ by carrying His message, will be here the fourth Sunday at 11:00 o'clock and also Sunday night at 7:00 o'clock to preach for us. Everyone has a special invitation to attend these services, If you can't possibly come will you please remember to pray.

FALL OATS FOR FEED CROP

Farmers in this section who face a probable shortage of corn this season because of unfavorable weather, can sow fall oats and thereby avoid having to buy feed next spring, according to Mr. James H. Wood, Superintendent of the Soil Conservation Service in the CCC camp area near Clanton, Alabama.

In the sowing of fall oats maximum protection against erosion can be secured by setting up a strip rotation, it is pointed out. A desirable strip rotation can be established by sowing each third terrace interval to oats and following the oats with lespedeza or some other summer legume. The two intervening terrace intervals can be planted to winter legumes, followed by row crops. This will provide a two-year rotation on terrace intervals devoted to row crops.

Upon completion of the rotation, according to Mr. Wood, the grain strip can be moved either up or down hill, again using each third terrace interval for grain and summer legumes.

Where machinery is used for harvesting grain, two or more terrace intervals may be used and the same rotation put into effect. Such rotations provide for maximum use of legumes for soil building.

1939 WAS A GOOD YEAR FOR ME
NOT FOR ME--but I'm going to use __enough__ POTASH in 1940
More Potash means More Profit

START PLANNING FOR 1940 NOW

IT IS not too early to be making plans for more profit from your crops next year. Start now, while this year's results are still fresh in your mind, to provide for the use of plenty of potash to insure greater yields and quality in 1940. Rusted cotton, low yields and poor quality of tobacco, corn, vegetable, fruit, and legume crops result if the soil and fertilizer do not supply enough potash. Wherever legumes are grown, more potash is needed because of the large amounts removed by these crops and to balance the nitrogen and organic matter supplied when legume crops are turned under.

Talk over with your county agent or experiment station your yields this year as compared with what you can expect from your soil if given the right amount of the right fertilizer. Ask your fertilizer dealer or manufacturer about fertilizers high in potash. You will be surprised how little extra it costs to apply enough potash for the crops which you will plant next spring.

Write us for further information and literature on the profitable fertilization of Southern crops.

MORAL ECHOES

D. W. Haskew

I lived door neighbor to a family who never made provisions for one day ahead. Every morning, rain or shine, cold or hot, some member of the family would have to go [illegible] pile and chop kindling wood before the fire could be started in the stove. As a lad I was trained to have splinters and wood by the stove every night for the morning. The method [illegible] of people is to live with nothing provided for tomorrow. A squirrel or a rat have better judgment than they. There is no lesson that American people need to learn more than to get something ahead. Learn to live on what you made last year. At least be thrifty enough to put splinters by the side of your stove the night before, so that you will not have to go to your wood pile every morning to cut splinters.

My roommate came in from his recitation room in a state of merriment and proceeded to tell me what the professor had said. This man of great knowledge was lecturing on the Evolution of the human race and he declarel to his class as he exhibited the skull of a Chimpaneze: "This is a very rare skull. So far as is known there are only two of them in existence in our country—one is in the national museum and I have the other." Since that time I have heard teachers who spoke as though they had not only the chimpanzee skull, but the Chimpanzee brain. Some of us may live and act like Chimpanzees and monkeys some time, but we do our ancestry and injustice when we drag them down to our level.

Just to show you that there is not much common practical sense in the world, read what took place at a certain home. The wife was busy washing and seeing that the clothes lne was not high enough in the middle she ordered her husband to go after a prop. The husband hurried off to find one and finding a plank he figured that he had what was needed. He leaned it up against the house and then over to his neighbor's house he rushed and asked the loan of his step ladder that he might climb up and cut a V in the end of the plank. Hs friend looked at him with disdain and replied: "Tom, you are the kind of man who makes other people say that we are dumb. You do not need a step lalder to cut a V in the end of your plank. All you have to do is to lean it against the side of your house at that tall window and stand in a chair and cut it from the window." That picture is not overdrawn.

The liner quivered from stem to stem A passenger heard a grinding sound and just then the vessel came to a dead stop. This passenger rushed to upper deck in his long flowing nightshirt and screamed to the captain: "Captain, captain, what has happened. Have we struck an iceberg. Please show me the life-boats." The captain replied: "Too late my man, we have done all for you that we can. You will have to look out for yourself now. You see we have landed and our ship is tied up at dock." A lot of the human family will go into excitement when the old ship of Zion makes its landing, for they will not know where they have arrived. Then it will be too late. Get ready for the landing.

I read an unsual story in the paper a few days ago. A merchant vessel was out on the high seas. In its cargo there were many wild, furious animals from Africa. When ninety miles from shore a large lion broke cage and rushed out on deck. The crew barricaded themselves and sent a wireless call to a station ninety miles away. The ship captain headed his vessel in that direclion, and during the entire distance the furious lion was the master on deck. At the station gunners came aboard and mowed down the lion with machine guns. Ah, my friend, you are sailing the high seas and you have with you many many wild beasts of your human nature. If the lion of dishonesty, the lion of impurity, the lion of intempearance breaks out and takes charge of your ship, you had better beware. These lions will tear you to pieces and wreck your craft.

Suffering Women Welcome "Build-Up"

A simple method is saving many women much pain and discomfort! It is based on the knowledge that women's headaches, nervousness, and cramp-like pain often are symptoms of functional dysmenorrhea due to a weak, run-down, undernourished condition. That so many women find relief from these painful symptoms through the CARDUI "build-up" is easy to explain. By improving the appetite, assisting digestion and assimilation, CARDUI helps to build physical resistance against periodic pain. Thousands of women also report that CARDUI, taken just before and during "the time," helps to ease periodic pain.

Dentists To Aid In School Health Program

Five Chilton County dentists have volunteered their services in a program of dental inspection of elementary school children in the County under the sponsorship of the local Health Department, accorling to a report issued this week. The object of the program is to provide a free dental examination for every elementary school child. Parents are to be notified of the corrections needed on special forms supplied by the State Health Department. The dentists will be assisted by the County Health Nurse. Classroom health talks on oral hygiene are to be an important phase of the program.

Local dentists who are to participate include Drs. J. F. Edgar, J. E. Gowan, J. E. Gowan, Jr. of Clanton; H. M. Nix of Maplesville, and A. A. Conway of Jemison.

The County Health Officer declared that this step would prove of great benefit to the school children of the County provided parents will give their cooperation. "Little or no good will be accomplished," he stated, "if parents fail to follow-up the advice give in the notice brought home by the child. Because the tooth involved is a temporary tooth in many cases, they (the parents) may be prone to think that a visit to the dentist is not needed. The folly of such an attitude has been proven over and over again."

The need for a free dental clinic to provide dental care for children of poor families was pointed to by the local Health Officer. With 60 per cent of Chilton County's children manifesting some type of dental defect many are financially unable to do anything about it. "To whom can these turn for help," asks Dr. Sturkie. "It is my sincere hope," he added, "that those who appropriate for the welfare of the people will sometimes see fit to make such a clinic possible here"

We Observe

By BONNIE HAND

Judge Now—
Well, it's "Judge" Raymond Mims now. This column salutes Raymond. It's a case of 'local boy makes good,' for Chilton voters have selected a fine local young man as it's first Inferior Law Court Judge.

Whew!—
Boy, are we tired. Wonder if J. E. Easterling has as much trouble keeping up with Chilton's money as we had getting it into type. But it's all there all accounted for, and a nice balance in the treasury, don't you think?

Dangerous—
We've always had a horror of passing a bicycle on the road or streets. You can never tell which way their erratic zigging and zagging will carry them, and we think, although you may not agree, a congested highway and street is a dangerous place for a cyclist. Be careful, boys and girls.

* * *

Just One Look—
Just one peep into the show window at Murray-Bell Hardware and you start thinking about cleaning up the old trusty. Jimmie Bell knows how to arrange a hunting display that catches the eye.

At The Dixie—
We just naturally like the looks of Melvin Mims at the Dixie Cafe. First he's out, then he's in, but the Dixie is well, just more like the Dixie when Melvin is manager.

* * *

On Down The Street—
Clanton sure has sprouted a fine crop of young business men. There's Chick Fiquette dishing out groceries as owner of one of Clanton's leading grocery stores. Chick's doing all right.

* * *

Time Passing—
But maybe we're just getting on up in the years with these fellows. Why, did you know that we can remember when our new Inferior Court Judge wore knee breeches?

MISS JONES BECOMES BRIDE OF MR. RUFF OCTOBER 15

Of interest in Clanton is the wedding of Miss Margie Nell Jones and Rev. James Allen Ruff, which took place at 5:00 P.M. Sunday, October 15, in the First Baptist Church of Clanton.

The Church was impressively decorated with beautiful simplicity and dignity. The altar was made of a pyramid of ferns, palms, and caladiums. Tall, white baskets of pink gladioli were used on eithe rside with one of pink dahlias in the center.

The scene was illuminated by many burning tapers in branched candelabra. The Rev. G. G. Williams, who read the vows, using the ring ceremony, was assisted by the Rev. Oscar A. Davis, pastor of the Church.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, Jesse C. Jones, wore radiant white satin made on princess lines. The sleeves were puffed at the shoulder and fitted closely at the wrist in a point. She wore a veil of bridal illusion and carried a bouquet of white gladioli, snapdragons and tube roses.

The bride had as her only attendant, her hister Mrs. Maurice Hodgens, as matron of honor. She wore pink satin made with tight-fitting bodice and full skirt. Her corsage was made of pink snapdragons.

The groom had as his best man one of the outstanding young ministers of the county, the Rev. Maurice Hodgens. The ushers were Mr. Dolphin and Delphin Popwell.

Mr. Ralph rendered two selections "All For You," and "I Love You Truly," with Mrs. Fred Dunlap at the organ.

The bride was graduated from Chilton County High School and was an honor student at Alabama College, Montevallo. The groom attended Eldridge Baptist Academy and Howard College. He is now pastor of the Second Baptist Church of Clanton.

After a short wedding trip to points in North Alabama Rev. and Mrs. Ruff will make their home in Clanton.

RAYMOND MIMS ELECTED JUDGE INFERIOR COURT

UNOFFICIAL RETURNS GIVE HIM SMALL MAJORITY OVER A. B. FOSHEE IN ELECTION TUES.

Unofficial returns in Tuesday's special election to name a judge for Chilton County's new Inferior Law Court showed Raymond Mims, Clanton attorney, leading his nearest opponent, A. B. Foshee, by a majority of near 100 votes.

Latest count of the election showed the following:

J. A. Atkinson, 256.
A. B. Foshee, 899.
Raymond P. Mims, 1003.

Although no political emblem appeared on the ballots, Mr. Mims was the sole Republican in the race, while Mr. Foshee and Mr. Atkinson are Democrats.

Chilton's new Inferior Court Judge is the son of J. Z. Mims of Clanton, for several years a leader in the Republican party in Chilton County, and former Circuit Clerk. Young Mims has practiced law in Clanton and Tuscaloosa since finishing law school. He will take office in the near future.

This Inferior Court was created by the recent session of the Alabama Legislature. The bill was introduced and passed by Senator Karl Harrison and Representative Percy Pitts.

OFFICERS SEIZE STOLEN AUTO AND THIEF

LOCAL HIGHWAY PATROLMEN NAB CAR AND ARREST NEGRO THIEF TUESDAY NIGHT

A stolen automobile was seized by local Highway Patrolmen Isenhower and Ellis just north of the main section of the City last Tuesday evening at about 7:30, and shortly thereafter a negro giving his name as Leroy Curtis of Parrish, Tenn., was arrested and placed in the Chilton County Jail charged with the theft.

The auto, a 1937 Plymouth coupe, was stolen from downtown Birmingham Tuesday afternoon about 5:00 o'clock, the Patrolmen stated, and was the property of Miss Berniece Bartells, of Route 6, Box 304, Birmingham, who stated her car was stolen from the streets while she was at her work.

On being notified to be on the lookout for the car, Patrolmen Ellis and Isenhower found the car after it had been abandoned just north of the City, and were told by witnesses that a negro man had abandoned the car after it had run out of gas. He made his getaway but good work on the part of the Patrolmen and City officers Willis and Plyler landed him in jail shortly thereafter. The negro made the fatal mistake of trying to thumb a ride from the Patrolmen just south of the City. He was picked up and is said to have confessed to the theft of the car. He is being held in the jail the car. Birmingham officers took the Negro into custody Wednesday.

Gragg Calls Meeting Of Fair Association

"Editor, Chilton County News:

"Who is rellay interested in the future of the Chilton County Fair?

"I am calling a meeting of the present directors and hereby inviting others from every section of the county who may be interested, to be present.

"Only a few have taken a leading part in the fair for the last three years, but they have brought it up from a near 'town-lot' carnival to one of the best County Fairs in the State. We think it time for more of our farmers and business men to join in and make the Fair 'Bigger and Better' year by year.

"I think new officers, at least a president, should be elected.

"Come to J. Mell Martin's office Thursday, November 2, at 2:30 P.M., if interested If not interested, this will probably settle the future of the Fair.

"Yours respectfully,
"V. J. GRAGG,
President"

Navy Day Will Be Observed

Members of the Clanton Kiwanis Club will observe Navy Day when they meet tonight for their regular weekly luncheon. A speaker from the Naval Air Station in Pensacola, Fla., will be on hand to address the group.

This speaker, whose name was not secured by the writer, will fly to Clanton and land at the local airport this afternoon where he will be greeted by a delegation of Kiwanians and perhaps other leading citizens of the city.

Last Thursday evening Kiwanian Homer Roberts had charge of the program for the evening and his theme of "Industrial Developments In Central Alabama' was well received by the goodly number in attendance. Kiwanian Roberts is superintendent of the local unit of Alabama Mills and he pointed out many interesting facts about the part small industries are playing in Alabama, and Chilton County. A greater need for these industries was stressed by Kiwanian Roberts Following his talk the Club adjourned to the Alabama Mills where Kiwanian Roberts conducted a tour of the mill, which was greatly enjoyed by the group.

WRECKS SEND SEVERAL TO HOSPITAL

LOCAL RESIDENTS AND BIRMINGHAM PEOPLE SUSTAIN INJURIES DURING WEEK

Auto wrecks during the past week in and near Clanton sent several people to the Central Alabama Hospital here for medical treatment.

Mr and Mrs. G. O. Foshee, Mrs. Henry Teel and Mr Archie Mahan, all of Clanton, were painfully cut and bruised as the result of an automobile accident in Clanton late Saturday afternoon.

The cars driven by Mr. Foshee and Mr. Mahan collided at the corner near the home of J. Watts Moore late Saturday afternoon Mr Mahan was on his way to town and Mr. Foshee was driving north at the time of the accident, it is understood.

Mrs Teel was [illegible] to the clinic of Dr C. O Lawrence and Mr Mahan was rushed to the Central Alabama Hospital. Neither Mrs. [illegible] nor Mr Mahan suffered [illegible] injuries and Mr Mahan was [illegible] the following morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Foshee were severely bruised and Mrs. Foshee is suffering a painful cut over the eye.

A wreck one mile north of Clanton on the Birmingham-Montgomery Highway late Saturday night landed five Birmingham people in the hospital. Their names were not revealed. Two of the occupants of a Packard automobile are still confined in the hospital, where their injuries are judged painful.

The wreck occurred when the Packard and another auto sideswiped each other and the Packard overturned, afstriking a telephone pole and completely severed the pole about six feet from the ground. A freak of this accident was that the front bumper of the car was hooked over the stump of the pole and had to be removed to detach the car.
